Blast Delay Refused; 11th Hour Protests

Amchitka Test Readied —Weather 'Acceptable'

AMCHITKA, Alaska (UPI) — Technicians went through the final preparations for firing the biggest U.S. underground nuclear blast Saturday after the supreme court refused to order a delay. As the blast hour neared, tens of thousands of persons in the United States, Canada and Japan protested against the test. Environmentalists feared the blast would touch off an earthquake or tidal wave and harm fish and birdlife.

The weather was "acceptable" for detonation of the five-megaton Spartan warhead, with 25 to 30 mile an hour winds buffeting the bleak island which is the site of the test with the code name Cannikin.

Atomic Energy Commission officials said "everything is going smoothly" in preparation for the blast, which was set for 11 a.m. Bering sea time (2 p.m. PST).

They said the countdown could be stopped or delayed at any time within a split second of detonation of the warhead at the bottom of a mile-deep shaft.

Technicians and construction workers battled 100 m.p.h. winds, fog and rain Friday to put the last of 5,600 tons of gravel and sand into the 53-inch diameter bomb shaft. They sealed it with plastic plugs, then most of them were flown off the island.

They left behind about 225 persons, including AEC Chairman James R. Schlesinger, his wife, Rachel, and two of their young daughters.

The $200 million test of the warhead for the controversial Spartan anti-ballistic bomb had the explosive power of five million tons of TNT—250 times as powerful as the atomic bomb that destroyed Hiroshima during World War II.

With court approval and acceptable weather, AEC technicians on the island hewed to a lengthy schedule of preparation procedures with a five-man "arming party" making the final connections between the buried bomb and the control bunker 23 miles away.

The party had to leave Ground Zero about an hour before the AEC's final 15-minute, computer-controlled countdown began.

All personnel on the island were assigned to the underground bunker or to special control posts during the blast.

The arming of the nuclear warhead was programmed to start five minutes before the blast. The arming took two minutes.

Two television cameras were set up 3,000 and 12,000 feet from the flat knoll about 200 feet above sea level where the bomb shaft was dug.

The Cannikin emplacement was about a mile from the Bering Sea and two miles from the Pacific Ocean on this Aleutian island 1,200 miles southwest of Anchorage.

The post-blast priority list called for first recovering technical data such as tapes and film to determine if the test was a success or failure.

If the detonation had been cancelled, the bomb would have been destroyed by means of conventional explosives buried within the bomb shaft without causing a nuclear blast.

The underground hydrogen bomb test brought protests from throughout the world.

In Tokyo, the Metropolitan government put all floodgate operators on emergency alert in case of a tidal wave. Civil defense authorities in Hawaii activated emergency headquarters in Diamond Head crater and instructed citizens to review tidal wave evacuation procedures, but said they did not expect one.

The Supreme Court, in a 4-3 decision, refused to order a delay in the test. The majority —Justices Warren E. Burger,

A Call For Preserving Lagoon Area

The preservation of wildlife and restrictions on visitors were urged last night at a hearing on a county development plan for Bolinas Lagoon.

Nearly 100 persons attended the meeting at the Bolinas Community Center to tell Pierre W. Joske, director of the Marin County Parks and Recreation Department, that lagoon development should be kept to an absolute minimum.

Theresa Barker, parks and recreation commission secretary, said the group was unified in its belief that no development should be planned that would attract visitors to the lagoon area.

She said Robert Tartaul of the Sierra Club urged that all possible avenues be exhausted for development of a plan expressly designed to protect wildlife of the lagoon.

Bolinas residents spoke against plans for parking areas and observation points, they would encourage more automobile and foot traffic in the lagoon area and ultimately damage the environment.

The plan calls for observation points and nature interpretation centers as the only major development for the lagoon. Motor boats would be allowed only from the mouth of the lagoon to the existing dock area on the Bolinas side.

The plan recommends that Wharf Road become a pedestrian way during times of heavy use, permitting automobile access for residents only. Public parking would be provided near the entrance to the village.

The plan also calls for an ecological reserve status for all tidal areas of the lagoon so that strict control can be maintained over all shoreline development.

The next public hearing on the plan will be held Nov. 15 at 8 p.m. at the Stinson Beach Community Center.

NOVATO HIGH CINCHES MCAL TITLE TIE

Novato High School defeated host Redwood, 21-15, yesterday to win a share of the Marin County Athletic League Football title.

In the other MCAL contest yesterday, San Rafael beat Drake, 57-0.

Tamalpais and San Marin tangled at Novato High in the lone league game today, while Terra Linda hosts St. Ignatius of San Francisco tonight at 8 o'clock on the San Rafael High School field.

Demo Reapportion Plan Temporarily Sidetracked

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — Republicans and dissatisfied Democrats have sidetracked and temporarily neutralized a Democratic-sponsored state Senate redistricting plan opposed by Gov. Ronald Reagan.

Democratic leaders Friday shelved their proposal for the time being in the face of a Republican threat to scrap it entirely and replace it with a GOP-drafted alternative.

Democrats outnumber Republicans 21-19 in the Senate but were handicapped by two colleagues who indicated they would support the Republicans and by the absence of two vacationing Democrats.

The decision to place the plan on the Senate "inactive file" followed a partisan collision on the floor marked by bitter personal exchanges. While the bill slumbers in limbo, both sides said they will attempt to negotiate further and reach a compromise settlement next week.

Sen. John Harmer, R-Glendale, GOP caucus chairman, triggered the floor fight when he proposed amendments that would rewrite the bill, including the striking of Democratic Sen. Mervyn Dymally's name as author.

Senate leader James R. Mills, D-San Diego, announced that the Democratic leaders were so intent on protecting their plan that he would keep the Senate in session all weekend, if necessary.

This would give Democrats the opportunity to recall vacationing Sens. Albert Rodda of Sacramento and Stephen P. Teale of Railroad Flat. Rodda is in England while Teale was reported returning home from a trip to the South.

Two Democrats, Lawrence Walsh of Huntington Park and James Wedworth of Hawthorne, were prepared to vote for the Republican plan, Democrats said privately.

This would have given the Republican 18 votes to the Democrats' 18 and enable Republican Lt. Gov. Ed Reinecke to cast the tie-breaking vote to amend the GOP plan into the Democratic bill. Any amended bill still would require 21 votes for final passage, however.

Walsh's district was proposed to be redrawn to make room for a Chicano district. Wedworth has objected to moving his district into part of Republican-oriented Orange County.

"This is totally undemocratic, completely unorthodox and discrimination in reverse," Walsh protested in a floor speech. "My district has been gutted and chopped up in order to make way for an ethnic group. I don't even think my house is in my district."

Harmer's plan would throw Republican Sens. Milton Marks of San Francisco and Peter Behr of San Rafael into the same district, meaning they would oppose each other in an election contest.

The north must surrender one Senate seat to the south because of the greater population growth in the south. That seat would be shifted to Orange County.

The district of Democrat David Roberti of Los Angeles would be placed into an area where Chicanos constitute 65 per cent of the population and 38 per cent of the voters. This would give Mexican-Americans a shot at his seat in 1974.

Dymally accused Harmer of failing to notify him in advance of the attempt to amend his bill and charged him with "trying to sneak amendments into the bill."

"This is a good example of the bad faith in which Senate reapportionment has been negotiated," Dymally said of the GOP side while insisting Democrats negotiated in "good faith."

Harmer replied, "There are amendments here for one rea-

Housewife Slain In New Belfast Unrest

BELFAST, Northern Ireland (UPI) — British troops exchanged gunfire with snipers Friday night and today in Londonderry in skirmishes that killed a 40-year-old housewife.

An Army spokesman said Kathleen Thompson, 40, a mother of five, was banging a trash can lid to warn neighbors of the approach of troops when she was caught in crossfire.

She was killed shortly after a sniper in the Roman Catholic Andersontown area of Belfast "very seriously wounded" an off-duty Army major driving toward Army headquarters with his wife, the spokesman said. He was shot out of uniform.

In Belfast, bomb explosions damaged a number of stores in the city during the morning, an army spokesman said.

The explosion damaged five stores in a shopping arcade in the North Street area of central Belfast, the spokesman said.

Soon after the North Street explosion, two other blasts damaged an agricultural showroom near city hall and offices on Franklin Street, the spokesman said.

There were no reports of casualties, the spokesman said.

The Londonderry gun duels grew out of a series of spot raids by Army units on houses in the Creggan Estate in search of alleged leaders of the Irish Republican Army (IRA) no arrests were made.

The IRA claims responsibility for most of the continuing violence between Northern Ireland's protestant majority and Roman Catholic minority.

Its avowed aim is to wrest the north from British control and unite it with the largely Roman Catholic Irish Republic to the south.

Earlier Friday, Premier Brian Faulkner dismissed as "a lunatic assumption" predictions that Britain is about to impose direct rule on Northern Ireland's six counties. He also rejected a suggestion an "Ulster minister" in London might take over some of the powers of his government.

He also denied fighting between protestants and Roman Catholics, which has killed at least 112 persons in Northern Ireland this year, was a religious conflict.

"It is religious only in the sense that it involved a certain degree of group identification and historical association," he said.

Later in the evening a bomb hurled from a speeding automobile exploded at a Royal Navy recruiting office in Belfast, slightly injuring a couple and their four children passing in another car, the Army said.

Historic Old Hotel Burns Down

The nearly century-old Marshall Hotel, a haven through the years for a mixed assembly of rum runners, casual weekend visitors and the Bay Area elite, was destroyed by fire last night.

The structure, built in 1878, was consumed in flame about 11 p.m. despite the efforts of eight county fire units and a fire truck from nearby Synanon.

Twenty-five guests staying at the hotel, located on Shoreline Highway, were routed, all escaping injury. Damage was estimated at $95,000.

Firemen said the blaze apparently started in one of the hotel's 14 ornately decorated rooms.

Until last night, the hotel, owned by Thomas Quinn, who once described himself as a "fat, jolly, whimsical innkeeper," seemed indestructible. It survived an 1897 blaze, reopening two years later, and in 1906, the earthquake sent the two-story hotel reeling into Tomales Bay, but it rebounded from that disaster, too.

Overnight guests and tavern patrons were attracted by the hotel's elegant Victorian decor, including brass beds kept highly polished.

During the early part of this century, the North Pacific Coast Railroad emptied passengers virtually at the hotel's door, and visitors dined on continental breakfasts and herring dinners at 50 cents a plate.

Bootleg liquor, brought by boat during Prohibition, was delivered to the hotel through a trap door and stored for later delivery to San Francisco.

One of its former owners is ex-Marin Supervisor Thomas T. Storer, who opened for business in 1969 with a "63rd Anniversary of the Earthquake Party."

An attached pier that jutted into the bay was a popular spot for fishermen.

Prisoners Riot In Los Angeles

LOS ANGELES (UPI)—Prisoners in the 11th floor cellblock at the Hall of Justice refused to return to their cells after breakfast today and began setting small fires and demonstrating against jail conditions.

A sheriff's spokesman said there were about 150 prisoners in the cell block and most were participating in the demonstration.

There were no reports of hostages or injuries and deputies predicted the situation would be under control.

Laird's Vow On Viet GIs

SAIGON (UPI)—Defense Secretary Melvin R. Laird said today that as long as there are American military technicians and advisers in Vietnam, there will be American fighting men to protect them.

Laird completed a three-day inspection visit to the war zone and said, "I don't want anybody to think for one minute that when we have artillery and we have air and logistics (supply) forces here that we will not have security forces here," Laird said. "They will carry on combat operations."

Asked about the possibility of further war prisoner exchanges such as the one last month involving S. Sgt. John Sexton for a North Vietnamese Lieutenant, Laird said this appears to be progressing but declined to elaborate.

"I do not think it is a good idea to get into a public discussion at this time on some of the avenues that are going forward on this subject," he said.

Laird has been in Vietnam looking into the progress of the Nixon administration's Vietnamization program. He will report his findings to President Nixon before Nixon makes his next speech about Nov. 15.

Laird indicated he would give Nixon a favorable progress report. He said troop withdrawals now being carried out will more than meet the President's goal of getting down to 184,000 men by Dec. 1. There were 543,400 GIs in Vietnam in April of 1969.

"We will meet and beat the Dec. 1 goal of 184,000 men," Laird said. And with Christmas period coming on, additional personnel will, of course, be returned to the United States."

Laird said he was confident that Congress will restore the foreign aid cut last week by the Senate including the full $549 million this year for aid to Vietnam.

He declined to be drawn into

State's Jobless Rate In Decline

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — California's unemployment rate declined slightly from 7.1 per cent in September to 7 per cent in October, but remained above the national average of 5.2 per cent, Reagan administration figures show.

The state Department of Human Resources Development said Friday that this year's figures are lower than the 7.2 per cent rate during October 1970.

The national average for October was 5.8 per cent, a decline from 6 per cent in September.

Sigurd I. Hansen, director of Human Resources Development, said October was the first time since July 1969 that the unemployment rate fell below the figure for the same month in the previous year.

Hansen said the number of unemployed persons fell by 24,000 between September and October to 489,000. This was 19,000 fewer than in October 1970.

Hansen said the year-to-year drop in the unemployment rate "may be an indication that the upward trend (in unemployment) has stopped."

"Month-to-month figures may fluctuate because of variations connected with strikes and other unforeseen factors," Hansen said. "The 12-month figures offer us a better comparison."

He said the largest drop in jobs during the past 12 months had been in manufacturing while job losses in the aerospace industry accounted for most of the decrease.

"But the aerospace complex has turned around in recent months," Hansen said, "with an additional 2,300 employed in October, 1,300 in September and 2,400 in August."

Hansen said 439,900 persons are currently employed by the aerospace industry.

Here is an area-by-area breakdown of unemployment rates:

Los Angeles-Long Beach, 6.7 per cent, down from 6.8; San Francisco-Oakland, 6.1 per cent, down from 6.5; Anaheim-Santa Ana-Garden Grove, 6.6 per cent, down from 7 per cent; San Diego, 6 per cent, up from 5.8 per cent; San Jose, 6.0 per cent, down from 6.7; San Bernardino-Riverside-Ontario, 6.4 per cent, down from 6.7; Sacramento, unchanged at 6.3 per cent; Fresno, 7.3 per cent, down from 7.5; Bakersfield, 6.3 per cent, up from 5.9; Oxnard-Ventura, 7.0 per cent, down from 7.5; Stockton, 8.9 per cent, down from 10.5; Santa Barbara, 5.8 per cent, down from 6.6 and Vallejo-Napa, 5.9 per cent, down from 6.9.

Reagan Blasts Democrat 'Myth'

SEATTLE (UPI)—The belief that the Democratic Party is the friend of the common man and the downtrodden is a myth that must be exposed, according to California Gov. Ronald Reagan.

He told Republicans at a Friday night fund-raising dinner that Democratic Administrations and congresses in the past have "pitted class against class, race against race, religion against religion ... until they have polarized us the way we have never been in our history."

Reagan blamed the Democrats for problems ranging from the war in Vietnam to the generation gap and said the Democrats aspiring to become President were wholly lacking in leadership at a time when the demands of the presidency were the greatest ever.

WIRE NEWS BRIEFS From Everywhere

Storm On Move

NEW DELHI (UPI)—The second cyclonic storm to rise out of the Bay of Bengal in eight days headed for East Pakistan today, veering away from India's devastated Orissa coastline.

The official death toll from a cyclone and tidal wave that struck the Orissa coast Oct. 29 and 30 rose to 9,315 Friday. The eventual toll was expected to exceed 10,000 when all isolated areas are reached, including portions of the Cuttack district where 9,000 deaths have been recorded so far, generally from the tidal wave.

A U.S. Air Force weather reconnaissance plane over the Bay of Bengal reported the fresh swirling storm carrying 70-mile-an-hour winds approached the East Pakistan coastline just east of the area ravaged last year by a record cyclone which left an official death toll of 70,000 and unofficial estimates of up to 200,000 killed.

Border Crossed

ROTENBURG, Germany (UPI)—Three young girls from East Germany managed what authorities on both sides of the Iron Curtain consider nearly impossible. They walked unharmed across the barbed wire fenced and mine-strewn border separating East and West Germany.

The girls, two sisters and their friend, all aged between 11 and 13, told authorities they "wanted to see a proper, large and well-stocked department store" in West Germany.

The children boarded a train near their home in Weimar, East Germany Friday and rode to a point just east of the border.

"They simply walked across the demarcation line," said a police spokesman.

Authorities took the girls to visit shops, which donated gifts to them then they were put on a train for home.

Market Meeting

BRACCIANO, Italy (UPI)—Foreign ministers of the six European Common Market charter nations and the four candidates for membership met today before a roaring log fire in a 13th century lakeside castle to chart future relations with the rest of the world.

The ministers journeyed 25 miles from Rome to the Odescalchi Castle in Bracciano, which dates from 1234, to resume the twice yearly foreign ministers' meeting and discussion of a possible political union of the economic bloc.

The ministers of Italy, France, West Germany, Belgium, the Netherlands and Luxembourg — who Friday agreed to call a summit of prime ministers as soon as possible — were joined by ministers of the four candidate countries, Britain, Denmark, Norway and Ireland for today's session.

Art Destroyed

MADRID (UPI)—Rightwing extremist youths Friday night held a museum guard at knifepoint and destroyed 24 works by exiled Spanish painter Pablo Picasso.

The youths splashed some of the paintings and engravings with acid and smashed others then scattered leaflets praising Generalissimo Francisco Franco.

The leaflets called Picasso a "Marxist, Communist party militant, anti-patriot, homosexual, pornographer and illegitimate child."

Tito's Concern

QUEBEC (UPI)—President Tito of Yugoslavia said Friday he shares Canada's concern over new U.S. economic policies which he said have also hurt his country.

"I refer particularly to the surcharge on imports," he said in Ottawa. "Canada, of course, is suffering much more from this because it has so much more developed economic relations with the United States." Tito was to go to Halifax, N.S., today on the last stop of his five-day visit. He will attend a state dinner and receive an honorary doctor of laws degree from Dalhousie University. He returns home Sunday.

Party Crashers

WASHINGTON (UPI) —A young man and woman, reportedly protesting Soviet treatment of Jews, crashed a party at the Russian Embassy Friday night and handcuffed themselves to a bannister.

Officers of the Executive Protective Agency quickly snipped the handcuffs and arrested the pair on a charge of disorderly conduct.

The two were identified by police as Gordon E. Rayfield, 21, and Miss Terri Green, also 21. A Jewish Defense League spokesman said the pair was protesting alleged persecution of Jews in the Soviet Union.

'KNEE KNOCKER' — Deputy fires his 'knee knocker,' a weapon which dispenses wooden pellets, at fleeing youths during a disturbance in Columbus, Ohio, triggered by a drug arrest near Ohio State University late last night.

A Drug Arrest— Ohio Youths Riot

COLUMBUS, Ohio (UPI)—More than 1,000 youths hurled rocks and bricks at police today in a melee touched off by a drug arrest near the Ohio State University campus. Police used tear gas to disperse the crowd.

More than 130 persons were arrested and at least 37 persons, seven of them policemen, were injured. Spokesmen at University Hospital said the injuries were minor.

Police Capt. Donald Bryant said most of those arrested were charged with failing to disperse from a riot situation. Hearings were scheduled Monday for those who posted the required $25 bond.

Bryant said about 150 policemen and Franklin County sheriff's deputies were sent to North High Street, a street that runs parallel to the east edge of the giant campus, after the arrest was made. It took police about 4 1-2 hours to restore order.

Bryant said two officers saw a drug sale being made in the area of a hamburger stand Friday night and arrested a suspect.

"A crowd began to form and the officers took the suspect from the area," he said. "At that same time we ordered all marked cars from the location.

"The crowd continued to grow." "And then the kids began to break windows and destroy property. That's when we moved in our men with riot equipment."

Bryant said tear gas and "knee knockers"—wooden pellets fired from shotguns—were used to disperse the large crowd which at one point sought escape from the police in the OSU student union.

Police, hesitant to enter state property, finally rushed the building and made several arrests.

Police Chief Dwight Joseph termed the police entry onto state property "strictly a defensive action."

"We were getting hit by bricks and I wasn't going to let them seek sanctuary there or at any church, either," Joseph said.

Bryant said more than 50 persons were jailed at city prison in police headquarters. Sheriff Stacy Hall said more than 80 persons were brought to the county prison after the city facility was filled to capacity.

Injuries Minor

April Berg, 17, of 30 Terry Road, San Anselmo, was treated at Marin General Hospital for leg bruises suffered in a car-bicycle collision yesterday at 12:25 p.m. in San Anselmo. Police had no details on the accident.

Girl Torture-Slaying — Man, Woman Held

HOWELL, Mich. (UPI)—Two young persons have been charged with first-degree murder in the torture-slaying of a runaway girl which authorities said occurred in the presence of about a dozen youths.

Raymond Humbel, 22, and Janet Lee Musser, 17, were arrested by state police troopers in Flint Friday and brought here under warrants issued by Livingston County prosecutor Thomas Kizer Jr. They were arraigned Friday night before district Judge Richard R. Robinson and ordered held without bond in the county jail.

Four juveniles also were held for questioning in the slaying.

Authorities would neither confirm or deny a report that Humbel, Miss Musser and others allegedly present when the slaying occurred were members of a cult called "Satan's Satanic Servants."

Humbel and Miss Musser were charged in the death of Kathleen Ann Gilbert, 17, also of Flint, whose nude and partially decomposed body was found in a wooded marsh about 10 miles north of here Thursday.

Kizer said that although the exact day the slaying occurred had not been determined, it was known that the body had been there for at least three weeks.

Detective Sgt. Vince Demsky of the state police post at nearby Brighton, which is handling the case, said Miss Gilbert, a runaway from the girls training school in Adrian, had been beaten, stabbed and shot. An autopsy showed she died of stab wounds.

Kizer placed the number of youths present when the slaqing occurred "in the vicinity of 12, give or take several either way," but would not reveal any details of the incident itself.

Conviction In Youth Shooting

OAKLAND (UPI) —Artist William S. Walker of Berkeley was convicted Friday on a charge of manslaughter in the shooting of a youth he saw taking a television set from a neighbor's home.

Alameda County Superior Court Judge John S. Cooper set Dec. 1 for sentencing.

Van Allison Holt, 16, was killed Jan. 24, 1970, in a driveway.

City Goes To Court To Clean Up Street

The City of Mill Valley went to court yesterday to clean up the Miller Avenue slide.

In a petition filed in Marin Superior Court by Deputy City Atty. Philip A. Torre, the city sought: a court order to allow city employees or agents access to the property to clear loose material that might touch off another slide; to force the owners of two parcels of property to abate the original slide, and to award the city $50,000 in damages for inconvenience and expense since the January 1969 slide.

That slide has kept a portion of Miller Avenue closed for almost three years and the property presents "a continuous threat and hazard of additional slide material being deposited on Miller Avenue," according to the city's petition.

Named as defendants in the action are Malinda Rowe-Beddoe, Henry T. Gunderson and Jospeh A. and Mary B. Moore. Mrs. Rowe-Beddoe and Gunderson are named as "owners or reputed owners" of the property on which the 1969 slide "appears to have originated."

The Moores, according to the petition, are owners of an adjacent parcel of property over which they have refused to allow Mill Valley crews to cross to do slide repair work.

The slide, termed a "dangerous and hazardous condition," was declared a public nuisance and ordered abated within 60 days by the Mill Valley City Council on July 19. The owners have failed to abate it, according to the petition.

The council also directed city officials to remove unstable material from the slide area and to extend the present fence around the area another 40 feet — action which has not been accomplished, according to the city's petition, because of the refusal of the Moores to allow city crews on their property.

Judge Henry J. Broderick yesterday ordered all of the property owners not to interfere with city crews seeking access to the slide area, and set a hearing for 9 a.m. Nov. 16 before Judge Samuel W. Gardiner for the defendants to show why the city's other requests should not be granted.

Auction Nets $4,500 For Petaluman

A two-week radio auction has raised $4,546 to benefit the Robbie Sturla fund in Petaluma.

Sturla, 15, has been paralyzed since suffering a neck injury during a practice football game Sept. 14 at St. Vincent's High School, Petaluma. The youth left Hillcrest Hospital Tuesday for the Santa Clara Rehabilitation Center at San Jose, where costs may range as high as $6,000 per month for treatment.

Agnes McGilvra, owner of radio station KTOB, reported that $4,546 was raised in the auction during the past two weeks. On several days more than $900 was raised in the one-hour auction period beginning at 8:05 a.m.

The auction is scheduled to continue through next Friday, with a sailboat, fur coat, silver and livestock among items scheduled to go on the auction block.

Michael Gonzalez, athletic director at the school, estimated that nearly $8,000 had been raised for the fund through the auction, other fund-raising events and outright contributions ranging from $2 to $100.

A spaghetti dinner to benefit the fund will be held tomorrow from noon to 7 p.m. at the school. Entertainment will include the state championship Petaluma Police Assistance League junior girls drill team at 5:30 p.m. and local singers.

Gonzalez said all proceeds from the school's homecoming game on Nov. 13 also will go to the fund.

Three Tam Art Students Win

Three Tamalpais High School students won top awards yesterday at an art and film festival at the Jack Tar Hotel in San Francisco.

Student work from high schools in six counties was entered in the contest, sponsored by KYA radio of San Francisco.

Diane Gower, a senior from Mill Valley, won the second award with an ink drawing and received a two-year scholarship to the Academy of Arts in San Francisco valued at $2,400.

Carl Willat, also a senior from Mill Valley, received the first award for an antimated film entitled, "George Washington at Valley Forge."

Olivia Scott, a junior, won an honorable mention award for a pencil drawing.

Service Area In Greenbrae Urged

The Greenbrae Property Owners Association has requested the county to create a service area in the unincorporated section of the community.

According to a petition filed Thursday with the Marin County Local Agency Formation Commission, the county service area would tax for maintenance and landscaping of public areas in Greenbrae.

Those areas primarily are landscaped road medians and entrances to the residental neighborhood.

The area proposed for the service area is north of Sir Francis Drake Boulevard and between Manor Road on the west and Via La Cumbre on the east.

The Local Agency Formation Commission has not set a date for a hearing on the proposal.

Responsibility for community maintenance was passed to the property owners association last year by Schultz Development Co., developers of Greenbrae.

At the time of the transfer, the property owners considered forming a service area but decided to attempt first to finance maintenance and landscaping through their association.

A county service area differs from a service district in that it is simply a taxing agent under the jurisdiction of the county board of supervisors.

The service district, on the other hand, is a form of community government with elected officials.

Student Found Dead In Room

A 25-year-old pharmacology student was found dead yesterday in his room in Mill Valley.

The Marin County Coroner's office reported Durel Evans Carpenter apparently had succumbed from an overdose of drugs in his room at 99 Del Caso Drive.

Carpenter was a student at the University of California Medical Center where he had a scholarship to study pharmacology and worked as an intern.

The coroner's office said he was found in his room at 3:30 p.m. by his landlady, Mrs. Ernest A. Brymer. A note was found indicating general despondency.

He was the son of Bernard Carpenter of Chino. Funeral arrangements were pending today at Russell and Gooch Mortuary, Mill Valley.

Guest Speaker

Rev. Dennis J. Bennett, leader of the charismatic movement in Seattle, will be guest speaker at the 8 p.m. service Wednesday at Holy Innocent's Episcopal Parish in Corte Madera.

Novato's Youth Cites Its Needs

The City of Novato's youth advisory committee has cited a need for more commercial recreational facilities and youth-oriented businesses in the community.

City Mgr. Charles A. Brown said the desires were outlined by the group, composed of junior and senior high school students, at a meeting Thursday night. Junior high representatives asked for facilities such as a roller skating rink, bowling alley, a cycle track and bicycle rental; more city recreational activities such as youth dances, nature walks and drop-in sports; community discussions on ecology, the war, environment, drugs and racial discrimination, and called for more public interest in a youth commission and youth representation on city committees.

Senior high students deplored a lack of businesses such as a low-priced record store, new movie theater, clothing stores for youth, a dance hall and rental stores with teen-oriented items. They also asked for organized dances but with fewer restrictions.

Members of the committee will attend public meetings to get first-hand information on the workings of local government prior to their next meeting at 7 p.m. Nov. 18 at the Novato branch of the county library.

LANSING, Mich. (UPI) — Most Michigan children who die between the ages of one and 19 are killed violently, not by disease, reports State Public Health Director Maurice Reizen.

Check-Passing Plea Date Set

Dana Lyn Michaels, 19, no known address, has been arraigned in Marin Municipal Court on a charge of passing stolen checks.

She is to plead to the charge next Thursday.

She allegedly passed a check in a Mill Valley store Oct. 21. The check reportedly had been stolen the day before from Elizabeth W. Gage, owner of Lisa's Leathers in Mill Valley.

34 Degrees Given Out In Sonoma

Thirty-four Marin and Southern Sonoma students received degrees from Sonoma State College at the end of the summer session, according to president Thomas H. McGrath.

Local students earning master's degrees were Katherine Susan Jones Berman of Novato; Billie Blaine Brower, Jacqueline Edwards, Tula Rachel Jaffe, Stephen Laughlin and George E. Prydz of Cotati, and E. Ray Butler, Gloria Ann Gessaman, Ray F. Hubbell Jr. and Tresa Marks Sannella of Petaluma.

Students earning bachelor's degrees, listed by hometowns, were:

Cotati — Ronald G. Carner, Daniel N. Clayton, George J. Couch, Pamela S. Phelps.

Fairfax — Judith Darral Hallowitz and Roy D. Wolford.

Larkspur — Perry E. Hodgson.

Mill Valley — Karen L. Lloyd.

Novato — Ronald L. Baldwin, Gaylen S. Hunter, Virginia I. Onderdonk, Normajean Perry.

Petaluma — Diane Robb Balter, Beverly J. Bond, Peter C. Grace, Nick H. English, Gloria W. Johannsen, Arlene C. McKeown, Donald L. Watson, Yvonne A. Williams.

Rohnert Park — Kristin A. Barstad, James C. Park.

San Rafael — Daniel H. Chambers, Glenn D. Hawthorne.

Theft Suspects Plead Innocent

Two San Rafael men, Frank Dewey Haygood, 47, of 805 Fourth Street, and Richard Lee Miller, 32, of 1426 Lincoln Avenue, have pleaded innocent in Marin Superior Court to two counts of burglary.

Jury trial was set for the week of Dec. 6.

They are charged with burglaries of the Fleur de France restaurant, 720 B Street, San Rafael, on Oct. 4, and the Cellars Bar, 534 Third Street, San Rafael, on Sept. 30.

'Newhall Campaign Offices Ransacked

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI)— Scott Newhall not only lost the mayorality race, his campaign headquarters were ransacked.

Police said thieves took seven typewriters, three electric heaters, two alabaster sculptures and three cases of "Old Newhall," an expensive bourbon sold only in the city of Newhall, where the former newspaper executive's family resides.

Corte Madera Plan Gets Good Marks

The proposed Meadowsweet Station development, when fully built, could reduce Corte Madera's tax rate by 11 per cent despite increasing the town's population by 15 per cent.

In a generally favorable evaluation of the controversial townhouse plan, consultant Thomas Cooke of Sedway and Cooke of San Francisco said the 540 units proposed near the Koch luggage plant would increase the town's population by almost 1,500.

Protecting the new residents would require two new policemen and two new firemen at a cost of $62,000 a year, but the $24 million project would more than pay its own way, Cooke predicted.

His plan was submitted to the town in completed form Tuesday, just prior to a planning commission hearing on the development plan of Harter and Odenthal Investment Co. of Orinda.

Homeowners near the 73-acre site have fought the plan, saying the townhouses would be unattractive, cause traffic congention, increase taxes and ruin their uncrowded neighborhood.

While not speaking directly to the first and last points, Cooke's analysis refutes the other two arguments.

"The size of the project, housing type mix, and provision of recreation facilities as an integral part of the project indicate that it will not adversely affect the community's financial situation," Cooke said in his report.

He estimated the cluster development would increase the expenses of the town and the Corte Madera Sanitary District by $85,610, but would increase revenue by $146,155.

If expenses unrelated to the townhouses do not rise, the city and sanitary district could reduce their combined tax rate from $1.63 per $100 assessed valuation to about a $1.45, according to Cooke's figures.

Cooke does not say what effect the development will have on school taxes. Cooke recommends the children attend the closest schools, which are in the Reed School District, although the site is in the Mill Valley School District. The Reed district. The Reed district has scuttled the idea leaving it unclear where the children would be educated.

He said existing recreational facilities of the town would suffice because the planned development would have its own recreation areas.

Cooke also predicted existing sewage treatment facilities and streets could handle the increased load.

Although not a burden on man-made facilities, Cooke said the development could harm the environment if imporperly done. He recommended against steep excavations proposed by the developers and said the ridges around the development should be left untouched.

"The PUD (planned unit development), if developed in accordance with recommended provisions, will be a major step in promoting protection of the last remaining open land separating urban development in the southern part of Marin County," Cooke said.

Despite Cooke's generally favorable report of the project more than 125 persons who attended the Tuesday meeting of the planning commission continued to oppose the development.

The planners are scheduled to set another hearing on the issue at their regular meeting Monday.

Ferry Cost $408,000 For A Year

The Golden Gate Bridge District's Sausalito ferry, despite overwhelming popularity, nevertheless will cost the district $408,000 to run this year.

The reason for the heavy deficit, district officials said yesterday, was that the single ferry carries the same administrative and overhead costs that will be shared by other ferries when they are added to the fleet in 1973.

The district is planning to build three new 165-foot $2.5 million ferries to expand service to Corte Madera.

Stanley M. Kowieski, the district's ferry transit manager, predicted that 1.2 million passengers will ride the ferryboat this fiscal year, paying some $690,000 in fares. Taking only direct operating expenses of $474,500, the ferry will show a surplus of approximately $126,000, he said.

But when overhead and administrative costs are cranked in, the net result will be a deficit of $408,000 this year, Kowleski explained.

The district's consulting naval architect, Phillip Spaulding, has estimated originally that these operating costs would total $357,000, but that they had risen because of unexpected inflation and because of extra security and deck employees not planned by Spaulding, according to Kowleski.

District Seeks Panel Members

Residents of the Dixie School District are being sought by the board of trustees to serve on a 1971-72 Citizens Advisory Group, according to Supt. Clifford W. Campbell.

The committee will review district finances, study enrollment trends and assist in preparing and disseminating information in connection with the June 1972 election over whether the district should be unified with San Rafael.

Those interested in serving on the committee, who need not be parents of district students, may telephone the superintendent's office or any of the school principals.

Program Of Amigos To Be Explained

The Marin chapter of Amigos de las Americas — a group of youths trained to immunize rural villagers in Central and South American — will explain its program and seek recruits at a meeting in Ross Wednesday.

"Amigos" also have been responsible for nutrition, literacy, public health and community improvement programs.

Dr. Richard S. Hahn of Greenbrae, Amigo training director, will show slides at the meeting in St. John's Parish House at 7:30 p.m.

Amigos must be 16 years old as of Feb. 1, 1972 and have a knowledge of Spanish. Training is conducted after school.

The American Bible Society distributes more than 100 million Bibles and portions of Scripture annually.

Arguments Set On Abortion Law

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI)— The California Supreme Court has set all arguments on the constitutionality of the state's abortion law for Wednesday, Dec. 8.

The court will decide between two conflicting opinions of the law rendered by different districts of the state Court of Appeal.

The verdict in one appellate ruling held the California abortion law constitutional, the verdict in another district of the same court was that the law was unconstitutional.

The Supreme Court accepted appeals of both rulings.

The California abortion law became effective in 1968, but in January, 1970, a municipal judge in Santa Ana held the law unconstitutional and his opinion was upheld later by the Los Angeles district State Court of Appeal.

However, in August, this year, the State Appeallate Court in San Francisco ruled that all abortions in the state were legal if performed by a physician in a licensed hospital during the first 20 weeks of pregnancy.

The California law permits abortions in cases of rape, incest and danger to the mother's physical or mental health. The state Department of Health reported in August that 62,000 legal abortions had been performed up to that time as compared with 15,339 in 1969 and 5,030 in 1968 before the law became effective.

Year Of Chile's New Economics Shows Allende Reform Is Paying

SANTIAGO, Chile (UPI)—A Roman Catholic university economics professor said in a recent lecture that if the "new economics" of President Salvador Allende are successful, all classical and Marxist economic textbooks of the world will have to be rewritten.

For starters, Allende, who has just completed his first full calendar year in power must be the first Marxist chief of state to have initiated his administration by spurring consumerism.

His short-range policy has paid off. By the end of 1971, projections indicate, the industrial growth will have increased by 10 per cent; the Gross National Product by 6 to 8 per cent; and inflation on the official consumer index (which trails true inflation by an estimated 7 to 10 per cent) will have been held to a relatively low 18 per cent, compared with 35 per cent for 1970.

On the debit side of the ledger, falling copper prices and increased imports will have whittled net foreign exchange reserves to about $100 million, and this may portend future trouble. Allende inherited $335 million in net reserves when he took office Nov. 4, 1970.

A deep recession had begun in August, 1970, due to electoral nerves, and developed into a near panic with a short-lived bank run after Allende's narrow victory on Sept. 4. His first task was to revitalize the economy.

Economy Minister Pedro Vuskovic, an obscure Marxist economics professor, sparked the private sector with increased demand. This was achieved through a price freeze and mandatory New Year pay increase, especially for the lower income brackets.

By April, Chile's economy was perking at nearly full capacity.

Allende, who heads a "Popular Unity" coalition dominated by his own Socialists, who are doctrinaire Marxist-Leninists, and Communists, and including a smattering nonMarxist splinter groups, has stated his intention to socialize Chile.

He plans to nationalize 200 major firms to create the "social area" of the economy and all farms over 250 acres in size for conversion into peasant communes. Non-strategic enterprises of less than $500,000 capitalization would be left untouched. There is also a strong mixed (government-private) sector, which would be expanded.

Targeted for nationalization are banking and credit; all monopolies; strategic industries; foreign commerce; public utilities; major subsoil resources and the internal means of distribution.

In 1971, nationalization went faster then most observers expected. The textile industry (which weighs heavily in the official consumer index) has been taken over under depression era anti-lockout legislation. Following state-inspired labor agitation by Marxist-led copper unions, which produces 89 per cent of foreign earnings, has been nationalized along with coal and steel; 11 of 21 private banks and all five foreign banks will have been bought out by year's end.

The government expropriated 1,400 farms in 1970 and announced that it will complete the expropriatory phase of the agrarian reform in 1971 by taking 1,700 more.

The government is counting on the discipline of the Marxist-led labor unions to hold 1972 wage demands inside recommended guidelines, but this remains to be seen.

Man, Wife Are Bound Over

Paul A. Verdone, 24, and his wife, Janet, 22, both of San Anselmo, have been bound over to Marin Superior Court on charges of possessing marijuana and marijuana paraphernalia.

They are to be arraigned in superior court Nov. 22.

They were arrested Aug 2 after police were tipped that marijuana was growing in their bathroom.

Hearing On Rezoning Request Is Slated

SANTA ROSA — A hearing on a west Cotati rezoning request was set yesterday for Nov. 18 by the Sonoma County Planning Commission.

The 3:15 p.m. hearing will be on the request of Larry Johnson to rezone 1.10 acres to general business with parking at 707 Gravenstein Highway near Stony Point Road, Cotati.

Teacher Halt At Daly City Viewed

The Daley Cty teacher strike at school opening this fall was the result of a vote by a "small group of teachers" who attended a meeting last spring, a man who was in the middle of it told the San Rafael Parent-Teacher Council yesterday.

Fred Schweickhardt, principal of Westlake School in Jefferson Elementary School District, traced the strike's history at a meeting of the PTA group in the San Rafael City Schools administration building.

The first teacher resentment came over pay, he related. Two years ago, Jefferson teachers staged a "mini-strike," arbitrarily setting up a minimum school day and using the rest of the regular class periods to parade and explain their grievances. This, he said, won much sympathy from parents, but not from the district board.

The following year, the board failed to make good on a promise that any extra funds received would go to upgrade teacher salaries, according to Schweickhardt. This resulted in a two-day strike in 1970, which caused the board to relent and grant a collective bargaining contract (which the California Teachers Association calls a "master agreement") to the CTA-dominated certificated employees' council.

Later, acting on legal advice from the San Mateo county counsel's office, the Jefferson board resolved not to enter into such a contract for another year — several such contracts having been declared illegal by courts in Southern California.

Then came the meeting of the CTA local last spring — attended by only a few, according to Schweickhardt — at which the decision was made to strike when school opened to force the contract.

The strike failed. Less than half the teachers walked off the job. The schools operated with substitute teachers.

Schweickhardt said he felt the striking teachers were lucky to be given their jobs back after they abandoned the contract demand, "and they didn't get the contract."

Richard V. Godino, assistant Marin County counsel, described the exclusive bargaining contracts and school boards' objections to them. The latter, he said, are primarily that such a contract "takes away the power of the community and the school board it has elected" in operation of the schools.

"There is no proof of any sort that the education of the children is benefited in any way by a collective bargaining agreement," commented Godino.

Neal Brengle, president of the San Rafael Teachers Association (CTA), and Frank Wells, president of the Marin County Federation of Teachers (AFL-CIO), upheld the concept of collective bargaining contracts between teachers' organizations and school districts.

Schweickhardt and Brengle differed as to whether the Daly City strike was actively pushed by CTA as a "test case." Schweickhardt said it was; Brengle claimed it was purely the action of local teachers, with CTA forced to back it after the teachers walked out.

"I don't see any urging of CTA members to go for a strike or to go for a master agreement," Brengle said.

(Such "master agreement" contracts have been declared a major goal of the National Education Association, CTA's parent body. A bill providing for them was introduced on CTA's behalf in this year's legislature, but was killed in committee.)

Work Order In Petty Theft Case

Paul Joseph Clausen, 19, of Novato, has been ordered to work five days for the Marin County Parks and Recreation Department as a result of a petty theft conviction.

Judge Robert A. Smallman of Marin Municipal Court sentenced Clausen on the misdemeanor charge.

Following Clausen's plea, a misdemeanor charge that he possessed marijuana was dismissed at the request of the district attorney's office.

Richard V. Godino, assistant Marin County counsel, described the exclusive bargaining contracts and school boards' objections to them. The latter, he said, are primarily that such a contract "takes away the power of the community and the school board it has elected" in operation of the schools.

"There is no proof of any sort that the education of the children is benefited in any way by a collective bargaining agreement," commented Godino.

Two Girls, 11, Set Brush Fire

San Rafael police say they have implicated two 11-year-old girls in a hillside fire that burned 900 square feet of grass and brush at Butternut and Mahogany roads Thursday.

The blaze was put out at 5:15 p.m. by San Rafael and Marin County firemen after it was started by the youngsters playing with matches. Four other youngsters playing on the hill tried unsuccessfully to stop the blaze and all six children then alerted a neighbor to call firemen.

No citations were issued.

Shooting Claims Trio In Maryland

ISSUE, Md. (UPI)—Sheriff's deputies suspected a double murder and suicide in the shooting deaths of a plumbing contractor, a construction worker and a suburban Washington man, in this southern Maryland town Friday night.

Francis B. Mathews, the contractor, and Albert E. Silliday, the worker, were found shot to death at a home, where Mathews had been working on the plumbing.

About three hours later, deputies found the body of Vincent Galleano, 56, of Prince Georges County, in the Maryland suburbs in the front seat of his car.

A spokesman for the sheriff's office said Mathews, brother of Charles County Orphans' Court Judge Mary Mathews, had been shot twice in the back and Silliday was shot twice in the Chest. Galleano was shot once in the temple at close range while sitting in his car.

All three men were shot by a pistol, police said. It was reported that a pistol was found under Galleano's body in his car.

Mathews, who lived in nearby LaPalta, Md., and owned some property in the area, had some "business dealins" with Galleano in the home construction business, according to the sheriff's spokesman.

Manslaughter Case— Policeman Is Fired

SAN JOSE (UPI)—Policeman Rocklin Wooley, 27, four-year veteran of the San Jose Police Department charged with manslaughter in the shooting of a black IBM technician, was fired Friday night.

City Manager Thomas W. Fletcher announced the dismissal and said it was based on eight counts. He declined to give details of any of the charges because of an earlier gag order issued by Santa Clara County Superior Court Judge James B. Scott.

Fletcher did say that two off-duty officers who were involved in the fracas which led to the killing of John H. Smith, 37, were also disciplined.

Wooley was indicted this week by a county grand jury for the Sept. 19 predawn killing of Smith. The shooting occurred after Wooley stopped Smith for a minor traffic violation. The officer said he thought Smith was armed but no weapon was found.

Patrolman Darrell Richter, 29, was suspended for one year and Patrolman Robert Watts, 24, was dismissed on five counts. Richter and Watts were off-duty and out of uniform when they came to the aid of their fellow officer prior to the shooting, officials said.

Judge Scott's gag rule was a tough, sweeping order. It applied to all attorneys and investigators on both sides in the case, all court employes, all public officials involved, including the City Council, mayor, city manager, police chief and every man on the police force.

The rule even extended to sheriff's deputies, grand jury members and "dismissed jurors."

Auto Theft To Superior Court

Charles Anthony Wood and Michael Starks, both 18 and of San Francisco, have been bound over to Marin Superior Court on a charge of car theft.

They are to be arraigned in superior court Nov. 22.

They were arrested Oct. 21 when the California Highway Patrol saw the car they were riding in moving erratically on Highway 101 near San Rafael.

A check revealed the car had been stolen Oct. 10 in San Francisco, according to the highway patrol.

Graveyard Vandalized At Olema

Halloween vandals damaged a dozen gravemarkers at Olema Cemetery in what deputy sheriff Michael McLean described as a "cheap, perverted trick."

"I am posting a $250 reward for information leading to the arrest and conviction of the perverted punks," said McLean. "It was more than just a Halloween prank. They just wrecked the place and even started digging up one grave."

No bodies are missing at the cemetery, located on Shoreline Highway about a mile south of Olema.

The damage wrought Sunday night consisted of broken markers, headstones uprooted and heavy marble slabs broken into several pieces. The wings of stone angels had been broken, and garbage emptied on the top of graves.

Among the graves desecrated were those belonging to the James Alberigi family and the Nelson family of Point Reyes, the deputy reported.

"Everyone is hopping mad about it. There has been minor vandalism at the cemetery before but never this bad."

any discussion of how much further the U.S. force in Vietnam could be cut back or how soon. Asked about President Nguyen Van Thieu's remarks to a dozen correspondents in late September that he envisioned 50,000 U.S. military technicians and artillerymen in Vietnam indefinitely, along with a combat force of thousands of men as in Korea and Germany, Laird said, "I would not want to get into any projections like that."

"President Thieu did not give figures like that to me," Laird said. "I don't know where you got those figures. They had nothing to do with any discussion I had with him."

Laird left Saigon by plane for Honolulu today en route to Washington.

Before his news conference, Laird put on the fatigue uniform of the combat soldier and toured battlefronts then visited a new Vietnamese ordnance depot on Saigon's outskirts.

As Laird visited the war zone, American B52 bombers kept up their unannounced campaign against Communist truck traffic along the Ho Chi Minh Trail in Laos, military sources said.

The U.S. command did announce that one B52 raid dropped at least 90 tons of bombs inside South Vietnam. The B52s were aiming for a truck storage area 28 miles southeast of the abandoned Khe Sanh base and four miles from Laos, a military spokesman said.

Arrested In Knife Probe

A San Francisco man was booked into Marin County Jail yesterday on suspicion of burglary, auto theft and possession of a switchblade knife after Corte Madera officers said they saw him leaving the neighborhood of a Corte Madera house burglary.

Victor Royal Van Wagner, 28, was being held today in lieu of $5,000 bail to appear in Marin Municipal Court Monday.

Police answered a neighbor's call that a burglary was in progress on Sonora Avenue at 1:22 p.m., and spotted a car fitting the description of the burglar's vehicle, three blocks from the home.

A television set taken from the home was found in the car after officers stopped Van Wagner, officers said. The car was reported to have been stolen in San Francisco.

son and one reason only: Because negotiations hit a stalemate. It is the only meaningful way we can proceed."

Reagan two days ago warned he would veto the Democratic bill unless it gave Republicans a better shake.

Throughout the negotiations with Republicans, Dymally said, Harmer repeatedly warned Democrats that the governor would veto such a bill.

"We have not threatened a governor's veto to anyone on the floor," Harmer said. "We have said if the bill comes out manifestly unfair, there will be a veto, a second veto and a third veto."

After a long exchange of bitter allegations, Republicans met privately and agreed to withdraw their amendments if the Democrats put Dymally's bill on the inactive file.

But Dymally, who called a closed-session of his Elections and Reapportionment Committee for Monday, warned Republicans he had no intention "of redistricting the entire state" to suit them.

BLAST

Potter Stewart, Harry A. Blackman and Byron R. White — issued an order denying the delay without comment.

Justices William J. Brennan Jr., Thurgood Marshall and William O. Douglas wanted to postpone the blast so the court could consider the merits of its opponents' arguments. Brennan and Marshall said the arguments by environmental foes confirmed a lower court's views that the case presented "a substantial question as to the legality of the proposed test."

Larkspur Panel Sets Meeting

The Larkspur Planning Commission will meet with the city's architectural review committee at 7:30 p.m. Tuesday to discuss giving the committee more authority.

The committee now holds authority only to make recommendations, architectural review, according to John W. Appleton, town planning director. Under a city staff proposal, it would be empowered to pass judgment on design issues.

Also set for discussion are a nature preserve suggestion for Larkspur Creek and revision of parking regulations.

OBITUARIES

MRS. WIERSCHKE

Harriet M. Wierschke of Santa Rosa, for many years a teacher in little Union School on the Sonoma-Marin line, died yesterday in a Sonoma County Hospital.

Mrs. Wierschke, 70, was a native of Kentucky but was reared and educated in Antigo, Wisc. She lived in the Petaluma area for 28 years with her late husband, Samuel, and moved to Santa Rosa three years ago.

She is survived by two daughters, Joyce Lorenz of Petaluma and Rosemary Suttle of Novato, six grandchildren and a great-grandchild, as well as a sister, Sarah Rath of Los Angeles.

She was a member of the American Association of University Women, the San Francisco Opera Association, the Petaluma Women's Club and the Christ United Methodist Church of Santa Rosa.

Funeral will be at 2 p.m. Monday in the Parent funeral chapel, Petaluma, followed by private burial in the Odd Fellows Cemetery, Santa Rosa. The family prefers donations to the American Cancer Society.

Innocent Pleas To Pot Charges

Three men arrested Sunday in Sausalito have pleaded innocent to marijuana charges in Marin Municipal Court.

Preliminary hearing was set for Nov. 16 for Michael Arnold Spencer, 24, of no known address; Daniel Alan Gelinas, 19; of Gate 6, and Jason Edward Omar, 26, of 240 Glen Drive, Sausalito.

They were arrested when police went to Omar's residence after complaints of noise and found 54 pounds of pot at the house.

The three are charged with felony possession of pot for sale and a misdemeanor count of possessing narcotics paraphernalia.

School District Shift Considered

The Kentfield School District board will consider shifting jurisdiction over the Air Force Nike Missile site on Mount Tamalpais to the Mill Valley School District at 8 p.m. Monday at Wolfe Grade School.

Because of confusion over boundaries, Air Force dependents have attended Mill Valley schools although the installation is in Kentfield territory.

F. CARPENTIER

Mass of the Resurrection for Fernand Carpentier, retired bulldozer operator and a Marin resident for 63 years, was held today at our Lady of Loretto church in Novato.

Carpentier, 71, of 1104 Second Street, Novato, died Thursday in a local hospital after a short illness.

He was born in Portland, and came to California in 1904 as a child. He moved to the Black Point area of Novato in 1908. For many years he was a blade operator for Bobo contractor in Ignacio.

He was a retired member of operating engineers local 3.

Carpentier is survived by two brothers, George Carpentier and Louis Carpentier, both of Black Point.

Recitation of the Rosary was last night at Redwood Chapel Funeral Home in Novato. Burial was in Mount Olivet Cemetery, San Rafael.

ALBINI BERNARDINI

Albini Bernardini, 77-year-old San Anselmo resident, died yesterday in a Bay Area hospital following a lengthy illness.

Mrs. Bernardini was born in San Francisco and moved to Marin County in the 1920s. Her last address was 44 Mariposa Avenue. She and her late husband, Virgil, operated a restaurant at one time.

She is survived by two sons, Lawrence of San Anselmo, and Alfred; a sister, Rose Cervini, and nine grandchildren.

Mass of the Resurrection will be celebrated at 10 a.m. Monday at St. Anselm's Church, San Anselmo, followed by burial at Italian Cemetery, Colma.

NEW PRISON PUMPER

Two unidentified inmate firemen check out a newly acquired pumper truck for the San Quentin Prison fire department. The $26,000 rig will serve the institution, homes on the reservation and the village of San Quentin. Officials report the truck will always be outside and ready to go — largely because it won't fit in the fire station.

Pope Ends Synod With A Defense

VATICAN CITY (UPI)—Pope Paul VI closed the Third International Synod of Bishops today with one of his strongest defenses of the 12th century church law barring Roman Catholic priests from marrying.

The speech, ending 38 days of deliberations by more than 200 churchmen, came shortly after Synod sources said delegates had ruled out the possibility of allowing some elderly married men to become priests.

The sources said churchmen voted 107-83 against a step even the Pope had agreed to consider.

"What the Synod has said," the Pope said, "We confirm."

The 74-year-old pontiff called celibacy "not a minor part of the great gift of the priesthood."

There was no final, formal proclamations by the Synod of its two themes, the priesthood and justice, because of the large number of amendments and proposed changes in the wording of documents on the two issues.

The vote on the priesthood was the final official act by the Synod, which earlier rejected a clause which would have left the door ajar for some married men to become priests under special conditions and with the Pope's approval.

Many liberals voted against the motion, Synod sources said, because it did not go far enough.

The motion was reworded but still failed to satisfy many liberal delegates. Most of the document on justice also was rejected, and Synod officials decided not to address final documents to the world, but to the Pope only.

The priesthood and justice were the only two themes on the synod agenda when it opened Sept. 30, but because delegates could not agree completely on wording in final documents, synod officials decided to drop the idea of final formal proclamations.

Almost all of the justice document, which included comment on everything from pollution to population growth, and five of the 19 clauses in the priesthood document failed to win a required two thirds majority.

Altogether, 806 amendments were proposed during voting on the two documents. Many overlapped or were minor changes in language. But some were major proposals.

All were subject to another vote.

In any case, decisions by delegates were not binding on the Pope although Vatican sources said he was sure to consider them in any future pronouncements.

The Atmosphere Is Pretty Heavy

MOSCOW (UPI)—The atmosphere weighs 5 quadrillion, 157 trillion tons, the Soviets said yesterday in an announcement of great import to scientists and connoisseurs of trivia.

The official Tass news agency said an electronic brain known as the Minsk-22 computer had figured out the total weight of Earth's air cover more precisely than had been done before. "The mass of air enveloping our planet is now estimated at 5 quadrillion, 157 trillion tons," Tass said.

"This calculation is essential for research in cosmonautics, space geodesy and gravimetry," Tass said.

It said Minsk-22's arithmetic "for the first time took into account all the peculiarities of the earth's relief and the distribution of temperatures on its surface."

Seven Born To Woman In Chile

SANTIAGO, Chile (UPI)—A 26-year-old Chilean woman gave birth today to seven boys in the Catholic University hospital of Santiago, the sixth reported incident of septuplet births in this century.

Physicians at the hospital said the mother, Mrs. Graciela Calderon de Avila, and six of the infants were in good condition. The seventh was suffering from respiratory problems, they said.

Weight of the septuplets ranged from two to three pounds. All were placed in incubators in the intensive care section of the hospital.

Mrs. Avila's husband, Gabriel, 28, is a furniture varnisher. He said physicians had told him to expect twins or triplets. The couple has one other child, also a boy.

The Guinness Book of World Records lists only five other septuplet births in this country but has no record of whether any of the children involved survived. The first was in Nigeria in 1907 and others were reported in East Africa in 1920, in Portugal in 1931, in Guiana in 1933 and in India in 1937.

Troop Pullout

SEOUL (UPI) — President Park Chung-hee announced today 10,000 South Korean troops will be pulled out of Vietnam by June 30 in the first step toward withdrawing all 50,000 Korean soldiers fighting in Indochina.

Ghetto Cancer Remedy Urged

NEW YORK (UPI)—The American Cancer Society said Thursday that ghetto residents often are frequent victims of certain kinds of cancer and suggested an accelerated program to remedy the situation.

"This is the population in which many cancers are diagnosed too late to expect survival," ACS executive vice president Lane W. Adams told the annual meeting of the society.

Lane said the ghetto is where "some cancers hit hardest—cancer of the cervix, cancer of the lung and cancer of the stomach..."

He recommended the establishment of task forces against cancers of the breast, the colonrectum and the lung similar to one already working on uterine cancer.

BE-BOP FROM MARY QUANT

Spring collection showings in London this week include Mary Quant's Ginger Group, which includes this "be-bop" outfit of white gabardine turn-up trousers contrasting with the red and white polka dot bikini-top, worn by model Hazel.

MARY QUANT of London's Chelsea, noted for her invention of the 1960s mini skirt, came with this frilly-panted design for spring which she calls "Toulouse." The seersucker outfit is black with ruffles on the skirt and rick-rack interest around the edges.

TIPS FOR HOUSEWIVES

Start A Business To End Boredom

By GAY PAULEY

NEW YORK (UPI)—One way to get rid of the "I'm just a housewife" syndrome is to start a business in your home.

Some one million women already are operating home businesses successfully, doing everything from cooking to crafts, reports the National Home Study Council. Some of them are earning only $1,000 to $5,000 a year. Others are seeing what started in the household turn them into millionaires. At the same time, almost all are balancing their home careers with caring for house, husband and children.

YOU'RE FAMILIAR with some of the tycoon-type success stories — how Margaret Rudkin's home-baked bread for her child needing a special diet became Pepperidge Farm, how Ruth Handler created an adult doll for her daughter, named it "Barbie" and ultimately became president of Mattel, which calls itself the world's largest toy company.

Whether you want just to earn extra money, say, for home improvement, putting the children through college or buying yourself a mink coat, you can get into the act with the other one million.

There are, however, pitfalls along with the rewards. In a new publication, "The Family Circle Book of Careers at Home" (Cowles), Mary Bass Gibson outlines the methods of starting a business. Mrs. Gibson, who now writes at home, used to occupy the executive suite as editor of the Ladies' Home Journal.

MRS. GIBSON starts with the premise, "A survey reveals that 90 per cent of all housewives have the daily routine of housework finished before noon." So, there's time to do other work.

To the housewife who says, "But I have no talent," she answers, "sit down and make a list of things you do at home that are special....cake decorating, flower arranging, needlework, dressmaking, crocheting and knitting..."

"Discovery of her own worth is the first and most important reward to a housewife who launches a career at home," she says. Mrs. Gibson believes a home career makes a woman a better housewife. But she warns, "The whole thing is totally impossible without a husband who wants it to work."

Among the pitfalls are overextension, financially and in optimism. Start small, she says. Test your market thoroughly. Keep your financial paperwork up to date and don't go overboard in inventory.

SHE LISTS a 4-E (for energy, enthusiasm, ego and excellence) aptitude test to a woman planning a home career. Here it goes, in 20 question form:

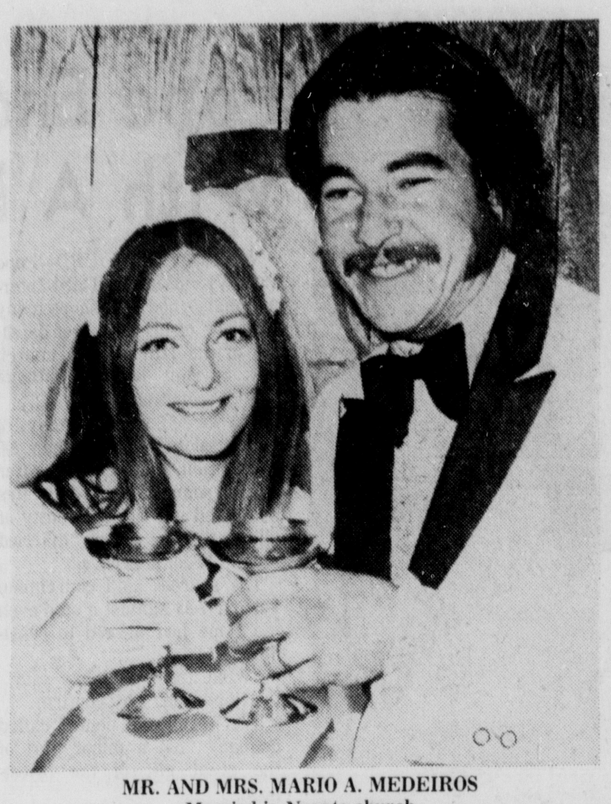
Do you enjoy being busy? Do you get your housework done early in the day? Do you like to try out new ideas? Are you more concerned with pleasing than being pleased? Do you feel you have a special talent that is a money-maker (potentially)?

Do your friends and family believe you have a special talent? Are you a perfectionist? Is your husband easy to get along with? Are your children cooperating? Did you hold a job before you were married? Do you throw yourself wholeheartedly into whatever you do? Can you take criticism and/or rejection?

Do you have a hobby you can turn into a career at home? Does boredom seem unnecessary to you? Do you need to make money? Would having your own money make you feel more important? Do you have patience?

DO YOU think a wife and mother gains respect from her family if she can make money on her own? Are you a good organizer? Do you have imagination in working out your problems?

Score five points for each "yes" answer. A score of 100 per cent means, "What are you waiting for? Get going." A score of 50 per cent means proceed with caution. A score of between 50 and 100 per cent means you can make it if you're willing to face up to shortcomings and do something about correcting them.



MR. AND MRS. MARIO A. MEDEIROS
Married in Novato church

Mario Medeiros And Debbie Harter United

Debbie Susan Harter of Novato and Mario Anthony Medeiros of San Rafael were married last Saturday at Our Lady of Loretto Church in Novato.

A reception followed at the Novato Community House.

Matron of honor for her sister was Mrs. Edward Schaefer of San Rafael. Bridesmaids were Linda and Patty Harter, the bride's sisters; Nancy Zitella; Diana Perron; and Diane Davis, all of Novato.

Rick Medeiros of Sonoma was best man, and guests were ushered to their seats by the bride's brother Craig Harter, Dennis Chase, Butch Phillips, Ed Sears and Raymond Medeiros, all of Novato.

Following a wedding trip to Carmel the couple will live in San Rafael.

Debbie is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William F. Harter of Novato. She was graduated from Novato High School and attended College of Marin. Bill Harter is also her brother, and she is the granddaughter of Mr. and Mrs. Francis Harter of Daly City. The bride is employed by Western Title Insurance Company in San Rafael.

Mario is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Medeiros of Novato. He is also a graduate of Novato High School and is employed at the Chevron Station in Belvedere.

Sausalitans Repeat Vows At Sea

A wedding at sea last Sunday joined in marriage Linda Sue Carrico and Robert Martin Ellwanger, both of Sausalito.

The unusual ceremony was performed about 26 miles off the San Francisco coast by Capt. James Cannon aboard the boat he owns and where he lives. Maid of honor was Cheryl Penny of Mill Valley, and best man was Marshall Still of San Francisco.

The reception was held after the ceremony at Muir Beach, and the couple flew this week to Hong Kong for a week's honeymoon. In January they plan an around-the-world voyage on a boat they have built. They will live in Sausalito.

The bride, who is the daughter of Mrs. Benjamin Carrico of Pueblo, Colo., attended the University of Colorado and is a hostess with Pan American World Airways. She is the sister of Mrs. Bill Young and Dr. James Swanson of Pueblo and Mrs. Kenneth Ruff of Colorado Springs.

The bridegroom, who is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence Ellwanger of Rochester, N.Y., was graduated from the University of Rochester and is a free lance commercial artist in advertising. He is the brother of Kenneth, Mark, Jeff and Rick Ellwanger of Pueblo.

Corte Madera Women's Club To Mark Anniversary With Bazaar

Marking the club's 65th anniversary, the Corte Madera Women's Club has chosen "Gaslights" as the theme for its annual bazaar to be held Tuesday at the Corte Madera Recreation Center.

The gaslight theme was chosen to honor founding members of the club whose first major project was the installation of 51 electric street lights to replace the gaslights used in the town.

The sale will open at 10 a.m. and lunch will be served from 11 a.m. to 1:30 p.m. Featured items will be Christmas decorations, hand sewn aprons, bakery goods, plants, needlework and a selection of gift items.

Proceeds from the luncheon and sale will go toward support of the recreation center.

A sneak preview of the sale will be held Monday night for the Corte Madera Lions Club and their wives from 7 to 9 p.m.

COUNTY CLERK George Gnoss will speak at the meeting Wednesday of the Marin County Legal Secretaries Association at Tiburon Lodge. A social hour will begin at 5:30 p.m. with dinner scheduled at 6:30 p.m. Reservations and program chairman is Jane Swall.

A short business meeting will follow the talk to discuss the Legal Secretaries board of governors meeting to be held this month in Visalia.

A LUNCHEON and fashion show will be held by the Marin County Alumnae of Alpha Omicron Pi at 11:30 a.m. Tuesday at Tiburon Tommie's restaurant. The event will be a benefit for the Endowed Bed Fund at Ross General Hospital.

The Ross Hospital Volunteers will assist the alumnae and the Marin Mannequin League members will model the clothes. Models will be Mmes. Fred Paolini, David Stewart, Fred Dutch, Arthur Schumacher and Yeta Wright.

Chairmen are alumnae president Mrs. Ruth Ann Windsor Cantel, Mrs. Gordon A. Phillips and Mrs. Roderick McKenzie. Mrs. Phillips is reservations chairman.

THE ANNUAL membership meeting of the Marin County Chapter of the Kidney Foundation of Northern California will be held at 1363 Lincoln Avenue, San Rafael on Monday. It will begin at 7:30 p.m.

PETALUMA BRANCH, American Association of University Women will have a public meeting Wednesday at 7:30 p.m. at the United Church of Christ, Middlefield Drive.

Mrs. Ronald Simpkins, chairman, has announced an "art in action" display. Members of the Petaluma Art Association who will demonstrate skills will be Alice Hanna, quilting techniques; Mmes. Robert Daley, oil painting; David Richardson, pottery; and Dorothy Smith, dried arrangements.

Hostesses for the event are Mmes. Earl Egan, Arthur Flynn, Kenneth Golterman, Edward Witte and John Dado.

THE CLIPPED Wings will meet Tuesday night at Marin House, a home in Larkspur for six mildly retarded women and present a fashion show for the residents.

Marin House is a project of Marin Aid to Retarded Children.

Modeling for the show from the Clipped Wings group of former airline stewardesses are Mmes. Sheldon Morris of Novato, Bernard Cummins and Phillip Shivell of San Rafaal, and Victor Bacigalupi of Terra Linda.

MR. AND MRS. Donald Leisey will be honored at a reception Tuesday at 7 p.m., hosted by members of the San Rafael Council Parent-Teacher Association and the San Rafael Board of Education, at the San Rafael City Schools administration building.

Mr. Leisey is the new business manager for the San Rafael City Schools.

Chairman of the reception are Mrs. Ronald Horne and Morton Rothman.

TAMAL REBEKAH Lodge 393 will have a public hot dish and salad luncheon Tuesday at Odd Fellows Temple in San Rafael from 11:30 a.m. to 1:30 p.m. During the luncheon the members will also have a bazaar, bake sale and plant table.

Chairman of the day is Mrs. Ada Earwood.

CHRISTMAS DECORATION and gift ideas will be presented by Gordon Baker Lloyd for the San Rafael Improvement Club at 1:30 p.m. Tuesday at the clubhouse in San Rafael. One section of his show and demonstration will be on making holiday gifts.

A tea will be held after the program.

A MODEL MEETING will be held by Omicron Alpha Chapter of Beta Sigma Phi at 8 p.m. Tuesday at the home of Mrs. Bevan Robinson in San Rafael. Scrapbooks and other mementos of the chapter will be displayed. New pledges to be welcomed are Mmes. Thomas Cefalu, Robert Davis, Thomas Lyons, James Murphy and Robert Trost.

A BRIDGE AND card party will be held by the Central Marin Welcome Wagon Club at 10 a.m. Tuesday at Peacock Gap Country Club. The meeting will also include nominations for new officers.

Party chairmen are Mmes. Carlton Zimmer and Kingston Ebner. Reservations chairmen are Mmes. Raymond Maroney and Robert O'Brien.

Women Liberationists Taking Slow, Cautious Road In Spain

By TONY NAVARRO

MADRID (UPI) — Women's liberation is tip-toeing into Spain, a country of deep-rooted traditions of unequality between the sexes.

The road chosen by Spain's women liberationists is a slow and cautious one. They talk kindly of men. All they seek is equality for women by changing Spain's antiquated civil laws.

THEY WANT to win the Spanish housewife such freedoms as being able to open a bank account, start a business or accept an inheritance without her husband's written and duly witnessed consent.

In short, they want to change a principle which is unequivocally expressed in the Spanish Civil Code: "The husband must protect his wife and the wife must obey her husband."

A chic, strong-willed widow in her fifties is the leader of Spain's version of women's liberation. Maria Telo Nunez is a lawyer, civil rights specialist and president of the newly created "Spanish Association of Women Jurists" which has taken the lead in the fight for revision of laws which make Spanish women second-class citizens.

FIGHTING FOR the liberation of Spanish women means trying to bring our laws up to date so they conform with reality," Mrs. Telo said.

"Our present laws limit a Spanish woman to a point where she suppresses her personality. She always has to be represented by her husband."

The experiences of Spanish women illustrate Mrs. Telo's campaign.

"Our situation is absurd," said Laura Vazquez, wife of a civil engineer. "When I was single, I put some money into a savings account. Since I'm married, I have to get my husband's written consent if I want to withdraw some of that money."

SINGLE WOMEN are relatively free under Spanish law, even though the age of consent is 23, and an unwritten law demands that they be home by 11 p.m. Things really get bad once a woman gets married. From that day on, her husband's "licencia marital" (consent) begins to play an all-important role in her life.

"HOW IS it possible," Mrs. Telo asked, "that the principle of marital consent, which was imposed on us in Napoleonic times, could survive in Spain? Among civilized nations, only Turkey has a similar situation."

Mrs. Telo plans to continue her fight from her desk and not in rallies or in the streets.

But still, there is some sort of demonstration of women's liberation in the streets of Madrid and Seville —the first traffic policewomen have made their appearance.

Parolee Help Suggested By First Lady

Mrs. Richard M. Nixon has suggested that recidivism among paroled prisoners might be decreased by having some parolees assigned to volunteer workers instead of parole officers.

In a Reader's Digest article from the book "People Helping People" Mrs. Nixon suggested that a volunteer could befriend a parolee and talk things out with him, help him find a job and transportation.

Volunteer service has been a special concern of the First Lady, and she gave high praise to young people who volunteer in tutoring, recreation, care for the aged, the mentally retarded, the prisons and courts.

THE GENERATION RAP

by Helen and Sue Bottel

Just Remind Your Ex-Girl She's Ruining Herself When She Talks

DEAR SUE AND HELEN:

I was horsing around with the gang one night and pretended to hypnotize my best friend, who was in on the joke. We pulled it off, and everybody thought I could do it.

I wouldn't ever try again because I know I can't, but I tell people it is because hypnotism is dangerous unless it's done by a trained expert.

Well, there's a girl I dated for a couple of months but she was getting too serious so I broke up with her. She was pretty mad and called me a lot of names.

Now she's spread it around that I hypnotized her and got her to do anything I wanted and that's why she dropped me. Every day she remembers another wild detail, so I hear. Actually I never touched the girl that way — which is one of the reason she's mad at me.

Several girls lately have turned me down when I've asked them out. This never happened before, so maybe they really believe her!

My problem is do I lose face and tell the gang that I can't hypnotize anybody — and prove it — or how do I shut this girl up? — NO SVENGALI

P.S. What if I tried to prove I couldn't hypnotize — and found out I really could?

DEAR NO:

Why don't you remind the girl that by trying to mess up your reputation, she's ruining her own? And, if she doesn't shut up plus take it all back, you'll be forced to tell the kids the truth — and you can prove it!

Usually a girl won't risk having it known that she threw herself at a guy who ducked. — SUE

DEAR NO SVENGALI:

You might also tell her there's a big gap in her story: People under hypnosis don't remember what they did. Tell her, too, that most everyone still believes — though it's not always true — a hypnotized person won't go against her basic standards, so the more she builds up those wild stories, the harder she'll have to look for a guy who is not going to take her out for all he can get. — HELEN

P.S. Don't try any more hypnotics. You just might connect, and it could be dangerous.

DEAR "RAP":

Is it abnormal for me to turn off on a guy who smokes? Whenever I find out a fellow I admire is a cigarette smoker, I get disinterested. My friends and my Dad smoke, and I don't hate them. But I've got a real hangup about dating a smoker.

There's this really great kid, and I know he's going to ask me out but if he lights up in the car, I'll probably get sick. Should I see a doctor about this? — MIXED UP SANDY

DEAR SANDY:

Why not tell the fella you're allergic to cigarette smoke? Then, if he asks you out, he should be thoughtful enough not to smoke in the car. Maybe you really are allergic, which would mean it isn't a hang-up but a medical problem. — SUE.

DEAR SANDY:

You didn't say, but I'll bet part of your turn-off is aversion to cigarette-breath, especially on someone who might kiss you.

When this great guy finds out you're allergic — and if he likes you enough — he may just kick the habit. Good luck! — HELEN

Engagement Of Petaluman Announced

The engagement of Terri Molinoli of Petaluma to Kenneth Pounds has been announced.

The bride-elect is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joe Molinoli of Petaluma and Kenneth is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Ray Pounds of Novato.

Both are graduates of Petaluma High School, and Terri attended Santa Rosa Junior College. She is employed in a doctor's office in Petaluma. She is the sister of Sue and Tony Molinoli of Petaluma.

Kenneth was graduated from Santa Rosa Junior College and the University of California and is employed as a sales representative for the George A. Hormel Co.

The couple will be married next summer.

Vegetables Are Easy To Grow In The Kitchen

Vegetables can be grown as well as cooked in the kitchen. The ideal containers are clay flower pots, which should be scrubbed and soaked with water before covering the drain holes with pottery or screening to hold the soil.

Add a cushion of potting mix, set the plant on it and fill around with more soil.

Cherry tomatoes will thrive in a kitchen if they are planted in a hanging pot, since they grow horizontally and hang down with the weight of the full crop.

Plant a husky, established tomato plant in a 12-inch pot; leave an inch and a half rim free for water; provide a porous, rich soil. Feed only twice — once three weeks after potting, then again three weeks later. Dust occasionally with fungicide and insecticide before fruit ripens, and water frequently.

The Bodyshirt Is Top Fashion Item

The bodyshirt is one of the ideal answers for a top to be worn with pants or skirts because the snap fasteners at the crotch prevent the shirt from gapping and coming out, according to Women's Wear Daily.

Also called the jumpshirt and the crotchshirt, the tops are ideal to wear with the low waistband pants being offered for spring.

SALLY ANN GILLESPIE
Plans May 7 wedding

Wedding In Spring Is Planned

Mr. and Mrs. Martin V. Gillespie of Fairfax announce the engagement of their daughter Sally Ann to Kenneth Robert Andrews. The future bridegroom's parents are Mr. and Mrs. Robert Andrews of San Rafael.

Sally and Kenneth plan to be married on May 7.

The future bride is the sister of Linda Gillespie of Terra Linda, Ronald Gillespie in Vietnam and Walter Gillespie of Fairfax. She is a graduate of Sir Francis Drake High School and is employed by Ways and Means in San Rafael.

Mary Andrews is the future bridegroom's sister, and he is the grandson of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Metten of San Anselmo. A graduate of San Rafael High School, he attends College of Marin and is employed by Duffy Brothers in San Rafael.

Alumni Brunch

Local alumni of Yale and Princeton will get together Nov. 13 at 10 a.m. in Berkeley to have brunch and listen to the broadcast of the Yale-Princeton football game. The game will be broadcast over private telephone circuits. The event will be held at His Lordship's restaurant on the Berkeley Marina. Proceeds will go to the schools' scholarship funds.

Polyester Is Fastest Growing Fiber In The Textile Industry

By EUNICE FARMER

Because so many of you have been confused about the words Dacron, Trevira and polyester, I hope to clear up all of your letters with one answer.

Polyester is a generic classification for a type of man-made fiber. It is used for wearing apparel, yard goods, carpets, draperies and sheets as well as for many commercial applications. Polyester is the fastest growing fiber in the textile industry.

Wool is the generic classification for the natural fiber from the sheep's back; cotton and flax are natural fibers. Today we are seeing more and more of these natural fibers blended with the man-made fibers to utilize the best advantages of each.

Some of the most frequently seen names in polyesters are Dacron by DuPont, Kodel by Eastman, Trevira by Hystron and Fortrel by Celanese. These names all belong to the polyester family but are manufactured by different companies. I would suggest you keep this column as a reference to avoid further misunderstandings when it comes to polyesters.

MRS. SUNNY Schriefer of San Diego is this week's Tailor Trix pressing board winner for her sewing suggestion:

"I keep a piece of felt approximately 14 inches square in the top drawer of my sewing machine. Whenever I start to sew, I place it right on the sewing machine counter. It's perfect to place my shears on, pins won't roll off, needles can be stuck into it. In other words, everything stays put, including buttons, hooks and eyes, bobbins, zipper foot or anything that pertains to my sewing, and it's ready when needed. This has been very practical for me, and I never think about sewing without automatically reaching for my square of felt."

DEAR EUNICE,

I sent a lovely knit dress to the cleaners and apparently when they pressed the hem they stretched it, now it's uneven and almost flared at the hemline. Can I do anything about this?

MRS. L.M.J.

DEAR MRS. L.M.J.,

If this were a ribbed knit, it is very easy to find the hemline stretched in places. I would suggest sewing a line of stitches by hand just inside the hemline's edge and gently pulling it up slightly to keep the rib-knit even. Don't pull the thread too tight or it will look drawn up.

Place the skirt on your pressing board, wrong side out, pat it into shape and hold the steam iron above it. As it is moistened, again pat it into shape. If you have a pounding block, this works nicely instead of using your hand, or use the flat, wooden area of your Tailor Trix pressing board.

DEAR EUNICE,

Last year I made an imitation leather coat from a vinyl type fabric and found it very serviceable. However, the edges of the coat seemed to crack and split. Was this because the fabric was so stiff? If so, is there anything I can do to avoid this happening on the coat I am presently planning?

MRS. M.B.

DEAR MRS. M.B.,

The stiffness of the fabric does have some effect on the edges of your garment. I have found that when you top-stitch these outer edges with two rows of machine stitching, one row about 1/2 inch from the outer edge, the second row as close as possible to the edge, it not only creates a tailored, finished effect, but seems to prevent the cracking. I have also checked on the expensive ready-made garments of this type and found that some of the manufacturers have also done this.

If you would like to make your own frog closings and Chinese ball buttons, complete instructions on how to make them are given in the booklet "Spaghetti Straps and Rope Belts." To obtain your booklet send 10 cents and a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope with your request for it to Eunice Farmer in care of the Independent-Journal.

Vows Are Repeated In San Rafael

Bernadine Joyce Connell and Robert Ernest Durenberger Jr., both of San Rafael, were married last Saturday at St. Raphael's Catholic Church in San Rafael.

Parents of the bride are Mr. and Mrs. Daniel L. Connell of San Rafael, and the bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Durenberger of Cotati.

Matron of honor was Jeanne Dallara MacArthur of San Rafael, and bridesmaids were Cindy and Kathy Connell, the bride's sisters; Ann Durenberger, the bridegroom's sister; and Carol Ann Hutton of West Covina.

Jerome Durenberger was best man, and Richard Galassi and John Michael Burns of San Anselmo and Donald MacArthur of San Rafael ushered.

Following a wedding trip to Maui, Hawaii, the couple will live in San Rafael.

The bride is a graduate of Terra Linda High School and is the secretary to the sales director of the Sheraton Palace Hotel in San Francisco.

Robert was graduated from San Rafael High School and attended College of Marin. He is employed by Cooper Brothers Plumbing in San Francisco. John Durenberger is also his brother.

NO ACTION, THOUGH

Vocal Support For Road-Ramp Meters

The City-County Planning Council of Marin has voiced support but taken no action on a state proposal to regulate freeway traffic by installing signals at on-ramps.

Sol Silver, chief of the county planning department's advance planning section, said the council may take formal action at a later meeting.

As proposed by the state division of highways, the so-called ramp metering would regulate the flow of cars entering Highway 101, depending on highway congestion.

The traffic signals would cause cars to wait on ramps and city streets instead of adding congestion. Under the signalization proposal, preferential treatment could be given mass transit busses.

In other action, the council supported a recommendation by county supervisors for a recreational travel study at Point Reyes National Seashore.

The supervisors have proposed that an internal and external rapid transit system be used and that eventually all private autos be prohibited from inside the park.

Criminal Complaint On Dividing Parcel Of Land

A criminal complaint has been filed in West Marin Justice Court alleging that developer Douglas G. Adams illegally divided a parcel of property near Inverness.

The complaint, filed by the Marin County Counsel's office, charges Adams, son of real estate man David S. Adams, with dividing and selling a 10-acre lot from a larger parcel adjoining the Paradise Ranch estate development.

Adams's action, taken in April but only discovered by county public works officials last month, violates the county's land division ordinance, Asst. County Counsel Joseph A. Forest said yesterday.

He said the maximum penalty is a $500 fine or a six-month jail sentence.

The complaint was filed last Friday and will be heard Wednesday.

Holiday Recipes Switched, Two Listed In Error

The Independent-Journal Holiday Cook Book, containing the 25 award winning holiday recipes, was in error designating recipes for fruit cake and hoska Czechoslovakian bread as contest winners.

Recipes for French coffee cake submitted by Mrs. Frank Biare and potato chip cookies by Etha I. Webster, both of San Rafael, were contest winners but were not designated as such in the special edition.

Headlines on recipes for Festive Cinnamon Candy Salad and Cheese Puffs, both award winning recipes, were inadvertently switched.

Guilty Plea, In Assault

Gregory Grant Orr, 21, of Terra Linda, has pleaded guilty in Marin Superior Court to a charge of statutory rape.

He is to be sentenced Monday.

Following his plea, two other rape charges stemming from the incident were dismissed at the request of the district attorney's office.

Orr was accused of raping a 15-year-old San Rafael girl in an automobile March 24 off Smith Ranch Road near Santa Venetia.

Dozen Alsatians Die In Airplane

BANGKOK (UPI)—A dozen pedigree Alsatian dogs died of lack of oxygen on a cargo plane delivering them to Bangkok police from Germany, police reported today.

Eight other dogs in the shipment survived the trip.

State Aid For Water Tightened

SACRAMENTO (UPI) —The California Water Commission Friday tightened requirements governing state grants and loans for local water projects because available money is running short.

The commission approved a proposal giving preferential consideration to local governments and agencies needing help in financing only water projects required "for the protection of public health and safety."

The State Water Project program, administered by the commission, provided loans and grants not only for development of local domestic and irrigation water resources but also for recreational and fish and wildlife enhancement.

Californians in 1960 approved $130 million for loans and grants under the act which authorized the sale of $1.75 billion in bonds for construction of the State Water Project.

Loans and grants totaling $90 million already have been approved and there are applications totaling more than $40 million pending with the state Water Resources Department.

Under the new commission policy, grants and loans totaling more than $15 million requested for two Southern California projects would be discouraged.

Commission officials said the change in requirements would make $5 million available for loans and grants, including those requested for badly needed domestic water projects at Montague in Siskiyou County and Blue Lake in Humboldt County.

Cereal Prober Happier Now

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn. (UPI) —Robert B. Choate said Thursday cereal manufacturers are putting out a better product than they were 15 months ago when he told a Senate subcommittee 40 to 60 of the nation's top-selling breakfast cereals were almost worthless ktritionally.

Choate said 45 of the cereals have been at least modestly improved and Cheerios and Wheaties are "much improved."

Still on Choate's bad list are Kellogg's Corn Flakes and Rice Krispies, and General Mills Lucky Charms, Cocoa Puffs, Frosty O's, Kix and Trix.

Hearing Ends For Professor

STANFORD (UPI) — Marxist-Maoist H. Bruce Franklin made his final argument Friday as to why he shouldn't be fired from his tenured post as a Stanford University associate professor on charges of inciting students to violence.

During six weeks of almost unprecedented hearings, Franklin said no evidence had been established that his speeches directly caused the violence involved.

He also said his words were free speech protected by the First Amendment. In any case, the young specialist on Herman Melville, said University regulations are too vague to conclude that he had violated them.

Franklin, 37, is accused by Stanford President Richard W. Lyman of urging students to occupy the university computer center Feb. 10 and or urging them to resist the police. Twelve persons were arrested, and afterwards several student conservatives were beaten and two wounded by gunfire.

Another specific charge is that Franklin participated Jan. 11 in heckling and chanting which prevented former Ambassador Henry Cabot Lodge from concluding a speech.

Raymond Fisher, an attorney for the administration, said in his closing arguments Thursday that the university can't tolerate "a person who deliberately provokes the use of force or violence to achieve his goals."

Fisher said Franklin, a faculty member since 1961, should be fired because he gave no evidence that "his behavior in the future will be different."

The hearings have little precedent in U. S. academic history for their scope and careful re-thinking of free speech issues.

No Action On Prison Complaint

An attorney for the San Quentin chapter of the California Correctional Officers Association (CCOA) has been told by the state Department of Industrial Relations that it will not act on a complaint about unsafe working conditions at the facility.

This summer, prior to the Aug. 21 escape attempt at the prison, the association filed a 15-page complaint with the department listing 64 instances of allegedly unsafe working conditions.

Jack F. Hatton of the department of industrial relations said a letter was mailed Tuesday to William Heekin of Carmichael, attorney for the CCOA. The letter said the department felt it had no jurisdiction in the complaint. Hatton said the matter of prison safety was now being handled by other public agencies.

CCOA spokesmen said they would discuss the letter at an association meeting in Sacramento, Monday, indicating appeal steps would be taken.

Prostitutes Used In Drug Experiment

CARSON CITY, Nev. (UPI)— An experiment using prostitutes to test a new drug for use against venereal disease will probably end in December, according to state health officer Dr. John Carr.

HOMEOWNERS'
SOOTHE YOUR TAX BITE

Your tax bite may be getting bigger all the time. But if you own a home or property, you can protect your investment by borrowing on it to pay those painful tax bills.

Because with your equity — that's the difference between the value of your home or property and the amount you owe on it — you can arrange to borrow from $1,000 to $10,000 or more through Union Home Loans. With flexible payments you can handle easily.

How much you can borrow depends on your current equity. So to soothe that tax bite — or for any reason — call Union Home Loans and ask about arranging to borrow that extra money you need on your very own home or property. Do it today.

Child Welfare Plan Criticized

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — Assembly Ways and Means Chairman Willie L. Brown Jr. says "not one dime" of the $18 million provided in the new welfare reform law for day care programs has been spent on children.

The San Francisco Democrat made the statement Thursday in accusing the state Social Welfare Department of "bungling" the administration of day care program funds and proposing to illegally spend the money.

"While the administration's social planning plutocrats blindly wend their slow way through their self-manufactured bureaucratic maze," Brown said, "children are not helped, parents cannot accept employment and the taxpayers are being bilked."

Birth Pills Bring Lawsuit

PITTSBURGH (UPI)—A former Miss America is suing a major pharmaceutical manufacturer, charging that its birth control pills caused her to suffer a stroke a year ago.

Jacquelyn Mayer Townsend, 28, Miss America 1963, who now lives with her husband, John, in Washington, Pa., filed suit Thursday in U.S. District court here, seeking damages of more than $10,000.

Named as defendants and accused of manufacturing an unsafe product were Ortho Pharmaceutical Corp.,, and its parent company, Johnson & Johnson, Inc.

Mrs. Townsend, mother of two, contended she suffered a cerebral vascular stroke Nov. 27, 1970, and was hospitalized, as a direct result of taking the pills.

Crop Fluoride Levels Accepted

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — Fluoride residues on crops in the Santa Clara and Salinas Valleys are well within tolerable levels, according to the State Department of Agriculture.

A spokesman said Thursday that samples of the crops recently were analyzed in the department's Sacramento laboratories and found to be free from harmful levels of fluorides.

The survey confirmed the findings in a special investigation conducted last year after a private laboratory reported that some raspberries in the San Jose area contained nearly four times the acceptable levels.

Japan Train Crashes — But No Injuries

YOKOHAMA, Japan (UPI)— Japan's fastest train hit a pile of logs at 126 miles an hour today but there were no injuries in what police termed an attempt to wreck the Tokyo-Yokohama express.

The streamlined blue and cream-colored Kodama 222, popularly known as the bullet, sustained no damage. Railway officials said it was the 47th attempt to sabotage the bullet trains since they went into operation in 1964. None of the attempts has been successful.

HOW TO PLAY

WINNING BRIDGE

By ALFRED SHEINWOLD

West's Lead Is Correct, But It Gives South Game In Spades

Bridge is a very scientific game, and the skillful player will surely win in the long run. But, and a very big but, there are still pockets of luck. The opening lead, for example, is probably one part luck to every two parts of skill. Today's hand tells the story.

Opening lead — ♣ J

APPROVED PLAN

West opens the jack of clubs, poor fellow, because the lead from a sequence of honors is approved by all the experts. But this lead allows South to make the contract.

It's true that the average declarer would go down anyway. He would draw trumps and lead hearts, hoping to find either the queen or ace of hearts in the West hand. About four minutes later, South would be down one, losing three hearts and a diamond.

The skillful declarer wins the ace of clubs, draws two rounds of trumps, cashes the king of clubs and ruffs a club. Then he leads out the top diamonds and a third diamond, allowing the defenders to take the trick where they like.

BEST DEFENSE

The best defense is for West to win the third round of diamonds in order to lead the nine of hearts through dummy. Declarer covers with dummy's jack, and East wins with the queen. But now East cannot get out of the lead safely. If East leads a heart, dummy's king will win a trick; and if East leads anything else, dummy can ruff while South discards a heart.

Now let's get back to the opening lead. Westcan defeat the contract by leading a heart. East wins as cheaply as possible and gets out with any safe play (such as the ten of diamonds).

SAME LINE

South goes through the same line of play as described earlier, but West wins the third diamond and leads another heart to give his partner two more heart tricks.

There is no way for West to know that a heart lead is best in such hands; and that's why bridge is not 100 per cent scientific.

DAILY QUESTION

As dealer, you hold:
♠ - A K J 10 5
♥ - 7 4 3
♦ - A K 4
♣ - A 5.
What do you say?

ANSWER: Bid one spade.

The hand is not quite worth a forcing opening bid. You would bid two spades (forcing to game) if the jack of spades were the queen or if you had a sixth spade in the place of any low side card.

Aniversary

The Baha'i Communities of Marin will observe the 154th birth of Baha'u'llah, prophet-founder of the Baha'i Faith next Friday with a 7:30 p.m. service at the San Geronimo Valley Art Center on Sir Francis Drake Boulevard.

Plea Made On Burglary Count

Bruce David Morawe, 28, of no known address, has pleaded innocent in Marin Municipal Court to a charge of burglary.

Preliminary hearing was set for Nov. 16.

Morawe was arrested Sunday after a man was seen leaving the residence of Patricia R. Swedenborg of 365 Lovell Avenue, Mill Valley. Morawe was stopped as he drove east on Miller Avenue and police said they found a billfold with $17 taken from the residence in Morawe's car.

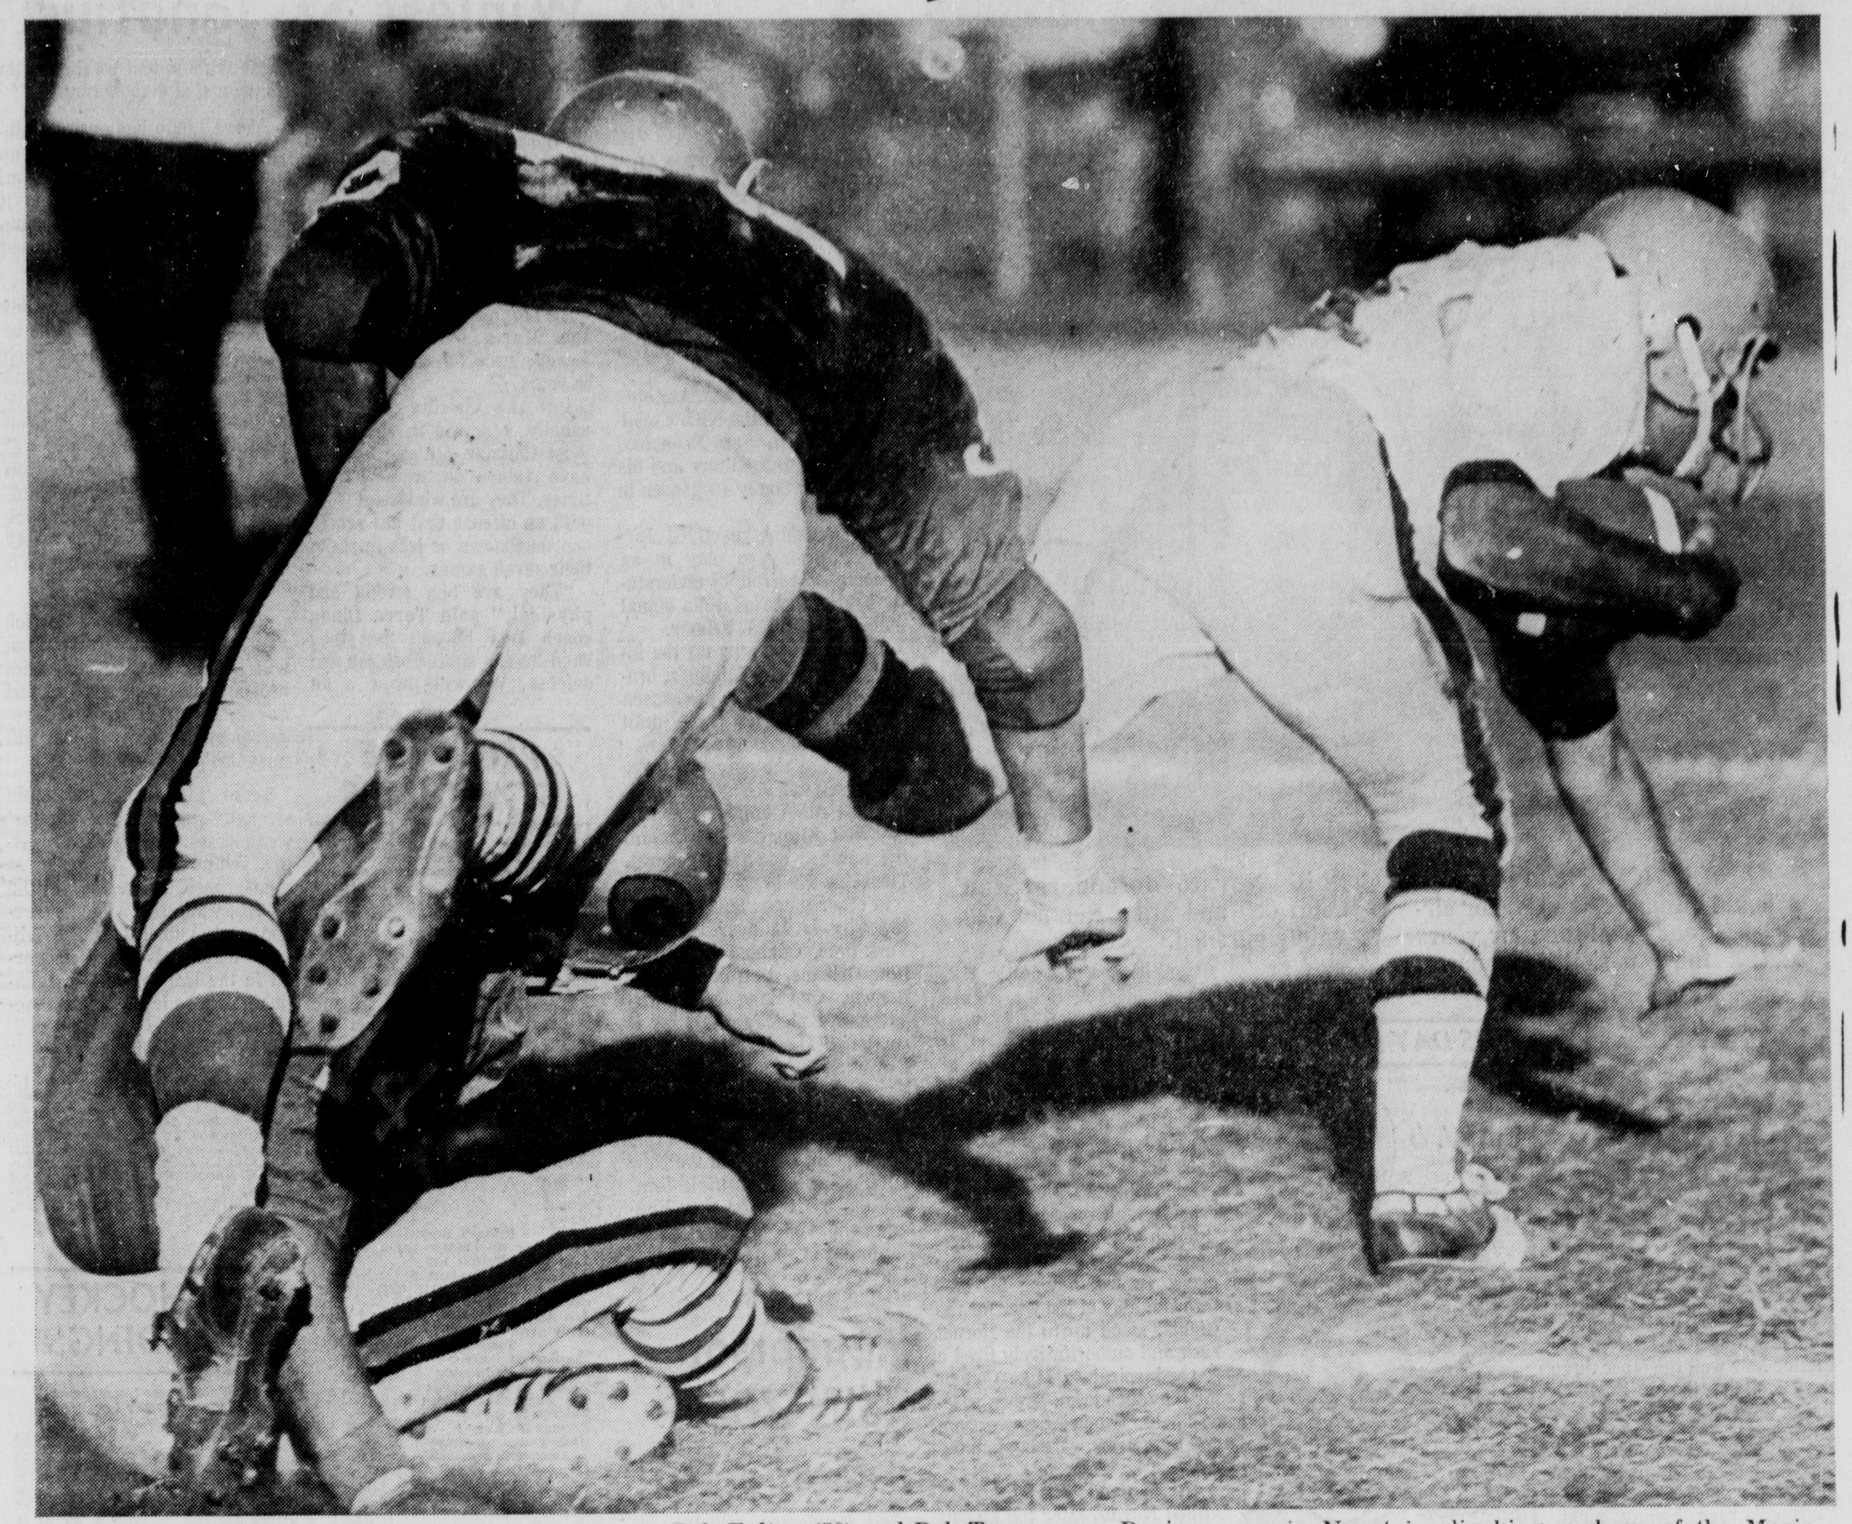
Novato Clinches Prep Grid Title With 21-15 Victory



MAGERS SCORES — Novato High School halfback Leo Magers culminated an eight-play, 89-yard drive, with a five-yard bust past falling Redwood High School linebacker Bob Fulton (50) and Bob Troppmann. During this strictly ground assault in the third period, Magers maneuvered for 41 yards in four thrusts. This sequence was instrumental in Novato's clinching a share of the Marin County Athletic League football crown with its 21-15 decision over Redwood in Larkspur yesterday. Magers, Moroski Lead Hornets Past Redwood

By PAUL CANE

Featuring brilliant individual performances by Leo Magers and Marty Moroski among a cast of thousands, Novato High School clinched a tie for the Marin County Athletic League football title yesterday, with a physically bruising 21-15 triumph over Redwood High.

The win gave Novato a perfect 5-0 league mark with one game left, against San Rafael (4-1) next Saturday. The Bulldogs, 57-0 winners over Drake yesterday, will need a win to get a share of the title.

Magers swept for 93 net yards and two touchdowns while Moroski connected on nearly 70 per cent of his passes and another touchdown, as the visiting Hornets eliminated Redwood from MCAL title contention.

Novato coach Al Scott said "Magers had one of his greatest games in three years," and "Moroski is tough. It's great to have a quarterback like that."

Defeated coach Phil Roark concurred in his appraisal of the two Hornet standouts, and expecially lauded Moroski; "As far as I'm concerned, he's the all-league quarterback."

The 6-3 senior signal caller clicked on five straight passes in a first period 64-yard march for the game's initial touchdown. Joe Powell caught the scoring lob, which really was a lob over the defenders' heads in the far corner of the end zone for 7-0.

"It was a super catch," Scott exulted following the win. The Hornet mentor also heaped praise on the vanquished Giants; "They are really big, they come at you and hit." He said he couldn't believe the transformation from the 1-8 team of last year to 1971's title contender. "I've got to hand it to the coaching staff and kids at Redwood, they came back and had a great season."

But not quite great enough. Novato gave up the passing attack temporarily in the third period, and moved 89 yards in eight rushing plays for 14-0, with less than six minutes remaining in the quarter. Magers, with jersey ripped and torn from rough handling, car-

Powerful San Rafael Crushes Drake, 57-0

By RON LENT

San Rafael High School has possibly the most explosive offensive machine in the Marin County Athletic League. Just ask Drake.

The Bulldogs ably prove it by trouncing the visiting Pirates, 57-0, last night.

"I guess we've been running fairly well lately," Bulldog coach Bob Muster understated following the homecoming football game on San Rafael High's field.

Indeed they have; the Red and White churned out five touchdowns on the ground, plus one in the air. All-League halfback Scott Duncan rambled for another four touchdowns, which included runs of 22 and 21; he added a 28-yard fumble recovery burst and an electrifying 78-yard kickoff return to start the second half.

Despite the seemingly tremendous onslaught, Muster restrained his enthusiasm, claiming "we've still got a long way to go," facing Novato next Saturday at 1:00 p.m. in quest of a share of the Hornet's newly won crown.

"I can't wait until we go to Novato next week," fans enthused on their way to the exits last night. Neither can the Bulldogs as they demonstrated intense determination for the upcoming tussle by dismantling a good Drake contingent.

"Eat 'em up," sideliners exorted shortly before the kickoff, and San Rafael did just that in the following manner.

After Drake failed to dent the Bulldog defense, San Rafael tallied the first time it touched the ball, parading 58 yards in eight attempts. Duncan culminated the effort, going 22 yards around end with a quick pitch.

The underrrated San Rafael defense promptly contained Drake within its 10 yard line, forcing a punt. From the Pirate 24, the Bulldogs launched another six-point-producing sequence with Duncan going in again from 21 yards away. On this play, Duncan spun through the line, broke through two would-be tacklers and darted unmolested the rest of the way.

Two plays later, the Bulldog defense recovered a Drake fumble on the invader's 27. Three plays and 11 yards hence, fullback Mark Farrar blasted over, ending the 20-point San Rafael opening quarter bombardment.

The shell-shocked Drake Pirates certainly were happy when the gun sounded to end the quarter. However, the shot could not stop San Rafael from notching 14 points in the next two quarters — and neither could the Pirate defense.

The Green and White defenders received little respite following Farrar's tally in the waning seconds of the first quarter, because safety Jeff White intercepted his first of two passes. After the elusive secondary standout darted and dashed some 20 yards on the final first quarter play, San Rafael took over on the Drake 40 to start the next period. The Bulldogs welcomed in the new period by unveiling its little used passing attack.

"Our boys felt bad when they read they were last in passing offense," Muster said, "so we worked on it, like we always do." The results were two tosses, two completions, and a touchdown. Quarterback Dirk Gansloser heaved a 31-yard bomb to end Duke Bessee in highlighting the drive and in so doing, serving notice that the San Rafael aerial game must be reckoned with. Bessee had to tip the throw up in the air and catch it while crashing to the earth.

Gansloser hit tight end Mike Sinclair with a nine-yard scoring pass on the next play. The hosts closed out the first half scoring with 1:35 left when Duncan scooped up a Drake fumble and roared 28 yards.

Duncan then began the second half the same way he ended the first — by making a touchdown. He took the kickoff starting the final 24 minutes of play and bolted 78 yards for his last touchdown in the cold night.

Alternate running back Paul D'Ambra scampered for the final two touchdowns, sandwiching runs of five and 34 around a Bulldog safety. Drake quarterback Jim Tang was dropped in the end zone in the latter portion of the closing period.

'Sad Sam' Jones Dies Of Cancer

MORGANTOWN, W. Va. (UPI) — Sam Jones, a hardthrowing right-hander who gained fame in the National League as a no-hit ace and a 20-game winner, died Friday night in West Virginia University hospital of cancer.

Hospital officials said the 45-year-old resident of Monongah, W. Va., was admitted to the hospital Sept. 21 but had undergone numerous treatments previously.

Jones won 21 games and lost 15 for the San Francisco Giants in 1959. He threw a no-hitter against the Pittsburgh Pirates May 12, 1955, while pitching for the Chicago Cubs.

Funeral arrangements were incomplete.

Jones, who won over 100 games in his career, also pitched for Pittsburgh, St. Louis, Detroit Baltimore and Cleveland. His two best seasons were in 1959 and 1960 when he recorded 21-14 and 18-14 records.

He retired in 1966 after spending several seasons as a player-coach with the Columbus Jets of the International League. He is survived by his wife, Mary, and two sons, Mike and Nick. and Nick.

Jones was known as "Sad Sam" and "Toothpick" during his playing days. The "Sad Sam" nickname came from the almost mournful look he always wore on his face while the "Toothpick" label came from the fact that he always pitched with a toothpick stuck between his teeth.

Jones' no-hitter, a game he called, "the best I've ever pitched" was filled with drama at the end. The Cubs led 4-0 but Jones walked the first three Pirate batters to face him in the ninth. He then needed only 12 pitches to strike out Dick Groat, Roberto Clemente and Frank Thomas for the no-hitter.

QB Dave Steele Aids San Rafael Title Clincher

San Rafael High School's freshman football team clinched a tie for the Marin County Athletic League championship by defeating Terra Linda 13-6 yesterday at San Rafael.

Quarterback Dave Steele threw a 60-yard touchdown pass and ran for a 10-yard touchdown for the winners.

San Rafael's junior varsity shut out Drake 21-0 at San Rafael.

Raiders Two TD Picks Tomorrow

NEW ORLEANS (UPI) —The Oakland Raiders may be two touchdown favorites to beat New Orleans Sunday but at least one Saint—Jim Hanifan—isn't impressed.

"All those big teams are alike," said the New Orleans middle linebacker. "They can be had. We beat Oakland pretty easy in an exhibition game in 1970 while I was with the Packers. I didn't think they were that good."

The game will be televised on Channels 3 and 4, beginning at 11 a.m.

While Hanifan beat the drums Saints coach J. D. Roberts sounded a warning call from the other side.

"The Raiders are the most aggressive team we'll play this season," said Roberts. "They do everything well and they beat you with the big play."

Roberts has named Edd Hargett to start at quarterback in place of rookie Archie Manning. Hargett took over last Sunday against Washington and barring injury he figures to go all the way this Sunday.

Manning has a pulled thigh muscle and while he worked out during the week, Roberts is reluctant to rush him back into service.

Also hurting on the New Orleans side is defensive end Richard Neal with an ankle injury.

The Raiders are relatively healthy but one "able" body who won't see action—in fact he isn't even in New Orleans— is wide receiver Eldridge Dickey.

Coach John Madden suspended Dickey Friday after the player missed practice two days running.

Madden declined to discuss Dickey's situation other than to confirm he "is off the squad and didn't make the trip to New Orleans."

Drew Buie, a member of the Raiders three years, has been activated to take Dickey's place at wide receiver. Dickey got his chance to play when regular Rod Sherman hurt an ankle two weeks ago.

Buie hasn't caught a pass this season and has only three receptions in two previous years.

"I've been waiting for a chance to start for a long time," said Buie. "Now, I have to make the most of it."

Oakland goes into Sunday's game—the first ever against New Orleans—with a 5-1-1 record in the AFC West. The Saints are 2-4-1 in the NFC West.

While New Orleans is out of the running for a division title the Raiders are tied in their division with the Kansas City Chiefs.

"Obviously, a victory means more to us than to them," said Madden, a man who never puts much stock in odds and pointspreads.

Rangers Wallop Seals, 8-1

OAKLAND (UPI) —Jean Ratelle, Rod Gilbert and Vic Hadfield, pro hockey's highest scoring line, have completed a triumphant march through California.

That potent New York Ranger trio accounted for five goals and nine points Friday night in an 8-1 rout of the California Golden Seals who absorbed their worst pasting of the young season. It also was the first tarnish for the Seals to end a five-game unbeaten streak.

Wayne Carleton scored for California on a breakaway with 2:43 remaining in the second period to rob netminder Gilles Villemure of a shutout.

Ratelle, Gilbert and Bruce MacGregor each chipped in with two goals to lead the Rangers' potent attack which has piled up 56 goals in 13 games.

49er Defensive Tackles Hurting On Eve Of Game

BLOOMINGTON, Minn. (UPI) — The San Francisco 49ers hope for the best but fear the worst in their game Sunday against the Minnesota Vikings. (The game will be televised on Channels 5 and 10 beginning at 1 p.m.)

Ordinarily, they would be going into the game full of confidence but injuries to key players on their defensive unit have chilled things a bit.

Even before injury to Charlie Krueger, Earl Edwards and Stan Hindman, three of the stars on San Francisco's front four, the Vikings were three-point favorites.

Krueger is running with a pulled hamstring, Edwards has a pulled groin muscle and Hindman had fluid removed from one of his knees Wednesday.

All three are expected to play Sunday but probably at less than full speed. Any reduction in effectiveness would hurt San Francisco's chances because it has been the club's front four that has kept the 49ers in business this season. For instance, the defense has sacked opposing quarterbacks a league leading 29 times in seven games.

The good news for San Francisco is that defensive ends Cedrick Hardman and Tommy Hart are healthy.

The Vikings, too, rely a lot on their defense. That unit has allowed only 59 points in seven games. Minnesota goes into Sunday's game with a 6-1 record and the lead in the NFC central division. The 49ers are on top of the NFC west with a 5-2 mark.

While the San Francisco offense rates near the top in the 26-team NFL, Minnesota's shock troops rank 11th. But the Vikes have found ways to score enough points to win, and that's the name of the game.

Gary Cuozzo did not play last week in a 17-10 victory over the New York Giants but should be able to go against San Francisco. If he can't or is limited, then Norm Snead will take over at quarterback as he did last Sunday.

Tight end Stu Voigt has a knee injury but should be able to play. Running back Dave Osborn also has a tender knee, but he, too, should be in uniform.

Sunday's game is the first of a string of "toughies" for the 49ers, who last year defeated the Vikings in the first round of the playoffs.

San Francisco leads Los Angeles by a half game in the west while the Vikings have a full game lead on Chicago in the central.

Warriors To Face Lakers

OAKLAND (UPI)—It will be a different Los Angeles Laker team that will face the red-hot Golden State Warriors tonight at the Coliseum-Arena.

Jerry West is back off the injured list and ready to resume his popping for the Lakers who are a game behind leaders Golden State in the National Basketball Association.

West is one of the premier shooters and playmakers in the NBA. His loss was felt last Sunday when the Warriors upended the Lakers 109-105 for one of their rare victories in the Forum.

Golden State has won five in a row. Top scorer Cazzie Russell, who rode the bench for the New York Knicks last season, attributes the success to "tremendous cohesiveness."

"We're really pulling together," he said. "And not just on the court. Fritz Williams and Jeff Mullins are helping me look for a home. Everybody cares about everybody else."

The Lakers will be without Elgin Baylor who retired from the game earlier this week.

RAMOS DISQUALIFIED

Dazed Carrasco Awarded Crown

MADRID (UPI) —Spanish boxing fans reacted in stunned disbelief Friday night as a Nigerian referee saved Spain's Pedro Carrasco from an almost certain knockout by disqualifying Mando Ramos of Los Angeles for hitting below the belt in their world lightweight title fight.

The verdict gave ex-sailor Carrasco, 28, the vacant World Boxing Council (WBC) title and made him the first Spaniard to be a world champion since Jose Legra lost the featherweight crown in 1969.

The 14,000 fans never exploded into the burst of joy which usually greets Spanish sports victories. Carrasco himself was too dazed from the punishment handed out by Mexican-born Ramos in 11 rounds to fully realize that he had been proclaimed world champion.

All he gave was a weak grin. In the dressing room later he solemnly acknowledged that "the world fell on top of me" when Ramos, 22, sent him to the floor with a smart left cross in the first round for the first of four knockdowns. But he did insist he got hit below the belt and thus deserved victory.

Carrasco weighed 134 3-4 pounds and Ramos 135.

The fight was stopped by referee Samuel Odubote, a 42-year-old electrical engineer refereeing his first world title bout, as the fighters came out of their corners for the 12th of the scheduled 15 round fight in Madrid's Sports Palace.

Ramos, unmarked except for a slightly puffed left eye, looked confident and seemed to wear a cocky smile in the corner of his mouth.

With good reason —Carrasco had taken two counts of eight in the 10th round and looked groggy and wobbly-legged throughout the 11th, which he finished by slipping from a clinch to the floor. The two fighters did not trade another punch.

Odubote sent them back to their corners, and Ramos started dancing up and down laughing, obviously expecting that the referee would stop the fight to award him a technical knockout.

The smile froze on his face as the referee briefly consulted officials, then called the fighters and raised Carrasco's arm.

Ramos' manager Gene McCoy said he had "never seen anything like this."

"I knew it was tough to win a fight in Spain," he added. "I knew you had to flatten your opponent to win —but you don't even get a chance to hit him."

Odubote, upholding his judgment, said later, "Everyone could see" that Ramos hit Carrasco below the belt. "I had warned Ramos earlier in the fight," he added.

A dejected Ramos said he "can't believe it ... I had it won and knocked the Spaniard down four times.

"He was finished. I did not think he could take that much punishment. If I had won the fight the way he won it, I wouldn't feel like a champion. If he does not offer me a return fight, I'll never consider him a champ."

Ramos took control of the fight from the start. He had Carrasco on the floor in the first, in the eighth and twice for counts of eight in the 10th. At the end of the 11th Ramos wrestled the Spaniard to the floor in a corner clinch.

Carrasco's victory meant that there are two world lightweight champions —himself and Ken Buchanan of Scotland. Buchanan was stripped of his crown by the WBC earlier this year for refusing to meet Carrasco. He is still World Boxing Association (WBA) lightweight champ.

QB Happy Skins Face Weak Foe

By U.P. INTERNATIONAL

Every National Football League coach should have George Allen's quarterbacking woes.

The Washington Redskins mentor faces the cellar-dwelling Philadephia Eagles tomorrow in D.C. Stadium and a happy dilemma.

The former Los Angeles Rams boss has the NKL's leading passer in San Francisco 49er castoff Bill Kilmer and his predecessor Sonny Jurgensen in reserve.

The Redskins reactived Jurgensen Friday to play in an unaccustomed role of understudy behind the Cinderella signal caller from UCLA, Kilmer.

Jurgensen, coming off the injury list after sustaining a broken shoulder in a pre-season contest, can only wait until Kilmer is banged up or falters.

These are the only two ways Jurgensen will see much action, because Allen emphasized Friday that Kilmer would remain the number one field general. The skins are 14 point favorites.

In other games Sunday, Kansas City is 14 over the New York Jets, Oakland is 14 over New Orleans, Detroit six over Denver, Cleveland and Pittsburgh are pick 'em, Dallas is six over St. Louis, Minnosota by 4 over San Francisco, Chicago is six over Green Bay and Miami 17 over Buffalo.

Also Atlanta is four over Cincinnati, San Diego and the New York Giants are pick 'em, Houston is five over New England and, on Monday night, Baltimore is six over Los Angeles.

Terra Linda Hosts Winless St. Ignatius

In a normal year, some sort of mythical Bay Area championship might have been riding on the upcoming game between Terra Linda and St. Ignatius of San Francisco. But this is not a normal year.

The two high schools meet tonight at 8 o'clock at San Rafael High's field, with the host Trojans apparently out of the Marin County Athletic League race for the first time in years.

But the visiting Wildcats, usually a power in the tough West Catholic Athletic League, have fallen on even harder times. They are winless at 0-6-1, with an offense that has scored one touchdown or less in six of their seven games.

"They are big, strong and physical," said Terra Linda coach Don Lucas, "but they have a very simple offense and defense. We will throw a lot against them and we'll gang up to try and stop their running."

Terra Linda has enough injuries to drive most coaches up the wall, but Lucas is calm. "We have good depth, and it will be a good chance for some of these kids on the second team to play," he said.

Mike Sabel is out for the year with a hip pointer, and will be replaced at split end by Rich Nicholes and at defensive end by Larry Chiaroni. Defensive halfback Jeff Leaird strained ligaments in practice and will be lost for the season, with Greg Beltran replacing him. Tim Buckley has a bad back and will be replaced at safety by Pete Corbett, although he'll still start at flanker.

Reserve safety Mike Corrick and reserve guard Mike Finn will be lost for the year with broken collarbone and pinched nerve, respectively, and reserve guard Bill Hobbs will miss this game with the flu.

Terra Linda pits its main strengths against St. Ignatius' weaknesses. The Trojans' passing, with Kevin Donohoe at quarterback, is the best in the MCAL, while the Wildcats' secondary is vulnerable. The Trojans' defense is the best overall in the league, and St. Ignatius has been less than spectacular on offense.

Terra Linda's lineups:

Terra Linda (Offense): SE Rich Nicholes, LT Steve Rowell, LG Mark Sullivan, C John Loberg, RG Brian Jordan, RT Larry Madden, RE Wes Emerson, QB Kevin Donohoe, TB Sean Casey, FB Doug Long, FLK John Buckley. (Defense): LE Emerson, LT Loberg, MG Trygg Anderson, RT Madden, RE Larry Chiaroni, LLB Jordan, RLB Steve Withers, LHB Nicholes, RHB Greg Beltran, S Pete Corbett, M Paul Berry.

Trevino Starts Bid To Catch Maxwell

By U.P. INTERNATIONAL

MEXICO CITY — A hot battle was brewing between Billy Maxwell and Lee Trevino today as the 70 surviving participants in the Mexican Open golf tournament began play in the third round.

Maxwell, of Jacksonville, Fla., was the leader with an 11-under-par 133 after 36 holes. Trevino, the "Super Mex" who is after his fourth national open title in one year, was second with 136.

Pacing

INGLEWOOD — Albatross, starting from the second tier, raced to a 3½ length victory last night in the $50,000 Western Pace at Hollywood Park as he scored his 24th win of the year and increased his 1971 earnings to more than $500,000.

The 3-year-old pacing sensation sped the mile in 1:57 4/5 to the roaring approval of a crowd of 19,200.

Football

LONG BEACH — Terry Metcalf scored three touchdowns last night to lead Cal State Long Beach to a 30-13 victory over Fresno State to move the 49ers into first place in the Pacific Coast Athletic Association. Cal State is 4-0, Fresno 3-1.

Track

BOSTON — The Boston Athletic Association Games, the oldest indoor track meet in the United States, has been canceled because of low interest and high costs.

The action, leaves the city without a major track meet for the first time in 91 years.

General

NEW YORK — A 67-year-old security guard, Harold Wagner, was in serious condition at St. Clare's Hospital today after being stabbed in the back during a post-fight riot last night at Madison Square Garden's Felt Forum.

OAKLAND — A Superior Court jury has awarded $475,000 in damages to University of California graduate student Wayne Brooks, who lost a leg after being injured in an intramural touch football game in 1968.

The panel ruled yesterday the UC Board of Regents was negligent in the way the game was officiated and doctors on the Berkeley campus and the UC Medical Center in San Francisco were guilty of medical malpractice.

Bad News For Wells And Dickey

OAKLAND (UPI) —Oakland Raiders wide receivers Eldridge Dickey and Warren Wells got some bad news Friday.

Coach John Madden suspended Dickey, the No. 1 draft choice in 1969, for at least two weeks for undisclosed "disciplinary reasons." Dickey missed practice Wednesday and Thursday and was reportedly late to at least two other sessions. Drue Buie was activated to replace Dickey.

Wells, meanwhile, was recommended for a stay in a California state prison other than San Quentin after several weeks of evaluation at the reception guidance center at Vacaville. Wells was imprisoned after his probation was revoked for an assault in a Beaumont, Tex., bar.

College Of Marin Harriers Triumph

The College of Marin cross-country team won a triangular meet yesterday in Belmont as Mike Arago set a new course record of 20:29.8 on the hilly four-mile layout.

The score was Marin 26, Solano 44, Skyline 53. College of Marin's conference record is 6-1, with the conference meet coming up Saturday.

Drake Booters Win; Get First Place Share

Drake High School's soccer team defeated San Marin, 1-0, yesterday to pull into a tie for the Marin County Athletic League lead with San Rafael.

San Rafael was held to a 0-0 tie by Terra Linda. Drake and San Rafael each have 9-1-2 records for 20 points.

Doug Harnsberger scored the one goal for Drake. Dave Harvard scored two goals and Carl Bettinger one as Redwood drubbed Tamalpais, 3-0. The other MCAL game saw Novato whipping Marin Catholic, 5-0.

NBA ROUNDUP

Bucks Tip Bulls, Keep Their Lead

By U. P. INTERNATIONAL

It's the same old story in the National Basketball Association's Midwest Division. No matter how well the other three teams play, the Milwaukee Bucks always seem to play just a little better.

The Bucks maintained their lead in the Midwest's "Suicide Division" race Friday night, bouncing back in the fourth period to defeat the Chicago Bulls 104-102. The victory left Milwaukee two games ahead of Chicago with Detroit 3 1-2 out and Phoenix a half game further back.

The division is termed suicide since the last place team, Phoenix, with a 5-5 record, could lead another division and would be well placed in the other two. Last season's last place finisher—Detroit—had one of the best records in the NBA but was lost in the power shuffle.

Kareem Jabbar scored 11 of his game high 33 points during a 21-8 spurt early in the fourth quarter that boosted the Bucks ahead. The Bucks held on to win despite a strong finishing effort by Chicago's Bob Weiss, who hit 12 of his 30 points in the last 12 minutes. Bobby Dandridge added 20 for Milwaukee and Bob Love hit for 29 for the Bulls.

In other NBA action, Boston edged Detroit 103-102, Seattle downed New York 101-97, Los Angeles beat Baltimore 110-96, Buffalo tripped Atlanta 122-117 in overtime and Phoenix drubbed Cleveland 107-87.

John Havlicek's 35-foot basket at the final buzzer lifted the Celtics over Detroit and spoiled the coaching debut of Earl Lloyd, who replaced Bill Van Breda Kolff earlier this week. Havlicek's basket came after Jimmy Walker who had 34 points for the Pistons, had put Detroit ahead 102-101 with three seconds left.

Jo Jo White, who set up Havlicek's game winning basket, was high scorer for the Celtics with 29 points while Walker led the Pistons.

Player-Coach Lenny Wilkens hit five consecutive free throws in the last 2 1-2 minutes to boost the SuperSonics past New York. Seattle battled back from a 15-point deficit to beat the Knicks as Pete Cross sparked the rally.

Gail Goodrich scored 19 of his game-high 31 points in the first quarter as the Lakers downed Baltimore. Jim McMillian added 22 for Los Angeles while Jack Marin led the Bullets with 30.

Randy Smith scored seven points during the overtime period to spark Buffalo over the Hawks. Smith, playing his finest game as a pro, led all scorers with 35 points and fellow rookie Elmore Smith had 26. George Trapp, also a rookie, led the Atlanta attack with 34.

The losses for Baltimore and Atlanta left them tied for the Central Division lead despite 3-8 records.

Clem Haskins and Dick Van Arsdale combined for 47 points and Lamar Green had 22 rebounds as Phoenix whipped the Cavaliers. The Suns, playing without Connie Hawkins, took an early lead and controlled the game. Bobby Washington was tops for Cleveland with 19.

sive coach Phil Avilla smiled, "some defense, huh. We got them, and so did our secondary. How do you like White's two interceptions? I wonder what they think about our secondary now. You know, it really is a good one."

Muster, agreeing with Avilla's statement added: "we kind of feel that if the opposing team puts the ball in the air, we've got a good shot at picking it off."

In addition to lauding White plus his offensive stalwarts, Duncan and Farrar, Muster gave kudos to Bessee and defenders Dirk Correnti and Mike Cook. "Correnti really hit them good, and Cook did well in holding up the right side of the line."

The entire Bulldog defense looked solid, according to losing coach Bob Franceschini. The veteran mentor pointed out, "you can't afford to make this many mistakes against a team like San Rafael and expect to win. We just got the tar kicked out of us."

The score by quarters:

NOVATO

ried four times in the drive for 41 yards, including the five-yard TD burst.

Following the kickoff, quarterback Bob Brown led Redwood through the air to its first score, going 69 yards in seven plays. Brown, having his best throwing day of the year for the Giants, stood up to the Hornet rush and authoritatively fired a 25-yard spiral to Mike Connor for the touchdown. Brown passed for the two-point conversion, and the Giants were back in the game.

An inspired Giant defense stalled Novato after the kickoff and on fourth down, the center snap sailed over punter Magers' head. The stocky, 5-foot-10 senior ran the ball down, and got off a shaky punt under pressure from the Redwood defensive line.

Brown alternated runners Mark Asiano, Daryl Edralin and Connor in the subsequent 31-yard march, with Connor taking the pitch and going outside for a four-yard score. Steve McGee added the kick, and with barely nine minutes left in the game, the Giants were in the driver's seat, 21-15.

"Redwood's a good football team. They came roaring back on us even down 14-0," Scott praised.

Behind for the first time, Scott said the Hornets took it matter-of-factly and went out to do something about it. "The offense met on the sidelines; there were no complaints. They just said 'We gotta score,' and they went out and did."

Magers topped the clinching drive with a two-yard off-tackle dive that put the Hornets in front for good.

The true drama of the game came with two minutes left, and Redwood in Novato territory. On fourth and three from the 45, Brown faked to the back coming through the middle, and then turned to give it to the other running back on a counter. But Greg Straw, an offensive standout for Novato at end "Shot in so quick he knocked the first back into the quarterback, and then Jeff Eisenhauer really cleaned him," said Scott.

Taking over on downs, the Hornets ran out the remaining minute to clinch a share in their first title since 1968.

Roark, subdued after the loss, said he was proud of how his team played. "We really had a helluva year," he said quietly.

In the upcoming battle between Novato and San Rafael, Roark said he would tab the Bulldogs. "They're a lot more balance than Novato," he said. The coach acknowledged Moroski's and Mager's ball handling skills, but said that the potent San Rafael offense would prevail.

The Giants play the Tam High Indians next week, possibly without starting lineman Ellard Roush, who may have a fractured thumb. Roark said, "We'll be a little down — we have to be — but it's the coaches' job to make sure the kids are up" for the game that would clinch the Tamalpais High School District trophy.

Henderson Rolls 705 3-Game Set

Bill Henderson rolled a 705 three-game series at Country Club Bowl in San Rafael to lead Marin County bowlers last week, while Shirley Johnson's 644 at Country Club topped all women.

Henderson, a truck driver who sports a 205 average, was 12 pins ahead of Gene Helbing of Country Club. Top man at Greenbrae Lanes was Ed Henry, 685, and top men at Nave Lanes were John Doherty and Gene Vasco, 601.

Marilyn Epidendio's 626 was the top women's score at Greenbrae, and Penny Tauscher recorded a 620. Gerri Gravel's 583 was the best at Nave.

The honor roll:

WHITE SOUTHERN CONGREGATION

Black Minister Finds Acceptance

OAK RIDGE, Tenn. (UPI)—The one thing members of Kern Memorial United Methodist Church do not want is to be pictured as heroes, as having done something outstandingly praiseworthy.

"The only thing we really were concerned with," says Paul Wilkinson, lay leader of the church, "was getting a Christian minister. If the pastor were truly Christian, there was nothing we could do but accept him. That's the way the people here feel."

And it was in this context that the Rev. Walter Willis, a 40-year-old native of Sylacauga, Ala., became the first black pastor of an all-white Methodist church in the southeast, in July.

"There was obviously a lot of discussion," Wilkinson said in an interview, recalling last spring when the district superintendent came to the leadership of Kern Memorial and asked them if they would work with a black minister.

Bishop L. Scott Allen, the first black head of the Holston United Methodist Conference, which covers east Tennessee and a small area of southwest Virginia, was looking for a white church which would work with a black minister.

"We were among 25 or so churches under consideration," said Charles Kite, chairman of the administrative board of the church.

A special meeting of the board was called, and most of its 50 members were there, plus some other members of the congregation. The proposal was openly and thoroughly discussed and put to a vote by secret ballot.

"I think the vote was 38 to 6 in favor," Wilkinson said, and with that approval the "venture in faith," as Willis calls it, was launched.

"Naturally we had some doubts," Kite said. But for the church leaders, there was a ready-made out, anyway—built right into the structure of the Methodist Church, the practice of moving ministers around every two or three years.

"If the pastor was not an ideal match, black or white, it was not going to break the church," Wilkinson said. "We'd had experience with white ministers who were not always an ideal match.

"If anybody was taking a chance, it was much more on the part of the preacher than on the part of the church membership."

Willis came to Oak Ridge after three years in the division of curriculum resources of the United Methodist board of education in Nashville.

He had entered the ministry in 1949, had served as minister and dean of men at Huston-Tillotson College in Austin, Tex., and as minister at Claflin College in Orangeburg, S.C. He had been pastor of a number of churches in Alabama and Tennessee, after his start in Evergreen, Ala.

He liked what he was doing in Nashville. And the decision to come here was not easily made.

For Willis, the venture began with a request that he take the appointment from Bishop Allen.

"If he had not ever asked me, I would have been happy," Willis admits. "A lot of time was spent in prayer. It was basically the children with whom I was concerned."

There are three Willis children, Henry Walter, 13; Timothy John, 9, and Stephen Edward, 6. In addition, Mrs. Willis' mother, Mrs. Lula Garrett of Greenville, S.C., is a member of the family which moved into the parsonage near the church in a white neighborhood.

"I had the feeling that I just could not say no," Willis says. "It was a challenge, and not an easy thing to do. It allowed me to put my faith on the line, even though I would do something that might be risky."

Willis says his main concern was not for himself but with how the children would adjust to being removed from a basically black environment in Nashville, where they had friends, and put into a white environment where they would have to start over.

Three months is too short a time to really evaluate the final outcome of the move, but Willis has found his "venture in faith" a rewarding experience so far.

There have been no threatening phone calls, no nasty letters, only one small incident which could be interpreted as hostile—a neighbor who asked that the Willis children not come into his yard.

There were some who found the move hard to accept, but even they came to church and gave their new pastor a look.

"This is a very open church," says Willis, "with a strong spiritual quality." And, although many were doubtful about the "publicity" a news story would give the church, on the Sunday this reporter attended services the congregation was warm, friendly and generous with the new pastor.

"We have a rather broad cross-section of the community in this congregation," Wilkinson said of Kern Memorial, which has about 853 members—third largest among Methodist congregations in the city.

The church has a history of greater than average social concern, Kite said, and this may be a factor in its acceptance of Willis.

"We're active with Youth Haven, a temporary shelter for wards of the court. Some Sunday school classes regularly visit Eastern State Psychiatric Hospital at Knoxville to visit the elderly or to meet with drug addicts," Kite said.

"We were asked by the Holston Conference to contribute $2,600 to the Fund for Reconciliation—a $20 million program to help the economically disadvantaged. The church contributed $6,200."

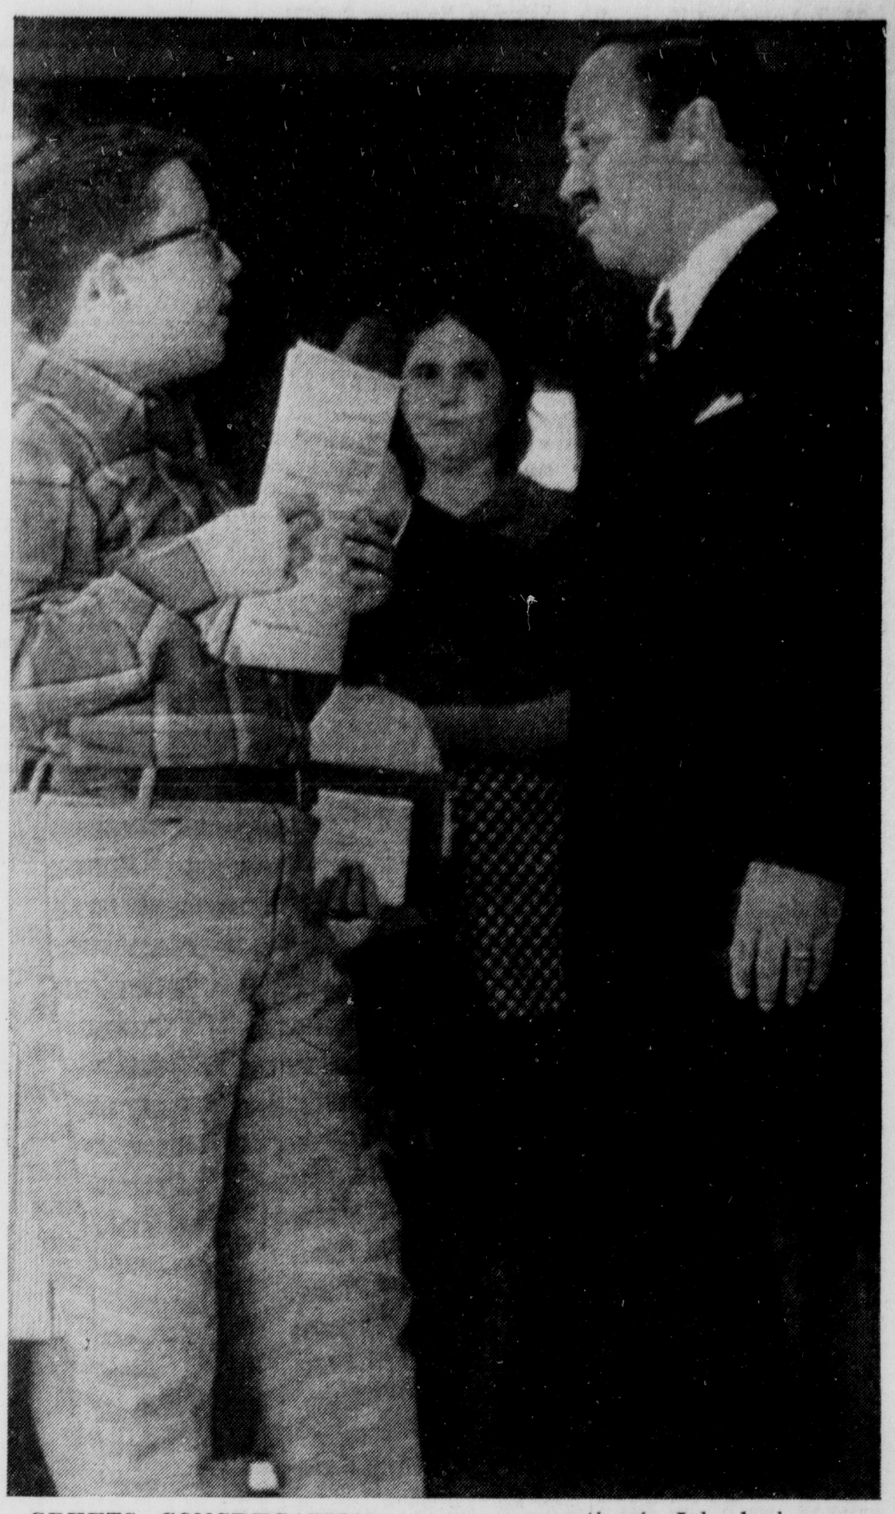
Willis hasn't performed any weddings or officiated at any funerals, yet. "But I'm not sensitive about that," he said. He has been sought out by members seeking counseling, "and you don't ask counsel of someone you don't trust."

As to the future, Willis says he would not hesitate to go to another all-white church after his experience with Kern Memorial. And he believes Kern will be a different church for the experience, even though it may not have another black minister for many years.

"This church won't become a dumping ground for black ministers," Willis said bluntly.

Whether it could have succeeded so well in another city in the south is hard to say. Oak Ridge, born with the atomic age, is not a typical southern town. Less than 10 per cent black, with higher educational and economic levels than other east Tennessee cities, it has to be different.

"But not that much," said lay leader Paul Wilkinson.



GREETS CONGREGATION — Rev. Walter Willis greets members of the Kern Memorial Church in Oak Ridge, Tenn. When he became pastor of the congregation in July, he became the first black pastor in an all-White Methodist Church in the South.

Union Movement Slowing Down

By LOUIS CASSELS
U.P. INTERNATIONAL

The church union movement, which seemed to be breezing along under full sail a few years ago, has fallen into the doldrums.

If not entirely becalmed, it is at best drifting at slow speed and in uncertain direction.

Look, for example, at the Consultation on Church Union, through which nine Protestant denominations have been endeavoring for nearly a decade to unite. COCU started out with brilliant leadership and great expectations. Its first meetings were an exciting experience in mutual discovery.

Episcopalians, Disciples of Christ, Methodists, Presbyterians and Congregationalists learned that once they got past semantics and slogans, they really were very close together in their understanding of the Bible, the sacraments and the ministry of the Church.

Then the theologians, the creative thinkers and innovators, were shoved aside by church politicians and bureaucrats. COCU meetings in later years bogged down in endless disputes over organizational detail: who's going to have the real power?

At its most recent meeting, in Denver last month, COCU spoke brave words about committing the "coming united church" to such worthy social causes as racial justice. But even its always-hopeful general secretary, Dr. Paul A. Crow Jr., declined to predict, at a reporter's invitation, that the united church will be a reality by 1980.

But it evidently will take some sort of miracle of revitalization for COCU ever to achieve the kind of united Protestant church that was visualized when this ambitious project was launched in the early '60's.

It may be that the ecumenical movement has run into trouble because the people who started it tried to work from the top down, instead of from the bottom up. And the most hopeful aspect of the Denver COCU meeting is that it glimpsed this possibility.

One of its recommendations to member denominations calls for experiments with church union at the local church or community level. For example, a Methodist, an Episcopal and a Presbyterian church serving the same neighborhood might "cluster" together in a unified parish, perhaps retaining separate worship services at first, but sharing other things, including ministers, office work, fund drives, youth programs, etc.

This kind of "trial marriage" at the local level could generate the same enthusiasm for ecumenicity at the grass roots which once animated the high denominational councils represented by COCU.

It is a deeply stimulating experience for Christians of different traditions to find out from actual contact how much they have in common —as well as how much they can learn from each other.

Here is an answer —perhaps the only answer —to the apathy which laymen and parish clergy generally have displayed toward national church union plans such as COCU. Shared activities in an ecumenical "cluster parish" inevitably would lead, in time, to shared worship.

And it is in worshipping together that Christians come to realize most keenly how scandalous their divisions are, not only to the world, but even more important, to the Lord whose last earthly prayer for his followers were that "they may be one."

Ordination Held For New Pastor

Rev. Tom Earl Prevost was ordained into the Baptist ministry last Sunday at services at Trinity Baptist Mission in Fairfax.

The ordination was conducted by Dr. Jerry Ashby, pastor of the First Baptist Church in El Sobrante. The report of the ordination council was given by Earl Nestor of Tiburon.

Rev. Edd Brown, area missionary, charged the candidate and Dr. J. K. Eakins, professor of Old Testament and archaeology at Golden Gate Baptist Theological Seminary, delivered the prayer of ordination.

The new minister is a second year master of divinity student at Golden Gate and has held the mission post since Oct. 1.

The Faiths Of Court Nominees

WASHINGTON, D.C. (LC) — William Hubbs Rehnquist, nominated to the Supreme Court by President Nixon, is a member of the Lutheran Church in America.

Rehnquist, 47, a U.S. assistant attorney general, was named in late October together with Leslie F. Powell, Jr., 64, of Richmond, Va. as a former president of the American Bar Association. He is a Presbyterian.

If confirmed by the Senate, they will fill the seats vacated by the late Justice Hugo L. Black and Justice John M. Harlan.

Statement Sought On Continued Ties

ST. PAUL (LC) — The Church Council of the American Lutheran Church has acted to clarify its relationship with the Lutheran Church-Missouri Synod.

At stake is the continuation of pulpit and altar fellowship between the two bodies, placed in jeopardy by the Missouri Synod's opposition to the ALC's approval of women pastors.

The Church Council voted on Oct. 21 "to ask for a formal statement on the understanding of the basis for fellowship from the Lutheran Church-Missouri Synod in order to ascertain whether or not the Missouri Synod has changed its position since the declaration (approving fellowship with the ALC) in 1969."

Formal fellowship — providing for the interchange of pastors and intercommunion by members of local congregations — was established after more than a decade of negotiations between the two churches, which have a combined membership of more than five million.

The ALC officially declared fellowship with the Missouri Synod at its biennial convention in 1968 and the LCMS reciprocated at its convention in 1969.

In 1970 the ALC approved the ordination of women and now has one woman pastor. Last July the Missouri Synod asked the ALC to reconsider its decision to ordain women and urged its own congregations to cease further implementation of fellowship until the issue has been resolved.

Meeting for the first time since the LCMS convention, the ALC's Church Council, legislative body for the church between general conventions, reiterated its position that ordination of women does not violate the teaching of the Scriptures.

The question, it said, "lies within the freedom of the administration of the churches," and "should not be divisive of fellowship."

The ALC's position continued to be, the Council added, that the basis for fellowship is "adherence to the Holy Scriptures as the Word of God in all matters of faith and life and acceptance of the confessions of the Lutheran Church."

The statement said the ALC understands that agreement in "doctrines and attitudes toward practice expressed in the Lutheran Confessions are both necessary and sufficient for fellowship."

The ALC further understood, in approving fellowship both with the Missouri Synod and with the Lutheran Church in America, the statement said, that "questions with regard to practice and other interpretations of Scripture not specified in the Confessions could remain matters of continuing conversation and interest without being either divisive or determinative of fellowship."

Archdiocese Sets Fund Day

Sunday, Nov. 21, has been declared Human Development Campaign Collection Sunday in the Archdiocese of San Francisco of which Marin County is a member.

Funds collected will be used for the Roman Catholic Bishops Fund for self-help projects among the nation's poor.

The day has also been designated for collection of clothing for the needy, an annual event which is marked during Thanksgiving week.

The Baptism in the Holy Spirit is not for the personal spiritual status, but to spread the GOOD NEWS of Jesus' redemption to all.
Wake Up To Jesus!

Is Your Church in Need of Reformation?
Test it with these five theses:
T F The Bible is without error in everything it says.
T F God declared mankind not guilty because of Christ.
T F Jesus Christ is true God and true man.
T F Faith in Christ alone without works saves.
T F Religious fellowship requires full agreement in doctrine.
According to the Word of God, these statements are true. See John 10:35, Romans 5:18, Colossians 2:9, Ephesians 2:8, and Romans 16:17.
If any of the teachings of the Bible are not accepted as God's truth in your church and your protests prove useless, He advises you to find a church which holds Him and His Word pre-eminent.
We have such a church and invite you to share its blessings. Sunday service at present is at 7:30 p.m.

College Of Marin: Center Of New Growth

The College of Marin (center) stands at the hub of new growth in the lower Ross Valley. This photo, taken about seven months ago, omits many new projects which were started during the summer construction season. The concrete Corte Madera Creek channel (center left), part of a controversial flood control project, continued upstream this year to a point near the Ross Post Office. On the college campus, a new library was started as enrollment increased from 4,800 day students last year to 5,200 in 1971. Shown under construction in the photo is the recently completed science building (the large white building adjacent to the creek channel.) Following the creek downstream past the Tamalpais Retirement Center (center top), the photo shows undeveloped creeksides, but which are now covered with new apartment buildings. Other dominant features are San Quentin Prison (top left), the Tiburon Peninsula (top right), Larkspur's Magnolia Avenue (center right), Sir Francis Drake Boulevard (center left) and the hills of Kentfield (bottom left and right.)

'Twelfth Night' Plays At College

By JAMES E. WILLIAMS

Shakespearean gimmickry has almost become a byword in the Bay Area theatrical scene. It's surely been a syndrome at the College of Marin for the past six months.

Last night, James Dunn's Kentfield campus troupe opened its 1971-72 season with the Bard's "Twelfth Night."

Thinking that Shakespeare's prose wouldn't hold a candle, Dunn placed the setting of the romantic little comedy in the days of early California when the Spanish dons ruled the sprawling territory. If anything, the production was one of the most campy intrepertations of a Shakespeare comedy I've seen.

Possibly Dunn's tack was a carryover from his outstanding success with Shakepeare's "Taming of the Shrew" which made minor theatrical history at the Edinburgh Festival in Scotland last August.

"TWELFTH NIGHT" — A comedy by William Shakespeare. Presented by the College of Marin Drama Department. Directed by James Dunn; settings and costumes by Alonso D. Gonzalvez; lighting and construction by E. K. Schoon, and original music by Thomas W. Buckner. Principal cast members: Ann Long, Viola; Joel Blum, Sebastian; Reynold Acevedo, Antonio; Howard McMaster, Orsino; Pamela Contos, Olivia; Barry Bauman, Curio; Bette Besuner, Maria; J. W. Harper, Sir Toby Belch; Alan Kernan, Sir Andrew Aguecheek; Shelly Lipkin, Feste; William Childs, Father Fabian; William Childs, a sea captain; John Chapot, Valentine; Elwood Markham, first musician, and Mark DeGroft, second musician.

Whatever it was, the gimmickry fell rather short of what should come out of the talented Dunn. It seemed as if he was striving for an overpowering punch from scenery, lighting and costumes to offset a general lack of acting talent — so abundant in past years.

All was not lost, however, thanks to a marvelous protrayal by Robin Williams as Malvolio. His antics made the rather longish evening worthwhile. Had his characterization not worked, the production may well have fallen on its Shakespearean face.

Backing up Williams in the large roster in reasonable fashion were Joel Blum as Sebastian, one of the few actors on stage who didn't race through his lines so fast they were hard to catch; Alan Kernan as Sir Andrew Aguecheek; Bette Besuner as Maria, who made a saucy maid, and Barry Bauman as Curio.

While the part of Viola is rather tiresome in any version of this play, Ann Long didn't seem to grasp the boyishness of the twin role, nor did Palemla Contos as Oliva, J. W. Harper as Sir Toby Belch and Howard McMaster as Orsino measure up to expectations.

From a visual aspect, the production was stunning. The set was a masterpiece. Professional companies should take note from E. K. Schoon, who constructed the set on a design executed by Alonso D. Gonzalez, who also was responsible for the lavish costumes.

"Twelfth Night" will be repeated again today, tomorrow, Wednesday through next Sunday and from Nov. 17 to 20 at 8 p.m.

Mill Valley Man Pleads Innocence

John Campbell Collins, 23, of 146 Morningsun Avenue, Mill Valley, has pleaded innocent in Marin Municipal court to charges of possessing marijuana and possessing it for sale.

Preliminary hearing was set for Nov. 23.

Collins was arrested Oct. 26 at his residence where Marin County drug abuse agents said they found marijuana and hashish.

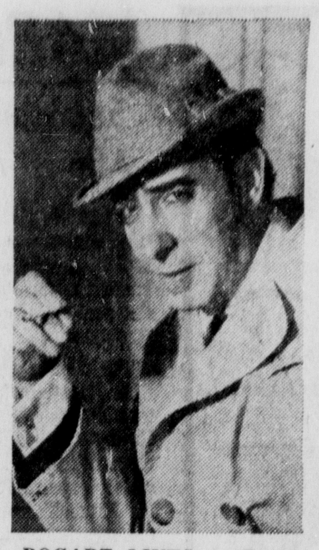
Thomas A. Paepke, 21, of Madison, Wis., who arrived at Collins' residence with $12,000 in cash while the agents were there, has pleaded innocent to possessing pot. A preliminary hearing has been set for Nov. 16 for Paepke.

Helpful Motorist Struck, Killed

GRAYSON, Ky. (UPI)—A motorist who stopped to help when he saw a pony killed by a truck was himself struck and killed by a car at the accident scene.

Police said the victim, Harold F. Bennett, 53, Huntington, W. Va., got out of his car on U. S. route 60, near this eastern Kentucky City, to help direct traffic around the accident.

Bennett was hit by a car driven by a 19-year-old youth.



BOGART LIVES — Tom Barker will play Humphrey Bogart in the comedy "Play It Again Sam," to be presented by the Actors Playhouse of Marin Dec. 10, 11 and 12 at the Marin Veterans Memorial Building. Curtain time is 8 p.m. the first two days and 7:30 p.m. on Dec. 12.

Solo Flight Around The World

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI)— Elgen Long, 44, headed toward the North Pole today on a solo flight over the four "crossroads of the geography of the world."

Long, a commercial pilot with 12,000 hours in the air, took off from San Francisco International Airport Friday in a twin-engine Piper Navajo for Fairbanks, Alaska.

His 20,000-mile, month-long schedule will carry him over the North and South poles as well as the prime and 180th meridians at the equator—the equivalents of an "East Pole" and "West Pole."

Long, who named his plane "Crossroads," said his craft would fly over the four "crossroads of the geography of the world."

"I always had this urge to go places," said Long, who lives in the San Francisco suburb of Woodside. "I always wanted to do it. Now, having the resources and abilities to do it, I feel it is almost mandatory."

An Unusual Show By Gestalt Fool

By KAY KSANDA

Last night a San Francisco-based theatrical company known as The Gestalt Fool performed a most unusual original show entitled "One Mind" at Sonoma State College, creating more of a "happening" than any kind of structured play.

With no stage set, little story pattern, and one impromptu nude scene, the audience could have felt it was either a great show or confusion theater.

Although the acting technique was ignored in spots, nobody could complain about the music and the voices. They were great, and here was (and is) their strength. Don Currie, as songwriter, actor, dancer, and singer, is all theater, with the other nine members of the acting commune right on the cusp of "professional."

The show, which will play again tonight in Ives Hall at 8 o'clock, has no director, producer or writer. To be "gestalt" they have to be themselves, and not separated from their audience. Therefore, they start the show sitting with the audience, announcing, in song, that they hope to do a good show.

The overture is not a chorus of dancing singers, but a real live bingo game with the audience, conducted by Neil King in a 19th century priest's cassock. The prize is a large bottle of wine which is meant to be shared. The jug is uncorked, and the potpourri of comic opera, comic tragedy, and outrageous parody begins.

"ONE MIND" — Presented by the theater group The Gestalt Fool. Written, directed, produced, and staged by the entire company. Members and cast: Don Currie, Pilar du Rem, Bret Davenport, Lorna McMurry, Shana Schwartz, Ron Bianco, Gail Anderson, Jerry Shreve, Neil Keane.

After each member of the cast introduces himself, the group starts off with a strange sketch of a woman riding a man's back. She chortles with fiendish glee as she kicks and lashes him. When she finally leaves him, he collapses. He dies, a victim of heroin.

The audience catches on. They are involved with pain. The cast switches to an institution for the insane. It's hilarious, but it's also real, and almost unkind to laugh.

Next, there's a duet about the Attica prison riot. Don Currie, in drag, plays a wild Jeanette McDonald singing lyrics composed from an aftermath article written by Vice President Agnew. This is in contrast to Neil Keane's lyrics from the intense prison account.

From this political wound, they swing into the audience's favorite improvisation "The Pirates of Amurrica," a Gilbert and Sullivan-type operetta about President Nixon and the economy, written and compiled by the entire group.

Don Currie, as Nixon, sings another very funny song. He starts off with something like:

"When the economy is weak, I generally start to freak. . ."

The situation is joined with the excellent voice of Pilar du Rem, who assumes the posture of a dramatic soprano to sing the ridiculous aria, "Oh, second car. . ."

Eventually the audience joins the show in a wild song and dance, prancing and wheeling:

"Life is a game that's played out of boredom, be what you choose, be what you see, set yourself free."

It was like dancing on a grave, but it was funny.

Mrs. Gandhi And Mrs. King Meet

WASHINGTON (UPI)—The widow of civil rights leader the Rev. Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. renewed her acquaintenance Friday with Indian Prime Minister Indira Gandhi and voiced her opposition to shipment of U.S. arms to Pakistan.

Mrs. Coretta Scott King, along with Rep. John Conyers Jr., D-mich., and congressional delegate Walter E. Fauntroy, D-D.C., met with Mrs. Gandhi at Blair House. The two women first met in 1959 before King's assassination in 1968.

"We had a very fruitful meeting," Mrs. King later told a news conference. "We expressed deep concern for the problems her country faces — the threat of war (with West Pakistan), the problem of human suffering."

Medic Alert Could Save Many More

One person in every five has some special medical problem not readily seen or recognizeable.

A person with a heart condition often does not show it. If he or she is involved in an accident or has a "fainting" spell, it is necessary that those who try to help be aware of the heart condition. If the patient is unconscious, how is anyone to know?

Dr. M. C. Collins of Turlock ran into this situation a couple of decades ago when a young girl suffered a minor cut on the finger. Under the circumstances, it was advisable to administer a tetanus shot to protect against that dreaded infection.

The doctor had no way of knowing that the girl was extremely allergic to tetanus antitoxin. The girl almost died.

Doctor Collins determined to find a way to protect against such tragedies.

HE FOUNDED MEDIC ALERT, the organization which keeps records of special medical problems and provides a Medic Alert bracelet which indicates the nature of the condition (i.e., epilepsy, diabetes, etc.) of the wearer.

The bracelet contains the toll-free number — reachable from anywhere on earth, where the wearer's medical record is instantaneously available.

Today, nearly a half million people wear Medic Alert identification tags. Medic Alert Foundation receives a couple of dozen letters per week from bracelet wearers who say they would not be writing had it not been for the identification bracelets they wear. Medic Alert makes it possible to give the patient with special needs the right treatment instantly, and — equally important — to avoid the wrong and perhaps fatal treatment.

The law of averages indicates that more than 40,000 Marin residents have special medical problems which must be known instantly in emergencies. Only a fraction of these special problem people are registered with Medic Alert.

Earlier this week, the Marin Association of Life Underwriters, headed by its president Jack G. Nixon, kicked off a campaign to encourage Medic Alert sign-ups.

Theirs is a worthy effort. It deserves support.

SMOG AND TRAFFIC congestion have led to general disenchantment with the automobile which previously had been regarded as one of civilization's most welcome advances.

When we become disenchanted, we usually grow angry and need to find an object on which to vent our anger by blaming it for our miseries.

Lo, the highway engineer! What better fellow to hold responsible for our traffic ills?

Unfortunately, in times past there were highway engineers who regarded highway expansion as their divinely appointed mission in life. They resented any and all criticism. They actively opposed anyone who offered any criticism (constructive or otherwise) of highway design and construction.

More recently, along came the Alan Hart kind of state highway engineer. He perceived himself not as an advocate of bigger and better highways but more as an instrument of executing public will.

If you (the public) want bigger and better highways, we will be glad to try to build them. If you don't want us to expand further, we will be glad to build somewhere else, where a road is wanted. That was more nearly the attitude of Alan Hart whose imminent retirement was announced this week.

ALL TOO OFTEN public hearings are held for the purpose of gathering testimony principally for or against a proposition.

Alan Hart approached a highway plan hearing with an open-minded view. He never seemed to be pushing one plan against another or pushing construction against no further construction. Rather, he regarded a hearing as a time and place to find out whether the rank and file of the public wanted a particular stretch of highway or not and, if they did, what kind of highway would the public most want.

As a result, he was very receptive to suggestions for more esthetically pleasing design and to proposals for more and better landscaping.

We face his retirement with some misgivings. We hope he is not replaced by an old style highway engineer who is going to tell us what we need and attempt to thrust it upon us whether we like it or not.

We hope that Alan Hart turns out to have been the first of a new breed whose first wish is to do what the rank and file of people want done.

Bouquets And Brickbats

BOUQUETS to all the winners in Tuesday's elections — and to the losers, too, for without losing candidates, voters would have no choice.

BOUQUETS to all who voted in those elections, and BRICKBATS to those eligible to vote who didn't bother — over 50 per cent in most parts of Marin.

BOUQUET to the Mill Valley City Council for finally getting going on removal of the earthslide that has blocked part of Miller Avenue for nearly three years.

BRICKBAT to the Marin County Youth Commission for its extremely poor judgement in allowing the first issue of Free Youth, which might have become a valuable printed expression for Marin teen-agers, to instead appear as just another journal of the foul-mouthed, smart-aleck minority.

Transit Developments Please Ex-Director

It has been a year since my family and I moved from Marin. We are a long way from the county but find it a difficult place to forget.

I have been following transportation developments in the county with great interest. I am particularly gratified with news of the impending introduction of commuter bus service by the Golden Gate Bridge, Highway and Transportation District. It is not often that an individual can identify with a specific project in the public sector that he can claim as his own or in which he has made a major contribution. Assembling the components of the transit system had its painful moments, but witnessing its implementation offers its own special reward.

The success of this new transportation venture is reasonably well assured by the competent staff assembled by the bridge district. With the operation of the new commuter bus system and the ferry, the district will have taken a long step toward fulfilling its promise to the citizens of Marin. It can now turn its full and undivided attention to the task of planning for the next stage of a long range transportation program for the Golden Gate Corridor. This, coupled with the opening of the BART system in 1972, will be watched carefully by transportation experts and administrators throughout the nation. It is an exciting time for Marin and the entire Bay Area.

Onassis Marriage Contract Little Different From Buchwald's

WASHINGTON — The chief steward of the Christina, Aristotle Onassis' yacht, has just written a book in which he says that Mr. Onassis and his wife, the former Jacqueline Kennedy, signed a marriage contract with 170 clauses in it.

According to the steward, Christian Kafarakis, the contract stipulates separate bedrooms for the couple, lays down the rules as to how much time the couple must spend together, and spells out financial arrangements. These include a $600,000 yearly allowance for Mrs. Onassis in addition to any gifts Mr. Onassis might give her, as well as a provision that if Mr. Onassis ever leaves his wife, Mrs. Onassis will receive the sum of $9.6 million for every year of their marriage.

If Mrs. Onassis were to leave Mr. Onassis, she would receive a lump sum of $18 million under the terms of the alleged contract. Mr. Onassis also is said to have provided $100 million in his will — for Mrs. Onassis.

A SPOKESWOMAN for Mrs. Onassis categorically and unequivocally denied that such a marriage contract exists and called the story nonsense.

I have no knowledge of whether such a contract does exist and shall leave Mr. Onassis and his ex-steward to fight that one out.

But I do know that marriage contracts, particularly in Europe, are not uncommon, and as a matter of fact since both my wife and I were living in Paris, when we wanted to get married, we signed one.

Our marriage contract, which has 169 clauses in it, was thrashed out over a period of months before the wedding was agreed to.

IT PROVIDES for the following, among other things:

— I have to spend half the year with my wife (she tried to hold out for seven months). This time can be broken up any way I want it. I am permitted to go on lectures, attend openings of Hilton Hotels, go to pro football games, and attend homecoming week ends. For every day less than six months that I don't spend with her, I have to give her $2.50 or its equivalent in trading stamps.

— I am committed under the terms of the contract to give my wife $600 a year for her pleasure, safety, clothes, hairdresser, cosmetics, and the care of the house. The $600 does not include gasoline for the car, providing she uses it on family business.

— IF I WANT to leave my wife, I must give her the sum of $50 for every year we have been married.

— If she wants to leave me, she will receive a flat settlement of $185.50.

— As long as we are living together, I must provide my wife with detergents, mops, plastic garbage bags and a lawnmower.

— I also am obligated to pay for the veterinarian in case we have a dog.

— While we are married, my wife has custody of the children all day and most evenings. For this she is given the extra sum of $10 a week.

— If we have a fight, I must be the one to sleep on the couch in the living room.

— I must also give her the sum of $5 if I pay too much attention to another girl at a party.

These are more or less the financial details of our marriage contract, and the only reason I'm revealing them at this time is that our cleaning woman just quit, and I understand she's going to sell the terms to the National Enquirer. It would embarrass my wife something terrible if the marriage agreements ever became public.

Senators Having Second Thoughts About 'Arizona Axis' On Court

WASHINGTON — The Arizona Axis is taking on new political power. The center is Sen. Barry Goldwater, the Republican candidate for President in 1964 who was defeated by a record plurality by Lyndon B. Johnson.

The deputy attorney general, Richard Kleindienst, formerly a Phoenix lawyer, was director of field operations for the Goldwater campaign and again for Richard Nixon in 1968. Kleindienst is widely regarded as the successor to John N. Mitchell when the attorney general changes hats and takes over direction of the Nixon drive for re-election. This is expected to occur toward the end of the year.

Now comes William H. Rehnquist, Kleindienst's good friend in Phoenix, nominated by President Nixon to one of the two vacancies on the Supreme Court of the United States. Kleindienst was responsible at the start of the Nixon administration for the selection of Rehnquist to be an assistant attorney general. Compared with the dubious choices that had previously been floated, Rehnquist and the other nominee, Lewis F. Powell Jr., looked like heirs of the great John Marshall. Their confirmation by the Senate was considered probable, if not certain.

BUT SECOND THOUGHTS, together with evidence of the strong bias of one of the nominees, insure a contest over Pehnquist. With civil rights activists preparing the case, the question is whether a man's strongly held views of six or seven years ago should disqualify him.

On his own initiative Rehnquist appeared before a Phoenix City Council meeting on June 15, 1964, to oppose a proposed ordinance prohibiting discrimination in hotels, restaurants, shops and other public places. After a tape recording of the statement that Rehnquist, then 40 years old, made before the council was unearthed by the St. Louis Post-Dispatch, the Justice Department gave it out.

"I venture to say," he told the council, "there has never been this sort of an assault on the institution (private property) where you are told not what you can build on your property but who can come on your property."

Rehnquist was one of only three opponents, while 30 testified in favor of the ordinance, which was unanimously approved by the council.

In 1967 Rehnquist wrote a letter to the Arizona Republican opposing reorganization of the Phoenix school system to achieve racial integration. "I think," he wrote "that we are no more dedicated to an 'integrated' society than we are to a 'segregated' society. We are instead dedicated to a free society in which each man is equal before the law."

IN 1951-52 REHNQUIST was law clerk to the late Justice Robert H. Jackson. He was later to charge that "unconscious slanting" by the law clerks influenced many cases the court was called on to decide. He described the group with which he served as "'left' of either the nation or the court." The "left wing" of the court, according to Rehnquist, was made up of Chief Justice Earl Warren, Justice William O. Douglas, and the late Justice Hugo L. Black.

At least four of the Democrats on the Senate Judiciary Committee want to hear Rehnquist on his earlier views. Sen. Sam J. Ervin Jr. may also take part in the interrogation, since Rehnquist has been an active defender of the stringent District of Columbia anti-crime law with its no-knock and bugging provisions. Ervin, a staunch libertarian, opposed some aspects of that law.

A question that transcends the issue of political and ideological bias is whether it is possible to find judges who put interpretation of the law above prejudice. One of the vacancies to be filled by the two nominations came with the resignation of Justice John Marshall Harlan. Harlan was rated, in the broad sense, a conservative. But his opinions showed a mastery of the law above and beyond whatever convictions he may have brought to the court.

It should surely not be too difficult to find distinguished men of the law of Harlan's caliber. That is the need if confidence in the judiciary is to be restored.

WINDOW ON THE WORLD

U.S. Still Biggest Spender On Helping Other Nations

By PHIL NEWSOM
UPI Foreign News Analyst

It has been truly said that the best way to lose a friend is to lend him money. On that basis the United States has been losing friends since 1947 when, under the "Truman Doctrine," it began distributing foreign aid which today totals $143 billion.

Human nature being what it is, the United States would be naive indeed to expect any overflowing demonstrations of gratitude from the recipients of its generosity.

But by the same token, nations receiving U.S. aid should not be surprised by some U.S. irritation when they reward generosity with an obvious show of anti-Americanism.

A CASE IN POINT is Tanzania whose delegateperformed a jig of joy on the floor of the United Nations General Assembly after the defeat of the U.S. attempt to save a U.N. seat for Nationalist China.

Tanzania has been declared by the United Nations to be one of 25 countries with an especially low level of per capita income, a high rate of illiteracy, a lack of natural resources, and a bad climate, all of which are supposed to make it a special candidate for aid.

As such it has received a $30 million loan from the U.S.-supported World Bank for an electric power project and additional funds from the International Development Association, the bank's easy-loan affiliate.

It also is the recipient of Red China's largest foreign aid project, a $401 million interest-free loan to Tanzania and Zambia for a railroad between the two countries.

ALL OF THIS ties in closely with efforts of the Nixon administration to repair the shambles left by the U.S. Senate vote killing the American foreign aid program. The Senate action killed the administration's $3.3 billion foreign aid authorization bill, which in actual fact represented less than half of all U.S. aid channeled through various economic and military programs.

The overall actual total annually has been closer to $10 billion than to $3 billion.

Over the years the U.S. aid program probably comes to more than 10 times the amount spent similarly by the Soviet Union. Communist Chinese aid scarcely can be compared. Both the Soviet Union and Communist China have tended to be more selective.

THE CURRENT RECIPIENT of the largest single piece of Soviet aid is North Vietnam which is said to et about $1 billion annually.

Cuba gets around $1 million per day, or about $300 million per year.

Since 1937, the Russians have rebuilt the United Arab Republic's entire army at a cost of about $2.5 billion.

The Soviets scoff at the possibilith the U.S. aid program is coming to an end. They accuse the United States of seeking to build "captive, colonial markets" for U.S. manufactured goods and say the aid program will continue under other guises.

The Communist Chinese have attempted to probe weak spots left by both the Soviet Union and the United States. Most Chinese aid has gone to Africa and most of that to five countries—Algeria, the former French Congo, Guinea, Mauritania and Tanzania. Since the 1950s it has totaled about $250 million.

Other Chinese aid has gone to radical governments and groups in the Persian Gulf area to stir up revolutions there.

Consumer Price Index Taking On Added Importance

By DONALD FINLEY

WASHINGTON (UPI) —President Nixon will be keeping closer than usual watch in coming months on something known as the CPI. So will millions of Americans trying to decide how his new wage-price policies are affecting inflation.

CPI stands for the Consumer Price Index, compiled monthly by the Labor Department's Bureau of Labor Statistics (BLS). Despite admitted shortcomings and charges the White House is trying to manipulate the statistics for political purposes, it remains the best available gauge of the cost of living.

Officials readily concede the index does not measure the actual living costs but rather prices for a selected "market basket" of goods and services purchased by a mythical average urban family. They also concede price changes can take three months to a year to show up in the index.

UNDERSCORING THIS, the September cost of living index rose 0.2 per cent over August at a time when most prices were supposed to be frozen under Phase I of the President's new economic program.

Since President Nixon took office, the cost of living has risen 6.1 per cent in 1969 and 5.5 per cent in 1970. It was going up at an annual rate of about 4 per cent when Nixon froze wages and prices August 15 in an effort to stem the inflationary spiral.

The index went up 0.4 per cent in August then registered another 0.2 per cent gain in September. Officials said that did not mean living costs actually rose 0.2 per cent in September however, or that there necessarily were widespread violations of the price freeze.

They said many CPI items are priced only at three-month, six-month or yearly intervals and that the September index in some cases reflected price increases put into effect before Aug. 15 freeze.

COLLEGE TUITION, for example, showed a 9 per cent increase in September. But since tuition is priced checked by the BLS only once a year, the increase that showed up in September included all such hikes made over the past 12 months.

White House officials said most of the price increases reported in September appeared to be in conformity with the price freeze, but that the government would investigate hikes in prices for women's and girls' clothing, frozen orange juice, margarine, salad oils and some cuts of beef.

These officials also noted that some items were exempted from the price freeze, including raw agricultural products and taxes. Sellers also are allowed to pass along Nixon's 10 per cent import surcharge and prices can be raised legally in some cases if they were at seasonal lows in August.

BLS officials said the October index will be a much better guide to how the freeze has affected prices, but they didn't promise it wouldn't show another rise.

THE CONSUMER Price Index, begun a half century ago, reflects the cost to consumers of about 400 items in the mythical market basket of goods and services normally purchased by average urban wage earners and clerical workers.

The market basket has five basic sections —food, housing, clothing, transportation, and health and recreation. It includes such items as hamburger, beer, refrigerators, electricity, nylons hose, hospital care, airplane fares, movie tickets, property taxes, haircuts, babysitting and funerals.

It currently is based on the buying habits, surveyed by the Census Bureau in 1964, of an average urban family of 3.7 persons with an income of $6,250 a year after taxes. A new survey to update the buying habits is planned for 1972-73.

Most of the monthly price data is collected by some 200 specially trained BLS agents who visit about 18,000 retail stores and service establishments in 56 cities. Other prices are obtained through mail questionnaires, from other government agencies or, in the case of used cars, from trade associations.

PRICES OF food and a few other essentials are checked each month in all 56 cities. Prices for almost all other items in the CPI also are collected monthly in each of the five largest cities — New York, Chicago, Philadelphia, Detroit and Los Angeles. But in the other cities, most other prices are collected only every three months. Some more stable items such as rent and taxes are checked every six months or once a year.

All this data is fed into computers at BLS headquarters here to show monthly changes and longer range trends in prices on individual items and for the over-all cost of living. Each item in the market basket is weighted to show its relative share of monthly expenditures by the mythical typical urban family.

The CPI is keyed to a base period, currently 1967, and the figure 100 is assigned to the price level for that period. When the CPI climbed to 122.4 in September, it meant prices had risen 22.4 per cent since 1967 and that goods and services which cost $100 in 1967 cost $122.40 in August.

THE MAN in charge of consumer and wholesale price statistics for the government, Assistant BLS Commissioner Joe Popkin, said constant efforts are made to improve the CPI and its reliability. But he conceded the index has shortcomings.

For instance, he agreed that the CPI is not really a measure of the true cost of living, "although it's the closest we can come." Actually, he said it is an index of the changes in prices of goods and services which the 1964 survey indicated were purchased by the average urban wage earner and clerical worker.

To illustrate, Popkin said the 1964 imaginary market basket may have contained 10 pounds of steak a month. But if the price of steak goes up too much, the average family may switch to hamburger.

"What I'm saying," Popkin added, "is that the CPI does not take into account changing buying patterns of this average family or what it actually costs that family to live."

ALSO IT DOES not necessarily coincide with the buying habits of any one particular real family or reflect prices in rural or small town areas.

The BLS official said he has proposed that buying habit surveys be conducted by the Census Bureau more frequently than every decade. But he said the estimated $30 million cost has discouraged adoption of his proposal.

Another problem is statistical error inherent in any data based on samples instead of a comprehensive survey. Inadvertent errors also occur in reporting basic data. BLS officials said such errors usually are spotted, however, and tend to be too small to have any significant affect anyway.

A more serious and politically sensitive problem has arisen this year —the way BLS statistics are presented and interpreted. BLS has prided itself on the credibility of its reports and on remaining aloof from politics and policy makers.

THEN, LAST March, Harold Goldstein, an expert on the government's monthly job data, called an unemployment report "mixed" news while Labor Secretary James D. Hodgson said it was "heartening."

The White House later ordered an end to such briefings, saying it wanted policymakers such as Hodgson to interpret the price and job reports, not technicians such as Popkin and Goldstein.

Popkin has retained his post in a White House ordered shakeup at the BLS, but Goldstein was assigned to handle less volatile long-range statistics.

Union leaders and some Democrats have accused the administration of trying to manipulate BLS statistics for political gain, and of trying to present rosy pictures of the economy despite what they consider adverse statistics.

Popkin was reluctant to discuss the charges, but said he knew of no cases where BLS statistical numbers had been deliberately falsified. He added that the changes in the BLS ordered by the White House "will not affect the validity" of the Bureau's statistics.

THE BLS data is important to many groups that base major decisions on the government statistics.

Many labor union contracts provide wage increases based on rises in the CPI. Popkin said a 1 per cent error in the CPI could mean a difference of $250 million annually in wage and benefit payments to 5.5 million workers covered by these escalators clauses.

If proposals for tying Social Security increases to rises in the CPI should be adopted, a 1 per cent error would make a difference of about $330 million annually in payments to 27 million persons receiving Social Security benefits, he said.

The government itself is probably the greatest user of BLS statistics. The president used the CPI and unemployment figures in deciding to freeze wages and prices. Special federal economic aid is allocated to areas the BLS defines as poverty areas or areas of high unemployment.

A SHADOW REMAINS

New Liberian Leader's First 100 Office Days

MONROVIA, Liberia (UPI) —Just after he became president three months ago, William R. Tolbert told his fellow Liberians he had "mountains to climb and giants to meet."

After 19 years in the shadow of late Liberian President William V.S. Tubman, the new president —who had been Tubman's vice president —was hardly known to his countrymen. In three months he has surprised and reassured them.

Tubman, however, still casts a long shadow in Liberia and it poses a dilemma for his successor. Tolbert has said he would forgive no one who slighted the late president, officially proclaimed "Father of Modern Liberia."

Tolbert recognizes the need for economic and administrative reforms in a country with virtually no civil service and an average annual per capita income of $140.

BUT HOW can he make changes without tarnishing Tubman's image and questioning his policies and methods?

When Tubman suffered a hemorrhage after a prostate operation and died in a London clinic July 23, at age 75, he was a national hero and few even in Monrovia predicted the display of affection he was accorded during the funeral by the 200,000 Liberians who crowded into the capital.

Few Liberians yet know that Tubman, after an uninterrupted 27 years in power, left Liberia deeply in the red but bequeathed his widow, Mrs. Antoinette Tubman, a fortune abroad, estimated by officials at about $220 million, making her one of the world's richest individuals. She could keep the Liberian administration in funds for nearly four years.

In a private interview Tolbert used a semantic distinction to tell how he plans to modernize Liberia without detracting from Tubman's posthumous image.

"ALL THINGS are relative, you have good, better and best. If my administration proves a good one it doesn't mean President Tubman's was bad. The administration that succeeds mine may be better, more innovative," he said.

In a bold and —according to newspaper comment —popular move, Tolbert dismissed Tubman's two confidants on national security, C. Wellington Campbell, chief of National Intelligence, and James Bestman, chief of the Special Security Service.

"Hallelujah! There is no more getting rich overnight and no more tales to be told about innocent citizens," said the Sunday Mirror. It said Campbell and Bestman had used trumped up charges to jail innocent Liberians.

Another departure was that of Tubman's butler,who has left Liberia for the Canary Islands. The butler also was the keeper of the keys to the safe of the Executive Mansion. And he was a senator.

THE NEW President of Liberia speaks with an American accent, like many Liberians, the descendants of freed American slaves who began settling along the western bulge of Africa 150 years ago. Liberians, too, have their "Founding Fathers," pilgrims who crossed the Atlantic to make their freedom proclamations on "Providence Island," a pear-shapedn five-acre island ir a peaceful lagoon beside Monrovia.

Liberia is a 43,000-square mile country the size of Ohio, with a population of 1.5 million. Its capital city of Monrovia was named after American President James Monroe, who encouraged the ex-slave settlement.

The Liberian president works at the executive mansion overlooking the domed Capitol building. The legislature is one of the three branches of government established by the U.S.-styled constitution. Liberian currency is the dollar and Liberians have names such as "Ike" and "Al."

The new president, 58 and portly, the father of seven children and a former president of the 33-million member World Baptist Federation, speaks with the slightly stilted language of the lay preacher that he is.

TOLBERT IS "disposed" to see visitors and he told a recent international rice conference in Monrovia he was a rice grower by saying, "Many may not know it, but I am gratified to indicate that I am a rice producer."

Rice is a serious subject with Tolbert. It is the staple food of Liberians and he moved immediately to fix its price and warned Lebanese traders, well-entrenched up and down the West African coast, their future was in jeopardy if they exploited the people. Rice grows easily in Liberia but in 1970 the country spent $9.7 million on importing rice from the United States.

Liberia's problems include a literacy rate of 10 per cent, and barely 1,000 miles of paved roads. Although the national average income is $140 a year, the 70 per cent of the population engaged in subsistence agriculture earns $50 a year or less.

Tolbert has pledged to even out income distribution.

He also has encouraged freedom of expression and stirred Liberians into public debate. His promised economic reforms include more educational facilities, improved communications networks and increased government participation in agricultural productivity. A day doesn't pass without some action, some new pledge, a major speech.

Coconut Monk Thinks He Can Bring Vietnam Peace

PHOENIX ISLAND, South Vietnam (UPI)—Silent and smiling, the tiny old man who prays and fasts for peace waved to his departing visitors. From the vantage point on his barge, he could could look over their heads and see two American naval patrol boats moving up the Mekong River.

Both sights were familiar to Nam Nguyen Thanh, known as the Coconut monk—a religious leader who has devoted his life to seeking to reunite the warring Vietnams. He claims to hold the secret of peace, but says the leaders of government must seek him out in order for it to work.

So far, his work has earned him the love of several thousand Vietnamese followers, curiosity from those unfamiliar with Indochina, and scorn from the "responsible people" he believes hold the reins of the future.

FOR THESE reasons, the Coconut Monk says, he spends his days in meditation and prayer in his floating combination home and temple built on the huge barge, which he calls "The Dragon Ship Pranja."

The vessel is firmly anchored to a brightly-painted yellow and blue maze of steel supports linking it to Phoenix Island.

The striking points of the island are the wide "prayer circle" where the monk leads the faithful, and a 75-foot tower that he ascends to conduct solemn rituals. From afar, the various pillars and walkways bordered with elaborate designs give the appearance of a stateside amusement park.

The carnival atmosphere taints the monk's cause. He is regarded by many Vietnamese and foreigners alike to be only a peculiar old man who occasionally vaults into the headlines from some unlikely angle.

HIS CURIOUS semi fame includes:

—No bath for 23 years.

—A steady diet of only coconut milk in the morning and vegetable and fruit juice in the afternoon, all weighed in careful proportions on a small6yellow scale at the left side of his throne.

—A 13-year period (1946-1959) that he went without speaking. He still remains silent for months on end, although a black telephone is within reach of his right hand.

—A record of arrests by both the South Vietnamese government and the Viet Cong for political activity.

BUT COMMUNICATING by hand signs and notes scribbled on a green pad, the Coconut Monk conveys through an interpreter that he is serious in the belief that he is the only person who can bring peace. He is leader of a sect of some 3,000 Vietnamese who follow his religion.

WILL BLOUNT RUN?

Sparkman Gearing For Possible Senate Test

BIRMINGHAM, Ala. (UPI) — Not since Tallulah Bankhead's uncle, John H. Bankhead II, unseated J. T. (Cotton Tom) Heflin in the 1930 election has an incumbent U.S. Senator from Alabama been defeated.

John J. Sparkman, silverhaired but vigorous at 71, one of the Senate's most powerful members, has no intention of being the second incumbent senator in Alabama history to be booted from office by the electorate.

The 1952 Democratic vice presidential candidate, who moved from the House to the Senate when Bankhead died in 1946, stumps the state at every opportunity; fitting in his appearances between duties as chairman of the Banking, Housing and Urban Affairs Committee and as ranking member of the Foreign Relations Committee.

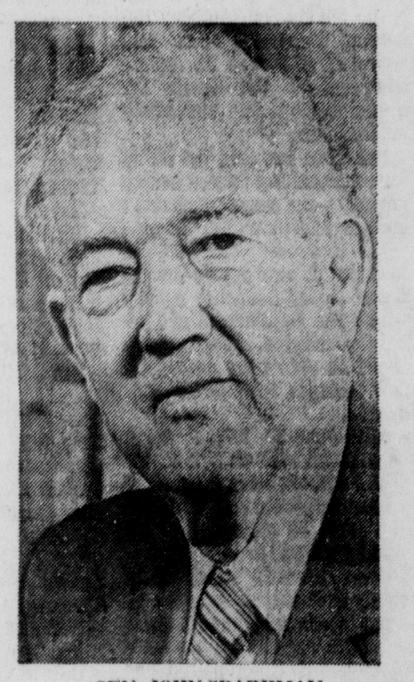
THE STRONG possibility that former Postmaster General Winton M. Blount plans to run for the Senate against Sparkman next fall should make the upcoming campaign a hot race.

Blount, 50, resigned his cabinet post Oct. 29 and told newsmen he would announce his intentions around year's end. But he has made no secret in private conversations that he wanted to lad the opposition against Sparkman in 1972. And the self-made millionaire construction executive said about his future that "when I came to Washington I ended my ties with the private sector. I believe I will be involved in public service in one way or another."

If Blount does decide to enter the race, he first must win the Republican primary and former Rep. James D. Martin, defeated in a try for the governorship in 1966, also plans to seek the GOP Senate nomination.

THERE ALSO in speculation that Sparkman might face a strong Democratic primary fight of his own in May, pitted against a candidate backed by Gov. George M. Wallace.

Although Sparkman has not formally announced his candidacy, on Oct. 28, only a day before Blount's resignation, he remarked that "I have said all along that I am running. It is my plan at the proper time to announce my candidacy," probably about Jan. 20 when Alabama Democrats meet to plan the state's next primary.



SEN. JOHN SPARKMAN
Makes rounds in Alabama

The senator's aides say he already is laying campaign plans.

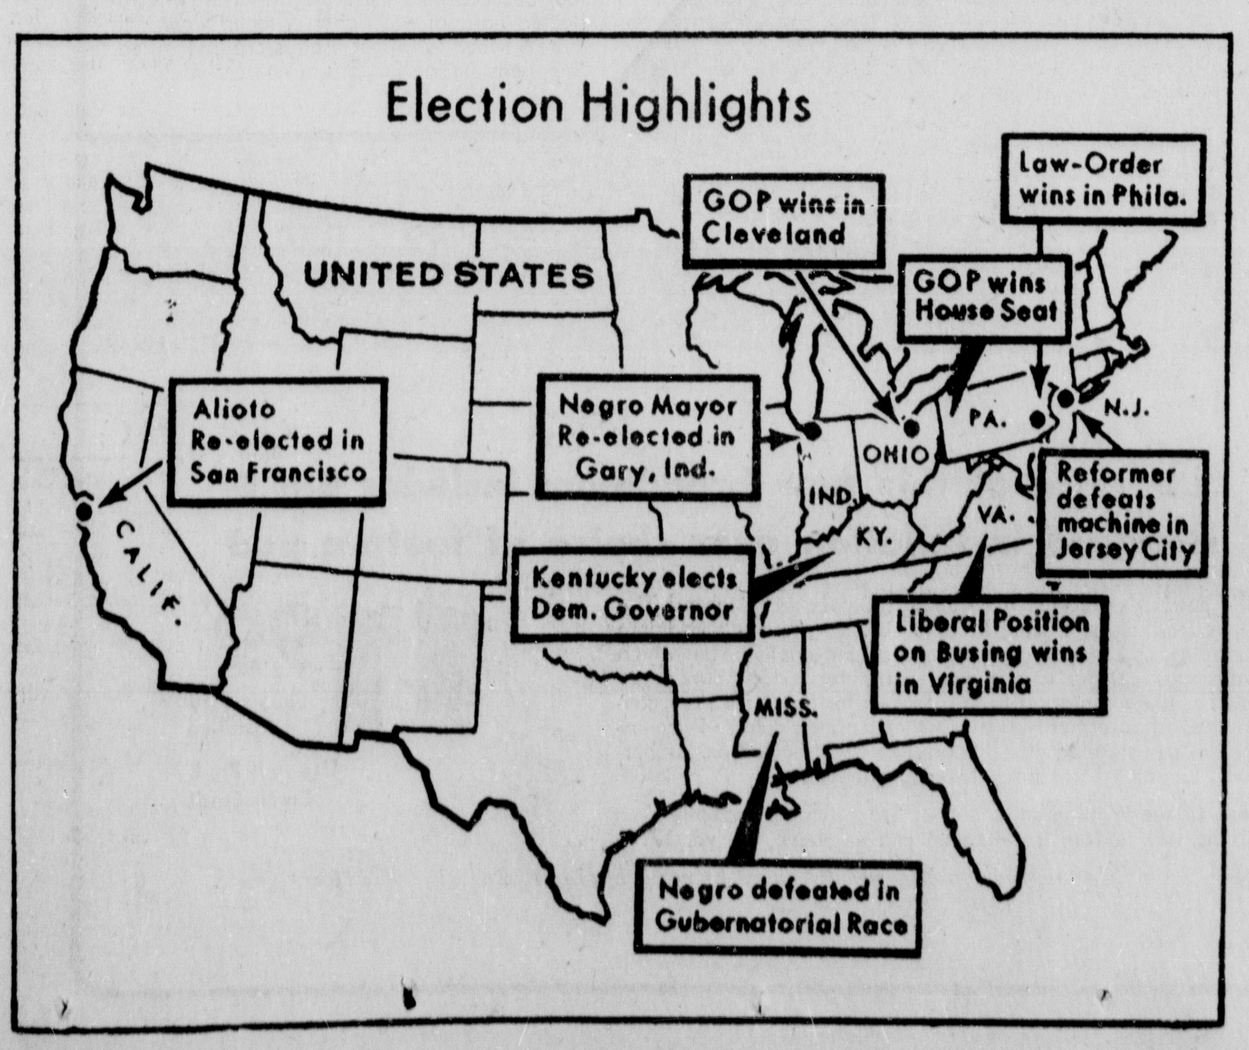
Sparkman's age —he would be 78 at the end of another term —is expected to be something of a factor along with his health. But aides insist neither age nor health can be a significant issue.

Sparkman does have Alabama political tradition on his side. Alabama senators have, with the exception of Heflin, either died in office or retired since ratification of the 17th Amendment in 1913 allowing voters to elect them directly.

EVEN HEFLIN probably would have been re-elected if he had not broken with political orthodoxy in the 1928 election.

Refusing to support Al Smith —"a wet Catholic"—at the Democratic Convention, Heflin bolted his party to back Herbert Hoover, incurring the wrath of the state's Democratic establishment.

Retaliating, the establishment put its power behind Bankhead, who beat Heflin easily.



This Week In The World

Charles Evers was defeated overwhelmingly in his bid to become the first black governor of Mississippi, but declared his candidacy showed that racial progress had been made. "Whites and blacks are going tolook at each other differently now, as citizens," said Evers, the mayor of Fayette. "I've proved that a black man can run for office in Mississippi without getting shot, without getting killed."

White moderate William "Bill" Waller, the man who prosecuted the slayers of Evers' brother, Medgar, and who defeated Charles Evers for the governorship, declared racism "will no longer be a part of our political spectrum."

IN ANOTHER gubernatorial race, Kentucky voters returned the Democrats to power by electing Lt. Gov. Wendell H. Ford to succeed outgoing Gov. Louie Nunn.

Philadelphia and Clevelandelected "law and order" candidates as mayors while Mayor Kevin White of Boston won re-election by forging a coalition of blacks and Italian-Americans, and Mayor Joseph Alioto of San Francisco shrugged off a federal indictment and a civil lawsuit to gain another term.

A federal appeals court refused environmentalists' pleas to block Cannikin—the five-megaton underground nuclear test on Amchitka Island in the Aleutian chain. Despite vigorous protests in Canada and the United States and despite contentions by some that the test could cause a tidal wave or trigger an earthquake. President Nixon gave the go-ahead for the test Saturday, saying it was necessary for national security. The test—250 times more powerful than the bomb dropped on Hiroshima, is to test warheads for the Spartan antiballistic missile system.

IN WASHINGTON, the House Banking and Currency Committee voted to require employers to pay raises called for in labor contracts in effect before the wage-price freeze. President Nixon said the committee move was "damaging," and he would fight it.

Many liberal Democrats joined southerners and Republicans in a House vote to prevent the use of federal funds for busing children for the purpose of integrating schools.

In the Senate, the Foreign Relations Committee took the first step toward approving a foreign aid program which had been unexpectedly rejected by the full Senate last week. The committee approved two foreign aid bills, one for economic assistance and the other for military aid, which totaled $2.3 billion—$1.2 billion less than the Nixon administration had asked for.

THE SENATE Judiciary Committee opened hearings into the fitness of President Nixon's nominees — Lewis F. Powell and William H. Rehnquist — to serve on the Supreme Court.

A bill to stop all pollution of waterways by 1985 was approved 86-0 by the Senate.

A cablegram to U. N. Secretary General Thant from Peking's Foreign Minister Chi Peng-fei announced the names of 10 men who will fill the seats vacated by ousted Nationalist China.

In the Vietnam war, American troop cuts left 196,700 men in the war zone last week, 12,700 more than Nixon's Dec. 1 withdrawal goal. Defense Secretary Melvin Laird talked with South Vietnamese leaders about further reductions to 40,000 men within six to eight months. The U.S. Command announced the death toll for the week before was two Americans killed in action, the lowest since the United States began itscombat role in 1965.

THE DEATH toll climbed this week in the conflict in Nyrthern Ireland with the deaths of two plainclothes policemen, shot with machineguns in a Belfast boutique. Others killed, including guardsmen and snipers, brought to 120 the number slain in this year's violence.

A devastating cyclone struck India's Orissa state last weekend, and as the death count slowly rose to at least 10,000 by Thursday, another possible storm began building up off the Bay of Bengal.

Car Repair Fraud Bill To Senate

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — Legislation to protect car owners against fraud in the $2.5 billion-a-year auto repair industry unanimously passed the Assembly today.

The bill by Sen. Anthony Beilenson, D-Beverly Hills, was approved 57-0 with no debate and sent to the Senate for concurrence in Assembly amendments.

Beilenson has said the bill is aimed at halting "gross incompetency —the shops which don't do their jobs time after time."

His measure would require licensing of auto repair dealers under a self-financing agency within the Department of Consumer Affairs. The agency would be similar to one which now licenses television repair dealers.

After June 30, 1972, it would be unlawful to be an auto repair dealer without being licensed.

Licenses would cost $25 to $50 and could be suspended or revoked for fraud or negligence.

Other grounds which could cause a dealer to lose his license included making false promises to induce a customer to have his car repaired and "any willful departure from or disregard of accepted trade standards for good and workmanlike repair."

The measure also provided for fines up to $1,000 and jail sentences up to six months for violations of its provisions.

When Beilenson's bill passed the Senate, it set up the auto licensing bureau within the Department of Motor Vehicles (DMV) but that provision was changed in an Assembly committee over the objections of automobile dealers.

The dealers contended that would constitute "dual regulation" since the DMV already partially regulates them.

Supporters of the bill argued, however, that the dealers wanted to have enforcement under the DMV because the dealers felt it would be more lenient.

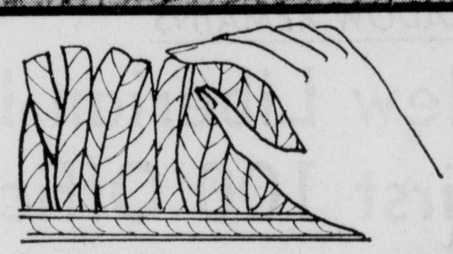
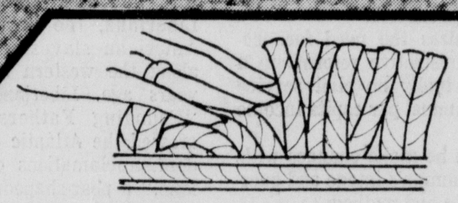
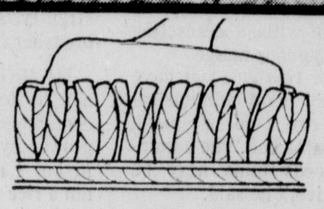
OUR 75th YEAR



Worth more! Programmed wool is a new kind of broadloom wool pile. Richer, thicker, livelier, and it's obvious to the eye and to the feel. Tuft for tuft, there's more of the fiber you want most in carpetings—pure wool!



Worth more! Programmed wool pile is worth more because extra buoyance means extra long wear life. The Programmed Pile process gives wool an even greater ability to bounce back under traffic. Extra crimp is added to the wool yarns for keeps. Crimped wool remains crush-resistant and gives years longer wear.



Worth more! Programmed pile wool carpet takes less effort to clean. Requires minimal care to maintain original beauty. Worth more, too, because colors are brighter from the reflected light of the richer crimped wool with more surface to reflect. Colors are intensified. See them at The Emporium nearest you!

Mailliard — Busy Yet "Alone" At Job

Demands Of Post Cut Spare Time

The life of a congressman is a busy one as all might expect, but for Marin County's Representative William S. Mailliard it also is a rather lonely one, too.

That is not to say he does not meet many, many people or spend considerable time surrounded by colleagues. He does, and that is the problem, for his obligations leave him little time for his family and even less time to be with and cultivate close friends.

Even during hs brief summer vacation back in Marin County where he was born and reared, the demands upon him to appear before organizations and to meet with constituents left him little enough time to relax in the company of his wife, Millicent.

THIS aloneness demands a deep-seated sense of self-reliance and confidence, a quality obviously inherited from his pioneering forbeares, that appears to have come down through four Marin County generations.

His great grandfather Adolph Mailliard travelled "around the horn" from New Jersey to settle what was to be known as the Mailliard Ranch in Marin in the 1850's, bringing with him Jersey cows and thoroughbred stallions.

The Mailliard family has had its roots in Marin County ever since, Bill being born in Belvedere on June 10, 1917. And, old Adolph Mailliard's influence seems to have imbued the entire family with such old-fashioned virtues as graciousness, patience, the obligation of service to the community and a type of dogged determination to see a job through.

Upon encountering the congressman, one can easily envision a household of boys reared — and frequently reprimanded — with the Victorian niceties.

SUCH family traits are quite evident in Mailliard's brothers, as well; James, a businessman and San Fancisco Supervisor, and John Ward Mailliard, III, also a businessman and active civic leader.

There is a shyness about Mailliard that would appear incongruous for a Congressman and often is interpreted by people who don't know him as a reserve or aloofness.

He has little aptitude for small talk. He speaks quietly but precisely, and with a certainty which comes from having thought out in advance what he is going to say. His fastidious dress only adds to the appearance of conservativeness, all of which is misleading.

Within the privacy of his own mind and his own time, his interests are as multiple — and some boyish — as they are varied.

HE HAS an outstanding collection of recordings, ranging from opera which he dearly loves to modern rock, a subject on which he can hold his own with his children and their friends.

When the opportunity permits, he is an avid horseman and loves to hunt and fish. But the old bugaboo of "so little time" does not allow him to pursue these outdoor activities except only sporadically.

His greatest source of relaxation and escape is science fiction of which he is a prolific and voracious reader. He was even inspired to write two science fiction books which he modestly reports, "I hid away for they're pretty bad."

Weekdays in the Capitol begin around 6:30 a.m. for Congressman Mailliard in his Georgetown house, with breakfast with his wife and school-age children: Julia, Josephine and Victoria Leigh. His eldest son, Bill Jr., is married and lives in Greenbrae while his son Ward resides in Cotati. Daughter Antoinette lives in San Francisco and his next oldest daughter Kristina is at UC Santa Cruz.

IT IS at breakfast that Mailliard is able to take up family problems and discuss social engagements with his wife, Milly.

At 8 a.m. he is in his offices in the Rayburn Building where the never-ending responsibilities begin, with a staff of just eight people.

He msut go over the mail and intercede in problems of his many constituents. Matters such as military service-related problems concerning families, questions of immigration, requests for Federal grants to cities in his district and in his state, and petitions for special Congressional bills cross his desk, daily.

THEN, there is the continuous flow of requests from individuals and organizations on legislative matters. Delegations of businessmen and civic leaders "from home" call upon him for Federal aid or assistance to their communities or to seek support of conservation and anti-pollution controls in their areas.

He is frequently on the telephone with cabinet members and under-secretaries lobbying for various programs, or with other congressmen seeking support for, or defeat of pending legislation. He msut apprise himself of the views of his constituents, of the press and of Congressional colleagues on any bill he is introducing. The paper work is tremendous; the research on proposed legislation staggering.

And, of course, as ranking member of the Foreign Affairs Committee, he must continually familiarize himself with international problems and the many requests from all corners for foreign affairs legislation.

ALL OF this must be attended to before 10 a.m. when, in Congress, committee meetings begin, and, there is hardly a morning when the congressman does not have a committee meeting to attend, as he is a member of The House Committee on Merchant Marine and Fisheries and its various subcommittees in addition to the Foreign Affairs Committee.

He also carries the responsibilities of Vice Chairman of the California Delegation, Chairman of the California Republican Delegation, and Congressional Advisor to the United Nations Committee on Peaceful Uses of Seabed and Ocean Floor Beyond the Limits of National Jurisdiction.

There is seldom time for lunch!

The afternoon is taken up with the House of Representatives, which traditionally convenes at noon, with its steady stream of debates, discussions and votes.

IF THE House adjourns at 6 p.m., it is fortunate only in that it gives the Congressman time to return to his office for another hour or two of work and organization of the next day.

If there is homework to do on a new piece of legislation, an upcoming vote or the gathering and analyzing of reports, he will stay at the office until 10 or 11 p.m.

He will not take his work-home.

"I find it difficult to concentrate in the comfort of my home, impossible to secrete myself from my family, and it is totally unfair to my wife," he declares.

However, during the week nights, the Mailliards are much sought-after guests at Washington dinner parties, at which the only things truly social are the amenities, the cuisine and the relaxed atmosphere. But, such dinner parties do afford a time, place and means of communication with members of the Cabinet and Administration, and foreign diplomats.

BOTH the courtesies of reciprocating and for the same reasons to meet and discuss issues with diplomats and Administration officials, the Mailliards also do a great deal of entertaining. On such occasions, Mailliard knows enough to stay away from home until the time of his guests' arrival. "Milly is an extremely efficient and gracious hostess, but she doesn't want me underfoot."

The Washington, D.C. dinner parties are geared to legislative hours, seldom beginning before 8 p.m. and ending around 11, so that the "Capitol Hill folk" are able to get a good night's rest. Mailliard is usually in bed by 1 a.m. (He rarely attends purely social affairs!)

He may lay awake for an hour or so going over problems that will confront him "tomorrow" or formulating questions about issues and requests, but he does not fret over "what happened today."

IN THE nearly 20 years he has been in the United States Congress, Mailliard has disciplined himself not to "chew his insides out" over bills passed which he has fought and felt fundamentally wrong, or over the passage of legislation which he has opposed in committees.

"The only thing you can do is accept the will of the majority and then go about the business of quietly seeking to change or alter bills through the proper channels — which is what the democrtic process is all about," he philosophizes.

An occasional invitation from the White House to attend a breakfast or luncheon with the President can and does throw Mailliard's calendar off, increasing the backlog of work. Who can send "regrets" to the President?

But, comes Friday, and the world of Washington D.C. turns off for the Congressman. The weekends are reserved for the family and friends.

TO INSURE these few precious hours of family privacy, the Mailliards have purchased a country home in Bluemount, Va. where the family whisks off Friday evenings or early Saturday mornings, to remain secluded until Monday.

"The spot is as close as you can come to Marin County 3,000 miles away on the East Coast, but some of the Virginia terrain is quite similar," he mused.

The Virginia house is anything but tranquil wilth the Mailliard children and their friends from school, but the sounds are far different from the Halls of Congress — and refreshing.

AND, WHAT may seem strange to many a husband, the Congressman enjoys mowing his lawns; but he has a "putt-putt" lawn mower which he can drive about. "I suppose it represents some yeep-seated desire to be a sports car driver," he'll explain to friends as he pases by at a torrid half-mile an hour.

Although a golf course is nearby, the congressman is self-conscious about playing. "It's been so long and I have played so infrequently that I'm afraid to make a foll of myself on a course in front of everyone," he grins.

But, like many men, he turns a mean hand on the barbecue and loves to "create" in the kitchen when his wife will let him. She does the cleaning up; a familiar story for many a housewife.

preciative of good food and is a connoisseur of wines and a staunch advocate of California wines, in particular, "and not just because I'm from California."

"I THINK our premium California wines are as good as any in the world and often better than most imported into the United States."

In fact, he is immodestly proud of his efforts in exposing California wines to Washington D.C. and encouraging their use in the White House.

"There is a store in the Capital where most of the Congressmen purchase their wines and liquors and when I first came to Washington, there was not one bottle of California wine sold there. After harassing the store with my requests, there is now a very large selection of California wines and a great volume of sales."

Foreign lands have always held an interest for Mailliard and visits to other countries are now a part of his responsibilities.

"I TRAVEL a lot as a member of the Foreign Affairs Committee, but those quick three to five day trips visiting one or more countries in a day are anything but a pleasure," he explains.

When Congress is not in session, Mailliard returns home and to his district office in San Francisco where the routine is pretty much the same, except the afternoons are filled with appointments.

Has Congress changed in the nearly 20 years he has been in office? Mailliard thinks so.

"Knowing what I know now, I'm not sure if starting out todya I would want the responsibility," he mused.

"For one thing the work load and the responsbilities on the individual congressman as well as upon the Congress as a whole have multiplied tremendously as the complexities and problems of government on all levels have increased.

FOR ANOTHER, many of the issues before Congress revolve around highly complex technologies which require a tremendous amount of research and review by everyone before consideration and discussion can even be given in the House. And, of course, there is a much greater urgency for the members of Congress as things must keep pace with the demands of the citizenry."

"I also think the electorate is much more sophisticated, today, particularly the young people, far more so than when I was a youth," the congressman observed.

"There are, of course, a number of people in political office who thrive on theatrics and flamboyance, but I think young people are listening more to what you have to say and not just the noise; and also are more aware of what you do and how you vote on issues."

RECALLING his first years in Congress, Mailliard observed that it is very difficult to be effective until you find the key people to work with and come to know them, and this takes several years. "If a young congressman attempts to go it alone, he can't accomplish anything — which I suppose is true for all of life."

"I gues that's my cue to add that the voters have an investment in me," he chided, "but that's true for all congressmen who have served more than one term."

"It's really not senority on committee, but coming to know the ins and outs and how to get things done for your district."

Mailliard has no plans or thoughts of retirement, yet, "but when I do it will be back in Marin County and we're looking for property now . . . it's hard to shake your roots and when they are in Marin County, who would want to — everybody wants to move there."

"I just hope the prices don't go up."

AS FOR any political ambitions of his children, "I don't think they have any, now, but then I didn't either 24 years ago."

One thing is certian: This is the most time Mailliard has given any interviewer about himself and some night this week he will have to make it up in his office.

Surjit Singh: Teacher And Philosopher

Profile Of A Marinite

Surjit Singh's office, on the campus of San Francisco Theological Seminary (SFTS) in San Anselmo, is a small library.

He is on sabbatical this year and can usually be found behind the stacks of books on his desk.

The comely, unpretentious philosophy professor lends credence to the cliche that a good teacher's door is always open to his student.

He is easy to talk with, a sensitive man whose 27 years of teaching, five books, and ability to lecture from memory without notes, qualify him as an expert in philosophy.

THIS FALL Singh began his twenty-second year on the faculty of the Presbyterian seminary. His career began in 1951 when he was invited to teach at SFTS for one year, then asked to remain and head the Jesse Hays Baird Chair of Christian Philosophy.

The 53-year-old clergyman was born in Punjab, a north Indian state near Kashmir. His parents were members of the Sikh religion, which Singh describes as a break away group from Hindus and Muslims.

He attended a high school staffed by Indian Christians and American missionaries. And at age 17, through "personal search" and the influence of his teachers he converted to Christianity. Personal search to Singh meant "a quest for meaning for life and for a sense of direction."

HE WAS ordained to the ministry by the United Church of North India, of which Presbyterians are a cooperating body.

Singh has earned five degrees, including bachelors in philosophy and divinity; masters of sacred theology and philosophy; and a doctor of philosophy. He was an honor graduate of the University of Punjab and did graduate study at Emmanuel College of the University of Toronto, Pittsburgh Theological Seminary, Union Theological Seminary, Columbia University and the Hartford Seminary Foundation of Hartford, Conn. His theology professors included the late Paul Tillich and the late Reinhold Niebuhr.

He taught for six years at the United Theological College at Saharanput, India, and it was his first sabbatical that brought him to Marin County.

HE HAS been national secretary to the Student Christian Movement in New Zealand and India, Burma and Ceylon, traveling extensively for the group.

Singh's community involvement extends as far back as his college days when he worked in the slums of his city, giving financial counseling to poor people exploited by money lenders.

His summers were spent in Simla, a resort town, where he taught rickshaw coolies reading and writing.

He was active in India's major political party, the Congress Party, whose membership has included Mahatma Ghandi, the late Prime Minister Nehru and his daughter Prime Minister Indira Ghandi.

MARIN County has been the beneficiary of the community awareness. Singh has been president of the Marin County United Nations Organization, chairman of San Anselmo's annual town meeting; president of the Parent-Teacher Association at Sir Francis Drake High School (where his 17-year-old son is a student) and a member of the Rotary Club.

He was chairman of an ad hoc committee which thrashed out administrative and educational problems in the Tamalpais District High School. Many of the suggestions of that committee are the basis for pilot projects in operation at Drake High.

Singh says he did not plan to stay at SFTS when he came. But during his 20 years he has witnessed significant changes in the seminary students, and his teachers have been "as much my teacher as I have been their teacher."

ACCORDING to Singh, the most enjoyable part of teaching is exploring with small groups of students "the frontiers of thought patterns and being a team with them to explore this world of ideas."

Singh's philosophy of life is centered by "the fact of relation. Personally to me, a relation to God is primary. Upon this is the relation of man to man as a person to person and after that, man to woman. In Christ is the meeting place of God and man."

The non-religious person can see in Christ how one being "lived in the situations he did and triumphed," he says. "In some sense there is a commonality to the human predicament."

Perhaps the most invaluable lesson his students have taught him is the importance of human relationship.

"IN THE pursuit of philosophical ideas, where I would be more abstract, they help me be concrete. Students remind me that they are warm bodies and that the real stuff of life comes from cultivating human relationships. Their idealism and youth is a safeguard against the aging process and cynicism."

Singh says the contemporary seminary student tends to attibute his vocational choice to personal experience and the experience of others rather than the traditional "call into the ministry."

"Along with this is a corresponding change," Singh says. "The contemporary student is more aware of himself, his environment and the things which make and break human beings, including politics and social movements. He feels very keenly that the Christian faith has a serious stake in the day to day affairs of life. I think this is a change for the better. What is now more important is the real nitty gritty of life."

SINGH would caution idealistic youth who jump feet first into a movement without giving it sufficient thought. "Their participation will be short and their disappointment great."

Singh considers the church the viable institution for change in society but he believes it must "create flexibility in its structure so that the young people could move within the structure."

America's contention that it is youth oriented is "more a state of mind than an actuality," Singh says.

"We say this is a young nation but most of the affairs are controlled by older people." The channels that would ease young people into positions of responsibility and make the structure more flexible are necessary, he said.

"WHEN it comes to giving the power to youth we (adults) want to think it over. Granting the 18-year-olds the vote will be a real test of the nation's cultural pliability because young people will have a part in changing the structure."

Because he is a member of "an ethnic minority" he can empathize with minorities in this country.

Singh believes that the country's major problem is "how to become a union. This has been the perennial problem and we have been making progress. At this stage the manifestation is the achievement of common understanding between majority and minorities and more specifically between blacks and whites."

"IF SOCIETY can solve this problem it can become the most promising society on the face of the earth. It is my hope that there are both moral and spiritual resources in society. If they can be harnessed with urgency this country can resolve this (racial) problem as it has resolved many other problems."

Singh speaks of America — its beauty and ugliness — as though it were his country, even though he, his wife and their two daughters are still Indian citizens. His son is American by birth.

Early next year he will go home for several months visit. He is now writing a monograph on the development of his thought which will be published in the India Thinker Series now being produced. He has also been invited by the Indian Institute for the Study of Religion and Society to write a monograph on the development of his thought to be published in the India Thinker Series now being produced.

A Broker's Look At Second Deeds

Loan Broker Tells Of Potential

"How To Make Money Safely — Second Deeds of Trust" doesn't sound like the title of a best selling book, but it could be a money maker for the reader.

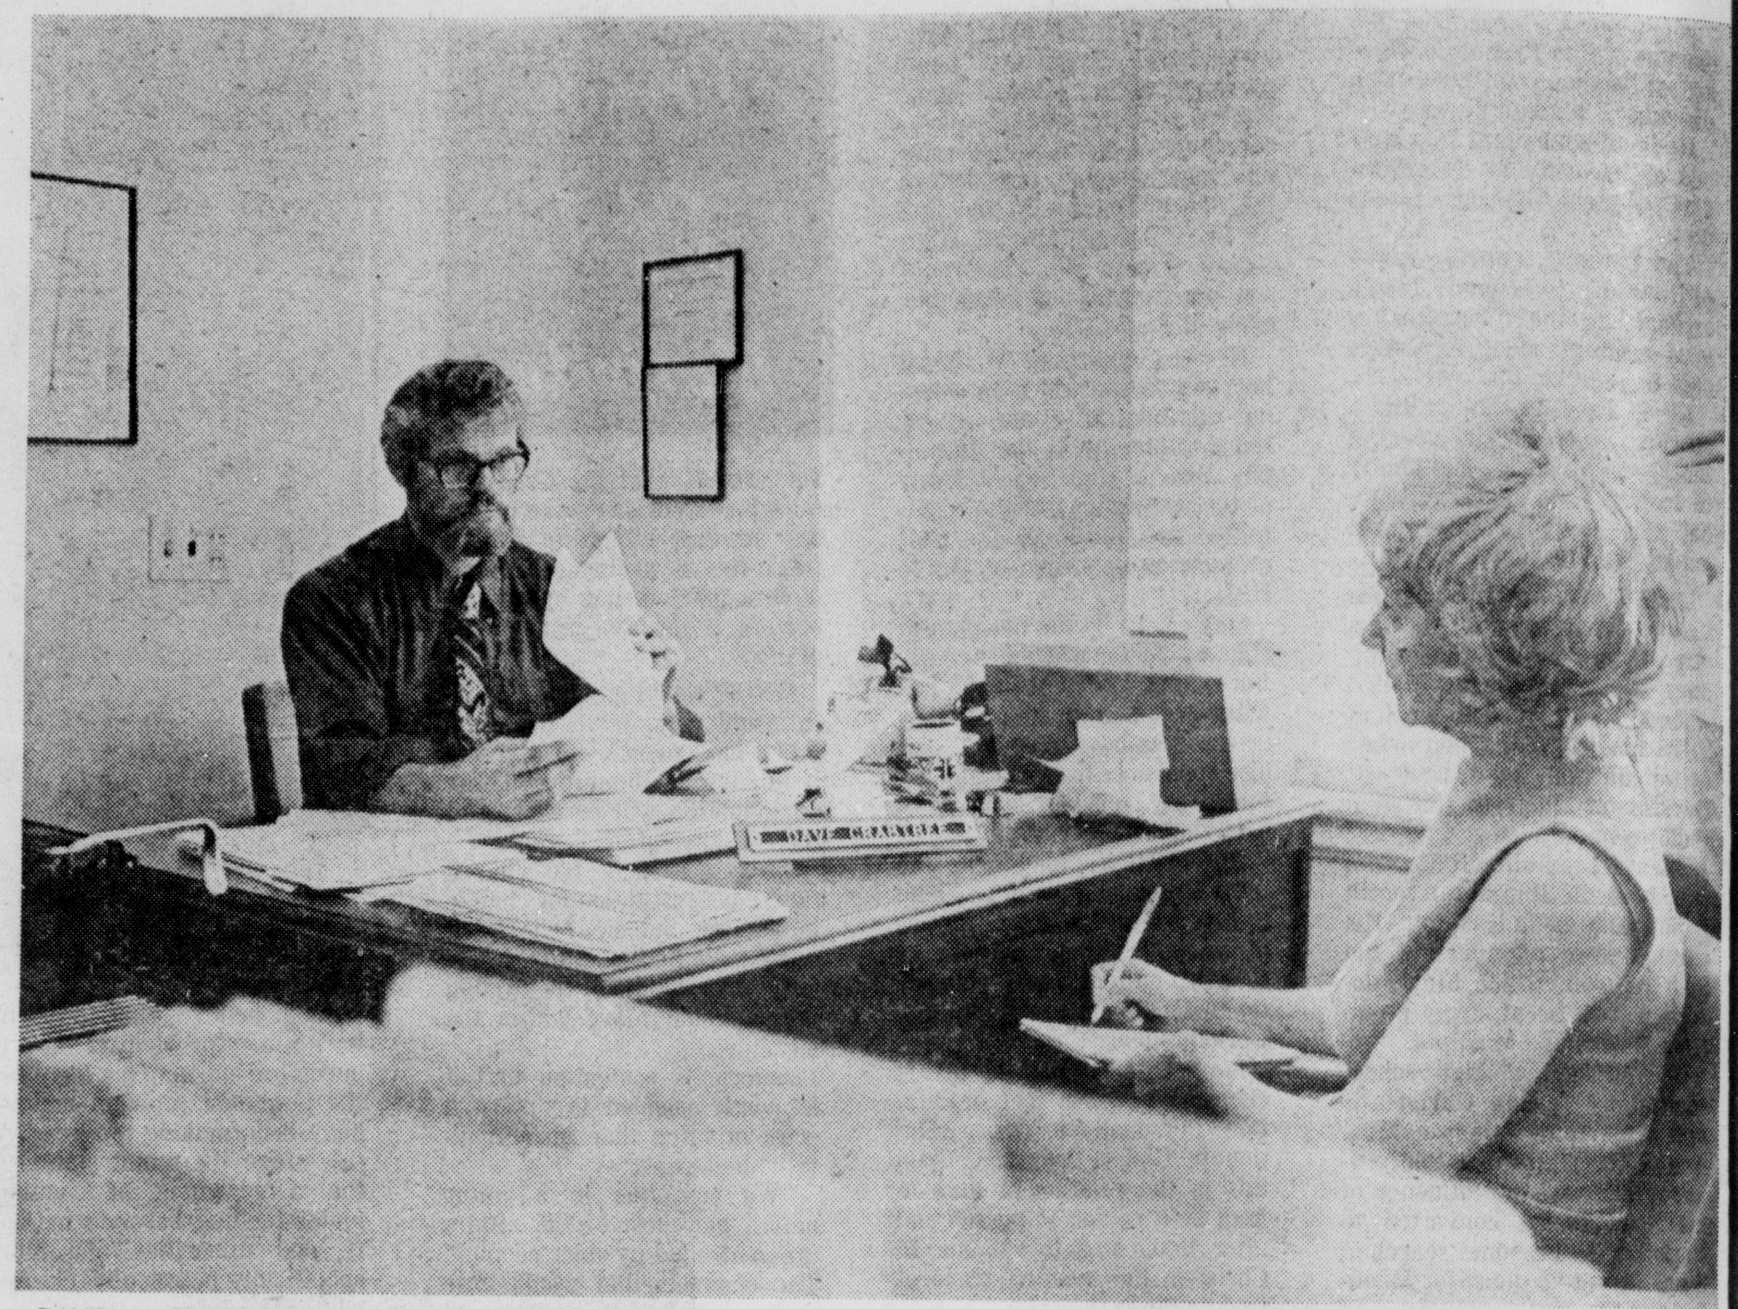
At least, the co-author, David J. Crabtree, a San Rafael loan broker, believes it will make the layman aware of the potential of second deeds of trust for investment.

Seated in his office at S and C Home Loans at the Albert Building, he commented "second loans are nothing new," but have never gained "prominence as an investment source for a private individual."

THE PURPOSE of the book, written by Crabtree and Barney G. Glaser, formerly of Mill Valley, is stated in the preface: "To make private investors aware of the increasing opportunity available to them by investing in second deeds of trust."

Crabtree described investment in second deeds as "a serious type of investment in a safe, sound manner," and advised "it isn't a get rich overnight sort of thing."

Private investments tripled in California between 1953-63, and are needed in the real estate economy, Crabtree said. "We're doing for the private investor, what savings and loans were doing 10 years ago," he said.



DAVID J. CRABTREE, a partner in S and C. Home Loans of San Rafael, and assistant Sue Higbee, tackle the work load at the office in the Albert Building. Crabtree, co-author of a book on second deeds of trust, is a proponent of second deeds as a investment.

Crabtree cautioned however, that he was recommending such investment for those who have "financial strength . . . a certain amount of liquid assets available."

FOR example, he said, a retired woman on a limited income, wouldn't appear to be a potential investor, he said. "When a man is in his productive years and income at its peak . . . that's the time to think about it."

He advised that investors "deal with a professional who knows the business and all aspects of service and what to do when problems arise."

Crabtree advocated putting dormant assets to work such as a home. For instance, he said, a man who has $21,000 invested in a $35,000 home, "will beat his brains out to make more money, will send his wife out to work and she working to pay income tax."

If the man took out a loan against his home, and invested in second deeds of trust, he would be in a stronger financial position, he declared.

THERE IS a reluctance to borrow, which is a hangover from the past, Crabtree said. "People fail to realize the economy is changing, and we living in a credit society with the government saying 'borrow'."

As for returns, he said, "We can only promise what the note calls for, and 10 per cent is the maximum rate allowable."

There are always risks since the "real estate economy is one of the footballs," he commented. "There are some who make bad investments because they get greedy. We can only advise."

Crabtree said there is a tendency for people to be "afraid of the unknown," but hopes that the book will help to introduce people to second deeds of trust for investment.

The book is now being used in junior colleges as a textbook and is in the Marin County Real Board of Realtors library. It is the only book of its kind in that it is the only one devoted entirely to second deeds of trust, he said.

IN THE preface, the authors say: "This book will, we trust, end much confusion on such matters as the difference between mortgages and deeds of trust as security for first and second home loans, and the different degrees or risk and returns involved in each form of investment.

Crabtree, who formerly was a real estate salesman, said he realized he could make more sales by getting clients into homes with smaller down payments.

"I became aware of the need for additionel outside financing sources to supplement the institutional monies," he said.

IN HIS search, he learned "this additional financing source in second deeds of trust in conjunction with the little or no down GI and minimum FHA program provided the vehicle that made those additional sales possible," he reported.

Then private investors became more aware of the opportunity to invest surplus capital in second loans, he said.

"Prices were increasing at a fast pace, demands high, ready buyers with resources were ready to take advantage of the opportunity to buy on the installment plan. Increased demands resuled in added earnings for these investors," he said.

"The Realtor increased his volume and increased his earnings. A buyer was able to make a purchase with a small down payment which he sold later at a substantial profit. All parties benefitted."

After about seven to eight years as a salesman-broker, he began to specialize in real estate financing, he said.

HE AND Glaser came to the conclusion there was a need for information on second deeds of trust to be made available to the layman, Crabtree said.

The theories of the loan broker and the investor were combined to develop a more complete and accurate evaluation of the subject, he explained.

The book, he siad, "informs the investor how to invest safely, the borrower how to borrow intelligently; and the loan broker, Real Estate broker the effective procedures to follow for a successful business."

From the borrower's standpoint, Crabtree asked rhetorically . . . "Why do property owners borrow on second deeds

of trust, rather than some other source?"

"MAINLY, it is a question of costs involved for the borrower. He can borrow on this basis, avoid disturbing his present low interest first deed of trust, eliminate pre-payment penalties, new loan fees, title fees, etc., which can result in costs of $1,000 to $2,000, depending on the amount of loan involved.

"Even though he would have to pay a higher interest rate on the second loan and a loan brokerage commission he still saves over the long haul, due to the fact that the higher interest rate is on a smaller amount." For example, to go from a $15,000 at eight per cent, deducting costs, makes the second deed of trust proposition more feasible."

Crabtree, who also gives talks on learning how to plan investments more efficiently, stresses, diversification and "liquidity" of assets.

ON TAX shelters, he said, "Many individuals have reached the income level where they find themselves in an income bracket which takes from 20 to 30 per cent and in some cases more of their earnings."

In such cases, he said, "to add an investment that brings in additional income through interest earnings, will only increase the tax picture."

Instead an investor "could have developed an investment that would allow additional earnings with proper tax shelter."

Crabtree also stresses "growth potential," which can be realized when we can immediately re-invest principal and interest earning — without additions of outside capital and increase an overall investment portfolio.

"THE compounding factor becomes more meaningful and results in increased earnings," he said. "These increased earnings become more important and necessary during the retirement period when you can afford more income earnings as your set monthly income is reduced to a minimum amount and the added earnings won't hurt taxwise."

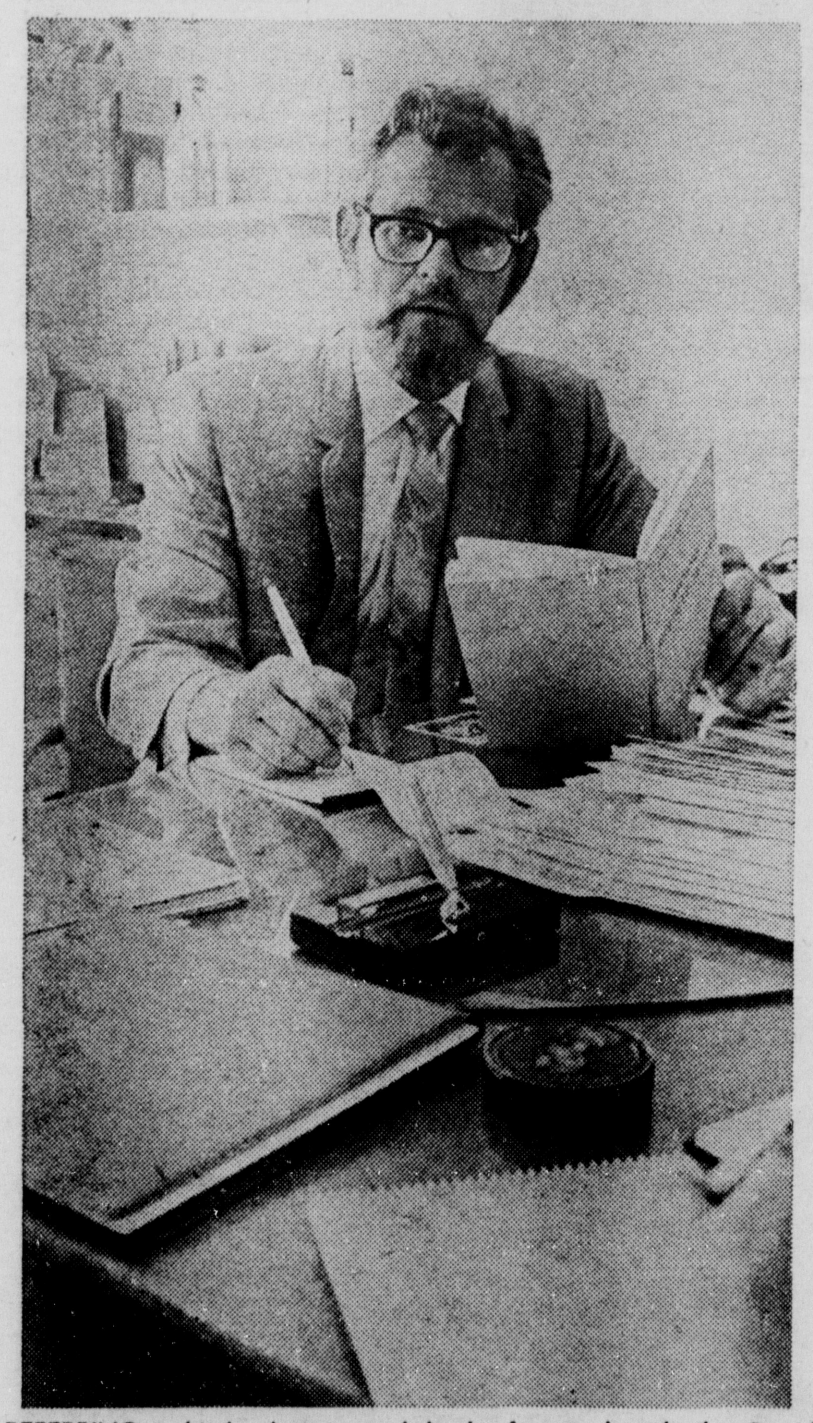
"Too often," Crabtree said, "individuals find themselves with all their eggs in one basket which leaves them indefensible against the adversities which may result from changing economic conditions."

Investors also must learn to make decisions when conditions demand them, Crabtree said. When you analyze the small percentage of individuals who have made a considerable amount of money over the years, you discover . . . "they were able to achieve success because they were able to make decisions."

"IF WE lack self confidence and are afraid to move, and worry and fret, when we do make a decision concerning money matters, then the process become even more painful," he said.

"To vacillate, procrastinate can consume a certain amount of time and energy, but never helped anyone make progress or money."

Crabtree, a partner in S and C Homes Loans, with B. D. Schulz, not only is eager to spread the word about second deeds, but frankly admits, he is also trying to make the firm "the largest" in the field.



REFERRING to his book on second deeds of trusts, loan broker David J. Crabtree makes a few notations at his office in San Rafael.

Corte Madera Proud Of Its Past

Early Day Residents Worked As Community

(Editor's Note: The Independent-Journal Marin Magazine is running a series of "state of our city" reports on Marin's municipalities, prepared by officials of those cities. This week's report on Corte Madera was submitted by Mayor Holmes S. Norville)

by HOLMES S. NORVILLE

Today, the Town of Corte Madera is visible evidence of seventy years of unflagging citizen interest in a community.

Its name is derived from early maps which designated the area in Spanish as "Corte Madera del Presidio". A free translation into English would be that the areas was the source of lumber and firewood for the Presidio of San Francisco.

In 1834, an Irishman named John Reed obtained a land grant from the Mexican governor in Monterey of that part of Corte Madera del Presidio extending one league from Point Tiburon to Arroyo Holon, now known as Baltimore Canyon in Larkspur. After a survey, Reed claimed one square league, about nine square miles, that was closest to Point Tiburon. The unclaimed land, extending roughly from Alto Hill to Baltimore Canyon became known as the Corte Madera Sobrentes; in English the Corte Madera leftovers.

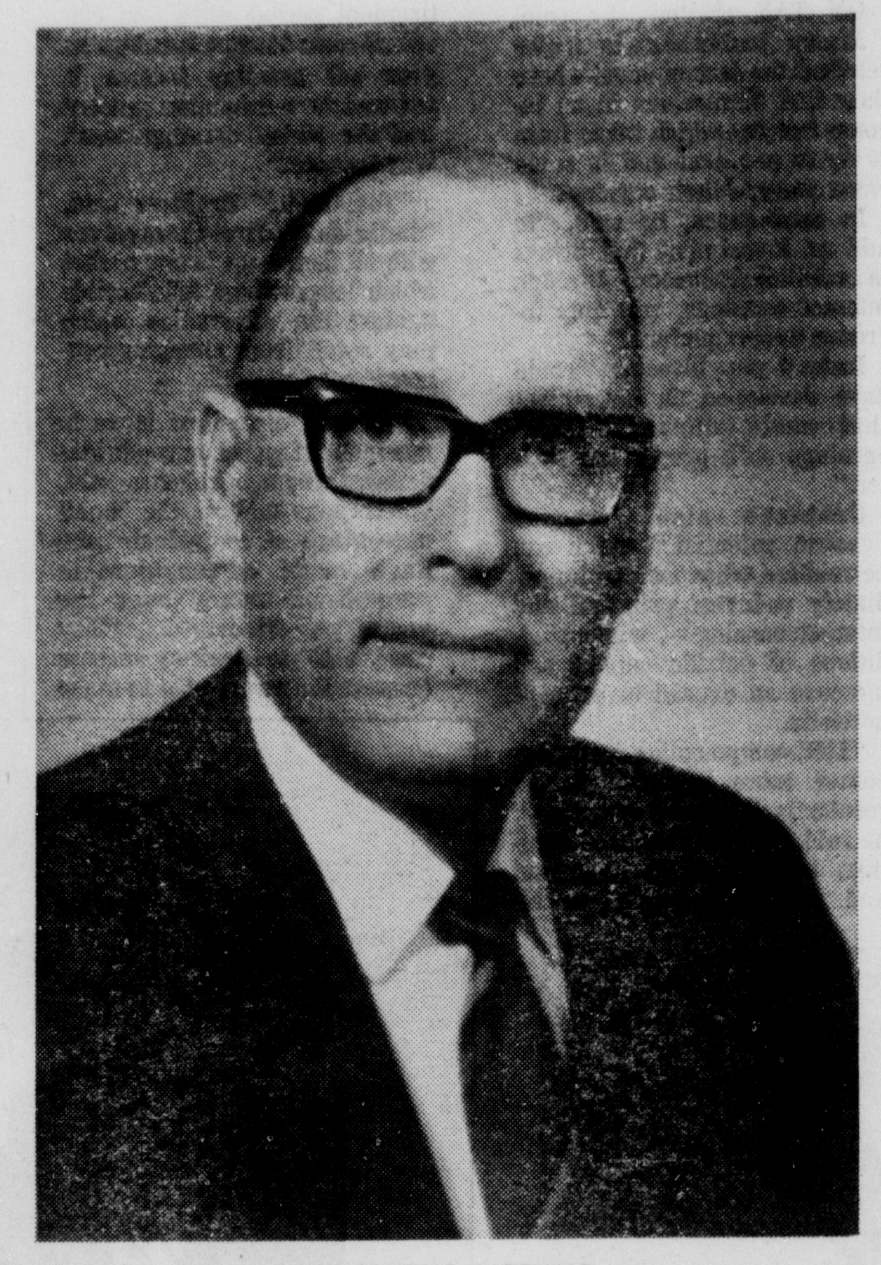
THESE leftovers, now identified by the familiar names of Meadowsweet, Stetson, Chapman and Christmas Tree Hill were included by Marin County in the "Township of Sausalito" until 1890 when they became a part of the "Township of San Rafael".

During the intervening years, a number of 160 acre tracts were homesteaded on the wooded slopes and grassy meadows, which were described in an 1891 real estate advertisement as follows: "in point of soil, climate, water view and vicinage to San Francisco, there is no place in the state more desirable." With improvements, the asking price was $400 per acre.

We have no doubt that eighty years later, the County Assessor considered this description and value in arriving at his 1971 property assessments.

In 1897, the heads of the less than one hundred families living in the area banded together to solve their sanitation and drainage problems. After much study and discussion, these citizens incorporated Marin County Sanitary District No. 2 in 1901, which in 1906 laid its first main sewer line that was to carry household wastes and surface rain water to the bay. This Sanitary District continues to perform this service, now as a department of the Town.

ALSO IN 1906, the Corte Madera Women's Club and the Corte Madera Volunteer Fire Department were organized to provide essential community services as their names imply. Both exist today and continue to work actively in their respective fields.



HOLMES S. NORVILLE
Corte Madera Mayor

By 1916, the community had grown to 500 public-spirited and far-sighted citizens who incorporated the area as the "Town of Corte Madera", a general law entity.

The Town Council, as the governing body, conducted its meetings along the lines of a New England Town Meeting. Every citizen was given the opportunity to speak at any meeting on subjects under discussion, or bring up new ones. That procedure is followed today.

The electorate believed in a pay-as-you-go policy, but relized that the cost of some necessary improvements had to be spread out over the years. It approved bond issues for street improvements, a fire alarm system and a fire truck while defeating proposals to build a town hall and fire station.

During its first 25 years of existence the population doubled to 1,095, but it was still a very small community.

FOLLOWING World War II, many people who had come to the Bay Area to work in war industry decided to remain in California and live in Marin County. Corte Madera got its share of them. The small orchards and pastures were turned into homesites and the influx of homeowners resulted in a great increase in services provided by the police, fire and street departments as well as the sanitary district and other utilities. When the lands above sea level were fully subdivided, developers turned to the tidal swamps for building sites.

In this situation, the importance of master planning and financial responsibility within established guidelines became of paramount importance. The Town Council took timely, positive action to achieve these ends by creating in 1947, a Planning Commission whose duties were to make adequate provision for and guide the future growth, development,

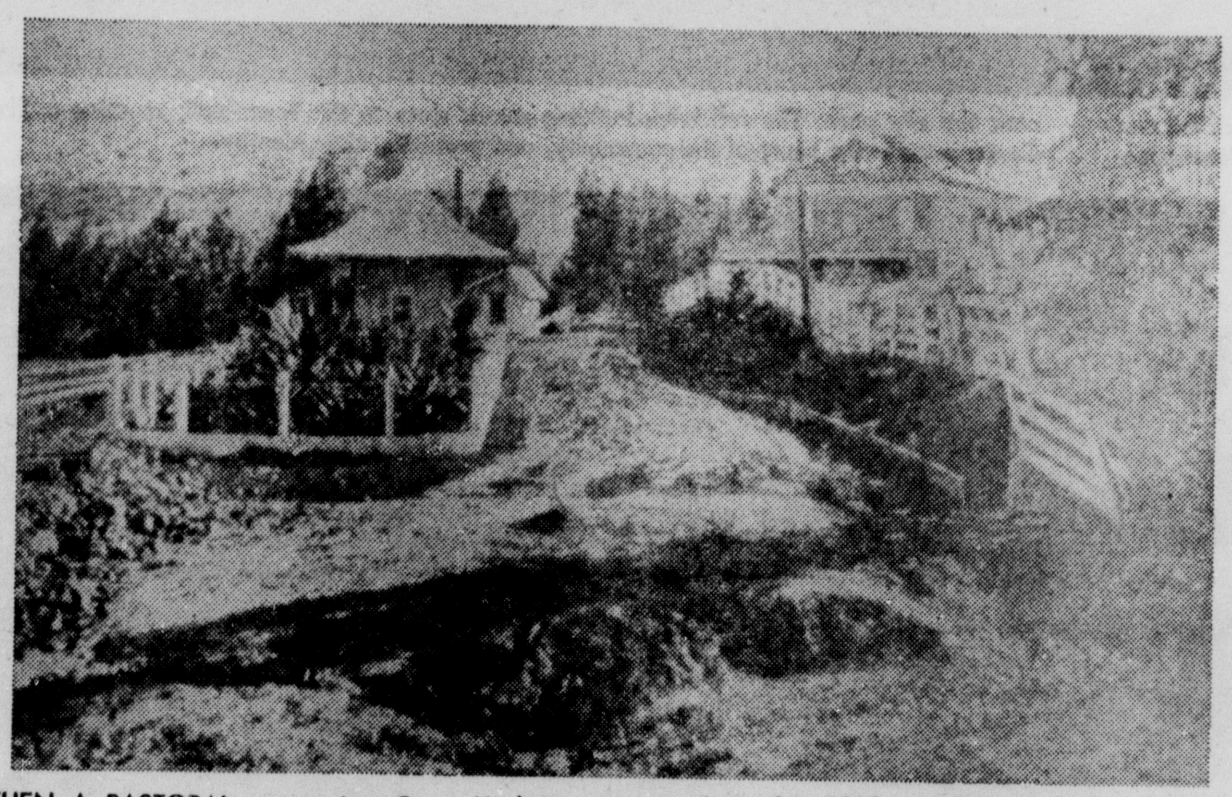
TOWN HALL, at Tamalpais Drive and Willow Avenue, once the old fire house was remodeled several years ago, and it, together with the nearby public safety building, combined to serve as a civic center for the community.

COLORFUL PARADES, such as the one shown above, during the celebration of the town's 50th anniversary in 1966, are a part of Corte Madera's history.



THEN A PASTORA' community, Corte Madera, as pictured in 1989, was later to attract an influx of San Franciscans after the 1906 earthquake.

beautification and efficient planning of the Town of Corte Madera.

By 1958, the volume of proposals submitted to this Commission required the creation of a Board of Design to foster the preservation of the natural beauty of the Townsite, prevent the indiscriminate clearing of property and the destruction of trees and shrubs, prevent excessive and unsightly grading of hillsides and insure that new uses and structures enhance their sites and harmonize with improvements in the surrounding area, and a Board of Adjustments, which was to promote the public health, safety and welfare, to further the objectives of the zoning plan and to do substantial justice.

MEMBERS were to be selected on the basis of education, training and experience in the fields of architecture, art, city planning or landscape architecture or other fields concerned with the design of cities and structures and open spaces therein.

There resided in the town citizens who met these qualifications and were willing to serve as members without compensation.

These public-spirited citizens devoted literally hundreds of hours to the preparation of a master plan, building codes and zoning regulations while reviewing innumerable plans and specifications submitted by land developers and builders. As advisors to the Council, they gave the town its pattern.

Preservation of the natural beauty of the town included in the above directive to the Board of Design was simply a restatement of a policy in effect since incorporation. One of the first official acts of the newly created Council in 1916 was to persuade the Northwestern Pacific Railroad to join in converting the unsightly surroundings of its Corte Madera station to a jointly maintained park. This exists today as Menke Park. Small plots of ground at street intersections were planted with flowering shrubs while the growth of weeds along the streets and in vacant lots was controlled by periodic cleanups.

IN ITS early days, outdoor recreation was readily available to the residents in the nearby waters of San Francisco Bay and the wooded slopes of Mount Tamalpais. But looking to the future, the Council purchased in 1939, specifically for park and recreational purposes, 23 acres of tidal swamp land east of Pixley Avenue and north of what is now Tamalpais Drive.

In 1952, the Council created a Park and Recreation Commission to investigate and report with regard to all park and recreation matters in an advisory capacity. The resulting program centered upon developing the swamp into 23 acres of greensward located in the heart of the Town.

This Town Park is now landscaped and equipped with tennis courts, a baseball diamond, children's playground, a fly-casting pool and picnic areas among other facilities. It is heartwarming to see the park used for family barbecues and the visitors on weekends total several thousand, coming from all over Marin County.

There are also Town-maintained playground facilities in several neighborhoods.

In recent years, the Town has provided a year-round supervised recreation program for all ages from tiny tots to senior citizens, joining with Larkspur for this purpose. For the 1971 Summer quarter, the schedule is quite varied.

FOR PRE-SCHOOL age children, there are play groups and classes in story-telling, tumbling and ballet dancing. For older youths, instruction is NATURAL BEAUTY, as captured in the cover photo of the Town Park, is a heritage the Town of Corte Madera is working to preserve. In a report on the state of the city, Mayor Holmes S. Norville touches upon ecology as well as economy.

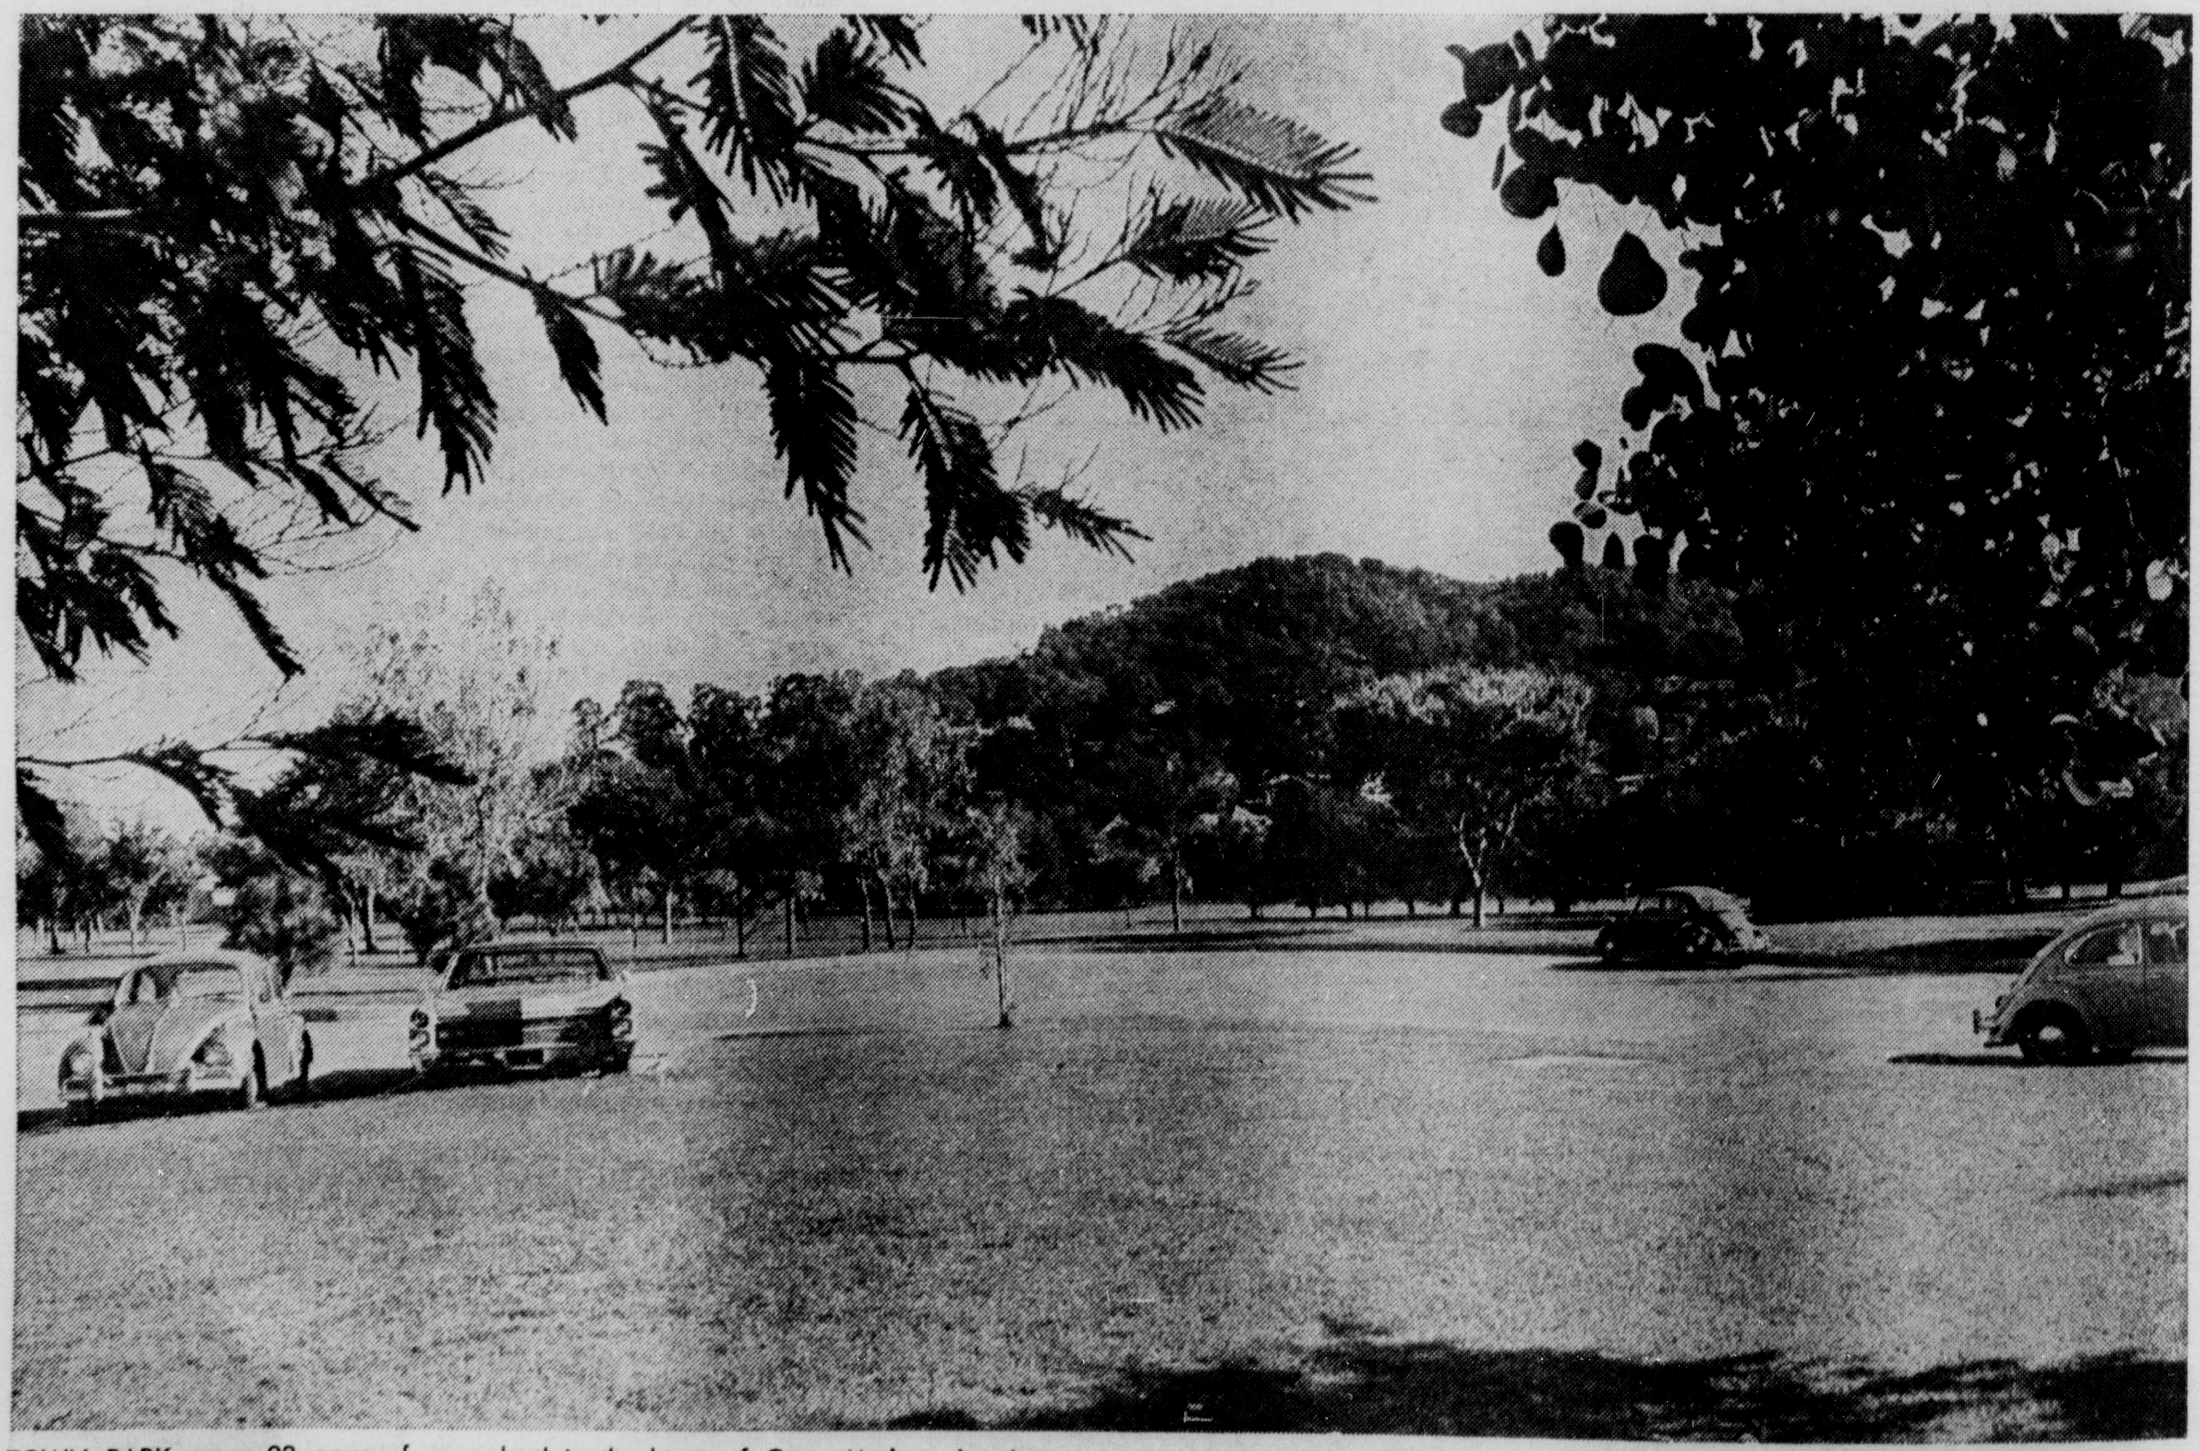
THE PUBLIC SAFETY BUILDING, at Tamalpais Drive and Pixley Avenue, which houses police and fire headquarters, is an attractive, low building that blends into the landscape near the city park. The red brick building stands close to the Town Hall, creating a Civic Center area in the heart of the community, and providing civic identity.



TOWN PARK, once 23 acres of swampland in the heart of Corte Madera, has been transformed into a recreational area that attracts residents and visitors from throughout Marin. There are barbecue pits and picnic areas along with recreational facilities that serve residents of all ages and the park provides a significant open space in the midst of development.

ON THE STEREO SCENE

By JOHN SUNIER

BERLIOZ: The Complete Songs with Orchestra, including "Les Nuits D'Ete" — Armstrong/Veasey/Patterson/Shirley-Quirk/London Symphony/Colin Davis — PHILIPS SAL 3789: Back to Berlioz and a lovely collection of pieces in a form which was an essential part of the composer's musical being. Of the 20 solo songs he wished to preserve, Berlioz wrote a version for solo voice and orchestra of eleven. These eleven are gathered together for the first time on record in this album. They include the six that make up the cycle "Les Nuits d'ete." The subject of the songs is romantic love in various degrees of involvement. Though the composer is known for his grandious orchestrations, in these songs he employs the orchestra with masterly subtlety, using more modest resources instrumentally. All four soloists are superb, and complete translations of the songs are included in the album.

ELGAR: Enigma Variations; Cockaigne - London Symphony/Colin Davis — Philips PHS 900-140: The famous noble and expressive theme of the "Enigma Variations" has probably never had a more beautiful presentation on records than Davis'. And the remainder of the 14 variations uphold the stirring beginning. Davis makes this piece, which I personally long considered rather stodgy and boring, a quite exciting experience. The lengthy overture is a sort of musical portrait of Edwardian London Town. Again, above par stereo sound.

DVORAK: Symphony No. 7 in D Minor; Carnival Overture - London Symphony/Antal Dorati — MERCURY SR 90516: To condense the required Dvorak-symphony-numbering explanation to a sentence: This one used to be called No. 2. It doesn't get played or recorded much, but deserves attention for its many fine melodies and majestic moods. While the most serious work the composer had penned up to this time, the Seventh Symphony also has a warmth that is pure Dvorak.

THE NAKED CARMEN - Detroit Symphony/Paray/David Hess/Melba Moore/William Walker/Mary Bruce and Her Starbuds/Pig Iron/John Atkins/ adapted from BIZET's "Carmen" by John Corigliano and David Hess — MERCURY SRM 1-604: This was one of the first "rock operas," having been out for some time now, but it failed to get the attention it deserved and I thought mention now might be worthwhile. The project grew out of discussions on expanding interest in classical music and the wish to produced an album from all worlds of music. Bizet's indestructible "Carmen" was chosen for the guinea pig and comes through virtually unscathed. The story is of course brought up-to-date, electric pianos and Moogs have their day in the new arrangements, and performers include stars from "Hair," the Met Opera, a children's tape dance troupe, a folksinger, and the entire Detroit Symphony fer god sakes.

The album is physically quite a trippy experience. Most of the artwork is collage material with a high sense of humor abounding. The new lyrics are included, and the whole album — with the small addition of some tacks and rubber bands — makes into a musical instrument!

Musically, my favorite tracks were the Marching Song (featuring kazoo solo), the Flower Song (as heard on a very scratchy old wind-up gramophone), and the Carmen Fantasette in which concert pianist John Atkins has a slight slip of memory (you see Escamillio is a longhair pianist rather than a toreador). Lots of fun for music listeners of all persuasions, and all ages.

FRANKIE LAINE, veteran singer, now splits his time between singing and his sports fishing boat since he moved to San Diego three years ago.

Frankie Laine Has Gained His Sea Legs

By VERNON SCOTT

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Italians are noted for singing and fishing, among other accomplishments, and Frankie Laine devotes six months of every year to each.

Laine's real name is Lo Vecchio. His parents were born in Sicily. Thus Frankie comes by his talents with legitimate credentials.

Laine not only sings for money — a great deal of it — he also fishes for money — a pittance.

HIS SINGING career blossomed 20 years ago with such hits as "I Believe," "Jezebel" and "Mule Train." Perhaps his biggest success was "My Desire," which is also the name of his 34-foot sports fishing boat.

When Frankie moved to San Diego three years ago he and his wife, former actress Nan Grey, knew nothing about boating or fishing.

"Every time we went out in the boat I got seasick," Laine said. "Finally I found a pill for pregnant women that worked. Now I never get seasick."

SOMEONE showed Frankie and Nan how to bait hooks and catch albacore, a high class tuna.

Suddenly the Laines became fishing nuts. When Frankie isn't on the road singing in the country's top nightclubs or cutting new recordings in Hollywood, he is on "My Desire" hauling in fish.

"I caught so many that we had them canned by a private company with my own sticker as a label," Frankie said. "Then I sent this great canned tuna to my friends for Christmas, birthdays and special occasions."

Frankie soon ran out of friends whose larders weren't stocked with his bounty from the sea.

WHEN HE began landing 50 20-pound albacore a day — with help from Nan, the boat's skipper and a guest or two — Frankie didn't know it but he was in the commercial fishing business.

"I got a commercial license," the singer said proudly. "One day this year we landed 85 big ones. I sell them to a local cannery now."

Flushed with success and pills for pregnant women, Frankie is having a new, larger boat built — "My Desire II", 45-feet long.

When the albacore aren't biting, Frankie and Nan land sailfish, marlin and an occasional shark. The latter they cut loose.

EVEN with the new boat Frankie doesn't plan to rely on fishing for income. "By the time I pay the skipper, fuel costs, dockage, equipment, bait and maintenance there is no real profit in fishing.

"But it's great sport and good fun."

Nor does Frankie dream of building a fishing fleet. "I'd rather sing than fish," he said defensively. "I think I'm a better singer than a fisherman. And anyhow, it pays better."

Garner Has Groovy Pad

By VERNON SCOTT

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Jim Garner, who began his climb to fame in television's "Maverick" series, is back on the tube as the star of "Nichols."

In "Maverick" he was always one step ahead of the sheriff. In his new NBC show he IS the sheriff, albeit a reluctant one.

The only association Garner has with the law in private life is an occasional traffic ticket. A long time racing buff, Garner once owned and backed a series of grand prix race cars. Now his interest has dwindled due to a heavy work load.

HE IS content to tear around Southern California in a Mini-Cooper — an imported British car — that has been souped up to outspeed most vehicles on the tortuous canyon roads that lead from home to studio.

Home is a showplace. One day when visiting Steve McQueen in Brentwood, a posh area near Beverly Hills, Garner was smitten by a wooded acreage contiguous to McQueen's property.

That was five years ago. Today the property is enhanced by a home which brings to mind the best of Frank Lloyd Wright: openness, glass, wood and rock all blending into the mountains.

THERE IS a swimming pool and a view of the Pacific.

The living room is breathtaking, 36-feet by 18-feet and soaring 20 feet high. All the doors leading into the room are made of glass.

What with large dark brown leather chairs, a heavy glass coffee table and an enormous fire place, one has the feeling of entering a hunting lodge.

A circular driveway takes the visitor to an iron gate through a garden and up eight steps to the entry hall. Another eight steps leads to the living room. The house is built on four levels, with the garage and billiard room occupying the lowest level — the bedrooms the top level.

THERE are separate servants quarters and a full-time gardener. Garner, however, has left most of the acreage in its natural state of towering trees and lush undergrowth.

Garner and his wife, Lois, have been undergoing domestic problems, but they are working out their differences. They are the parents of Gigi, 13, who is the apple of her Daddy's eye. Lois' daughter by a previous marriage is 23, and attends school in Florida.

The Garners entertain sparingly. Usually they'll have from two to six guests for dinner: "You can't talk to people if the party is any larger than that."

Garner is by nature a stay-at-home. He avoids cattle call parties, premieres and the cocktail circuit.

He's up each weekday morning at 6:15 and at the studio by 7:30 ready to work. Although he owns "Nichols," it is shot at Warner Bros. site of the old "Maverick" series.

His working day is usually 13 hours.

A TYPICAL weekend will find Jim slouched in a comfortable chair watching as many football games on television as he can find. Thereafter he reads over his scripts, takes a dip in the pool and not infrequently engages Gigi in a game of poker.

"I always beat her," Garner says, grinning.

The one thing that puzzles Garner is that he sees less of neighbor Steve McQueen than he did before building his home next door to his fellow actor and racing buff.

Guest TV Shots Held Pay The Rent

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — "Guest Star" generally is a euphemistic term for an actor appearing as a supporting player on a regular television series in order to pay the rent that month.

A guest star is paid from $2,500 to $3,500 for a week's work.

Sometimes, if his name is sufficiently large, he may earn more. Often he is paid less.

BUT THE practice does serve to keep the actor's name and face before the public. And the money holds off the sheriff for still another week.

Often guest stars are injected into anemic shows to bolster faltering ratings. Their worth is moot. But the practice flourishes in a town distinguished worldwide as the citadel of paranoia.

A leading exponent of the guest star syndrome is David Gerber, senior vice-president of 20th Century-Fox Television. The studio's two network series, "Nanny and the Professor" and "Cade's County" are larded with featured actors.

Rapid Growth Era At End

provided in sewing, knitting, ice skating, ballet, tap, hula and creative dancing, judo, tennis and acrobatics, guitar and recorder playing.

Teen-agers and adults can participate in yoga, tennis, tap, ballet and belly dancing, sewing, knitting, sailing, guitar and recorder playing and a ceramics workshop. Senior citizens meet weekly for card games and sightseeing trips. More than 600 people are participating in this program, and they come from all over Marin County.

Enlargement of the Fire, Police, Street and Sanitary Departments has kept pace with the town's growth. They provide services that most residents take for granted, performing their varied duties automatically, day after day, for the general comfort and tranquility. They respond quickly when called for individual emergencies.

TO HOUSE its various activities, the town used general revenue to purchase the land occupied by the Civic Center and Corporation Yard, to remodel the old Fire House for use as a Town Hall, and to erect suitable buildings at the Corporation Yard. Only the Public Safety Building and Fire Station No. 2 were financed by a bond issue.

The Lions Club and the town entered into a 25-year agreement on August 4, 1952, providing for leasing a portion of the Town Park for construction of a Recreation Center thereon by the Lions Club, with the club to maintain and operate the building for the duration of the contract and ownership to be retained by the Town. The Santiary District's former office nearby has been converted to a "Drop-In Center" for teenagers.1

From time to time for mutually advantageous reasons, the town has availed itself of services provided by Marin County.

In 1941, the town joined the County communications network which provided two-way radio between the Center and police cars. This has expanded until it now includes the police station and fire trucks, plus teletype service.

In 1946, the town turned over to the county enforcement of all statutes relating to public health; in 1949, the Marin County Humane Society was designated as Animal Control Officer; in 1953, court functions were transferred to the Marin County District Court and in 1958, property tax assessment and collection were transferred to the County. Since 1963, the town has used the County contract for the purchase of bulk gasoline and oil at a saving.

The following independent governmental agencies serve the town which pays for their services by special levies added to the Corte Madera property owners taxes.

1. County Library District
2. Larkspur-Corte Madera and Reed Union School Districts
3. Tamalpais Union High School District
4. Marin Junior College District
5. Mosquito Abatement District
6. Air Pollution Control District
7. Marin General Hospital District
7. Marin General Hospital District
8. School Equalization District
9. Aid to the Mentally Retarded
10. Flood Control Zone 9
11. School for Physically Handicapped
12. Marin Transit District
13. Marin County Government

IN ADDITION, the town pariticpates in most of the semi-official organizations that are concerned with the environmental, conservation, rapid transit and development problems of the San Francisco Bay region.

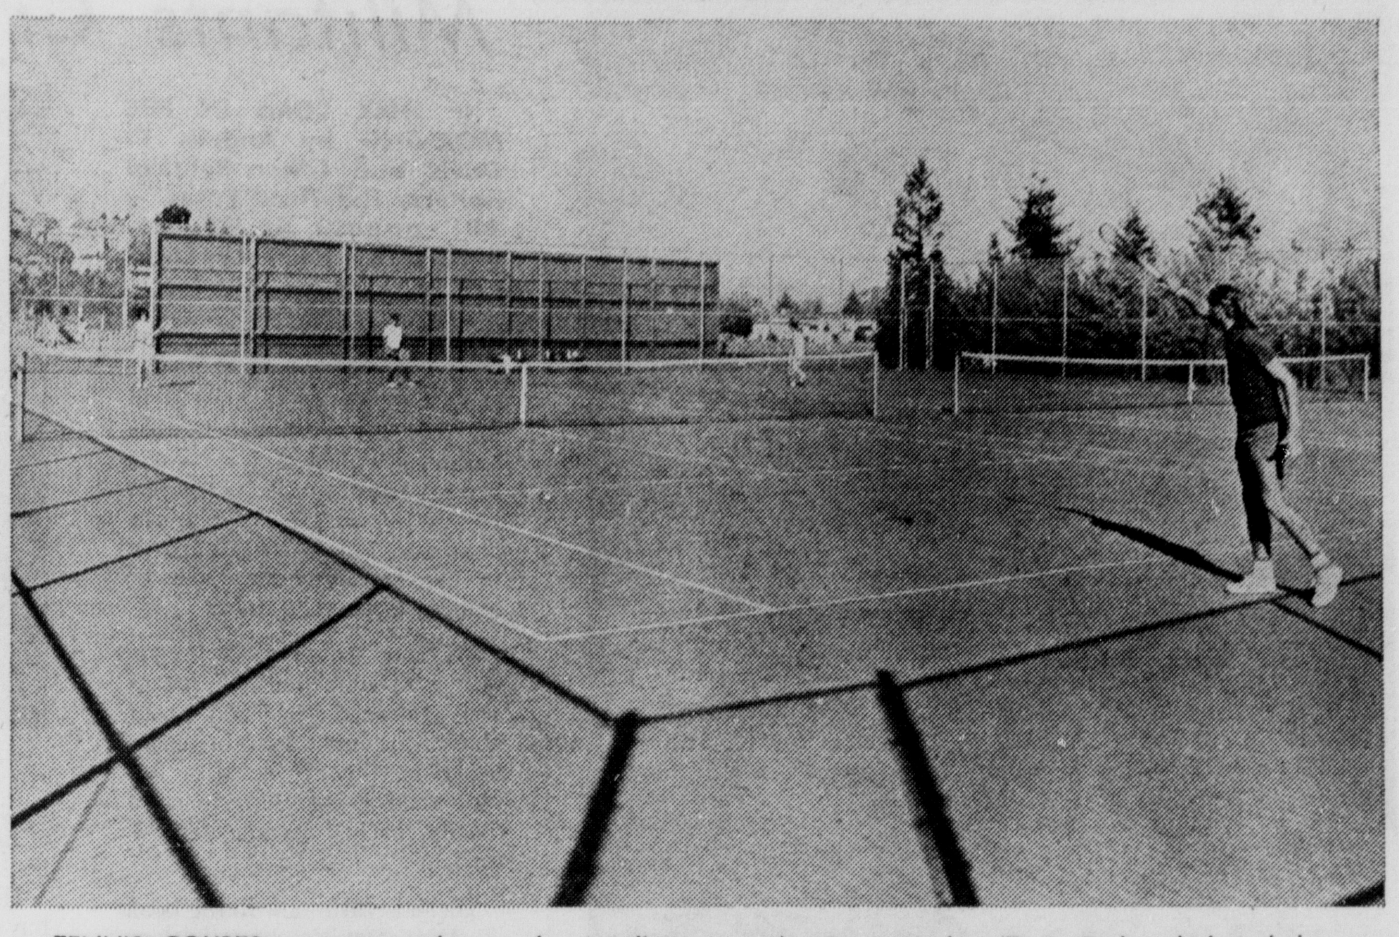
Now, every governmental action costs money which must come from the citizen's pocket in some form of taxes. By hard-headed, farsighted financial planning, the town has succeeded in judiciously anticipating and utilizing revenue from gasoline and sales taxes and various license fees in such a way that property tax rates have been kept at a low level.

For comparison in the fiscal 1916-17 year, the population was 500, the assessed valuation, $480,240 and the property tax rate, $1; in 1963-64, the population was 8,200, the assessed valuation, $13,966,490, and the tax rate, $1; and in 1970-71, the population, 9,000, the assessed valuation $24,824,995 and the tax rate, $1.09.

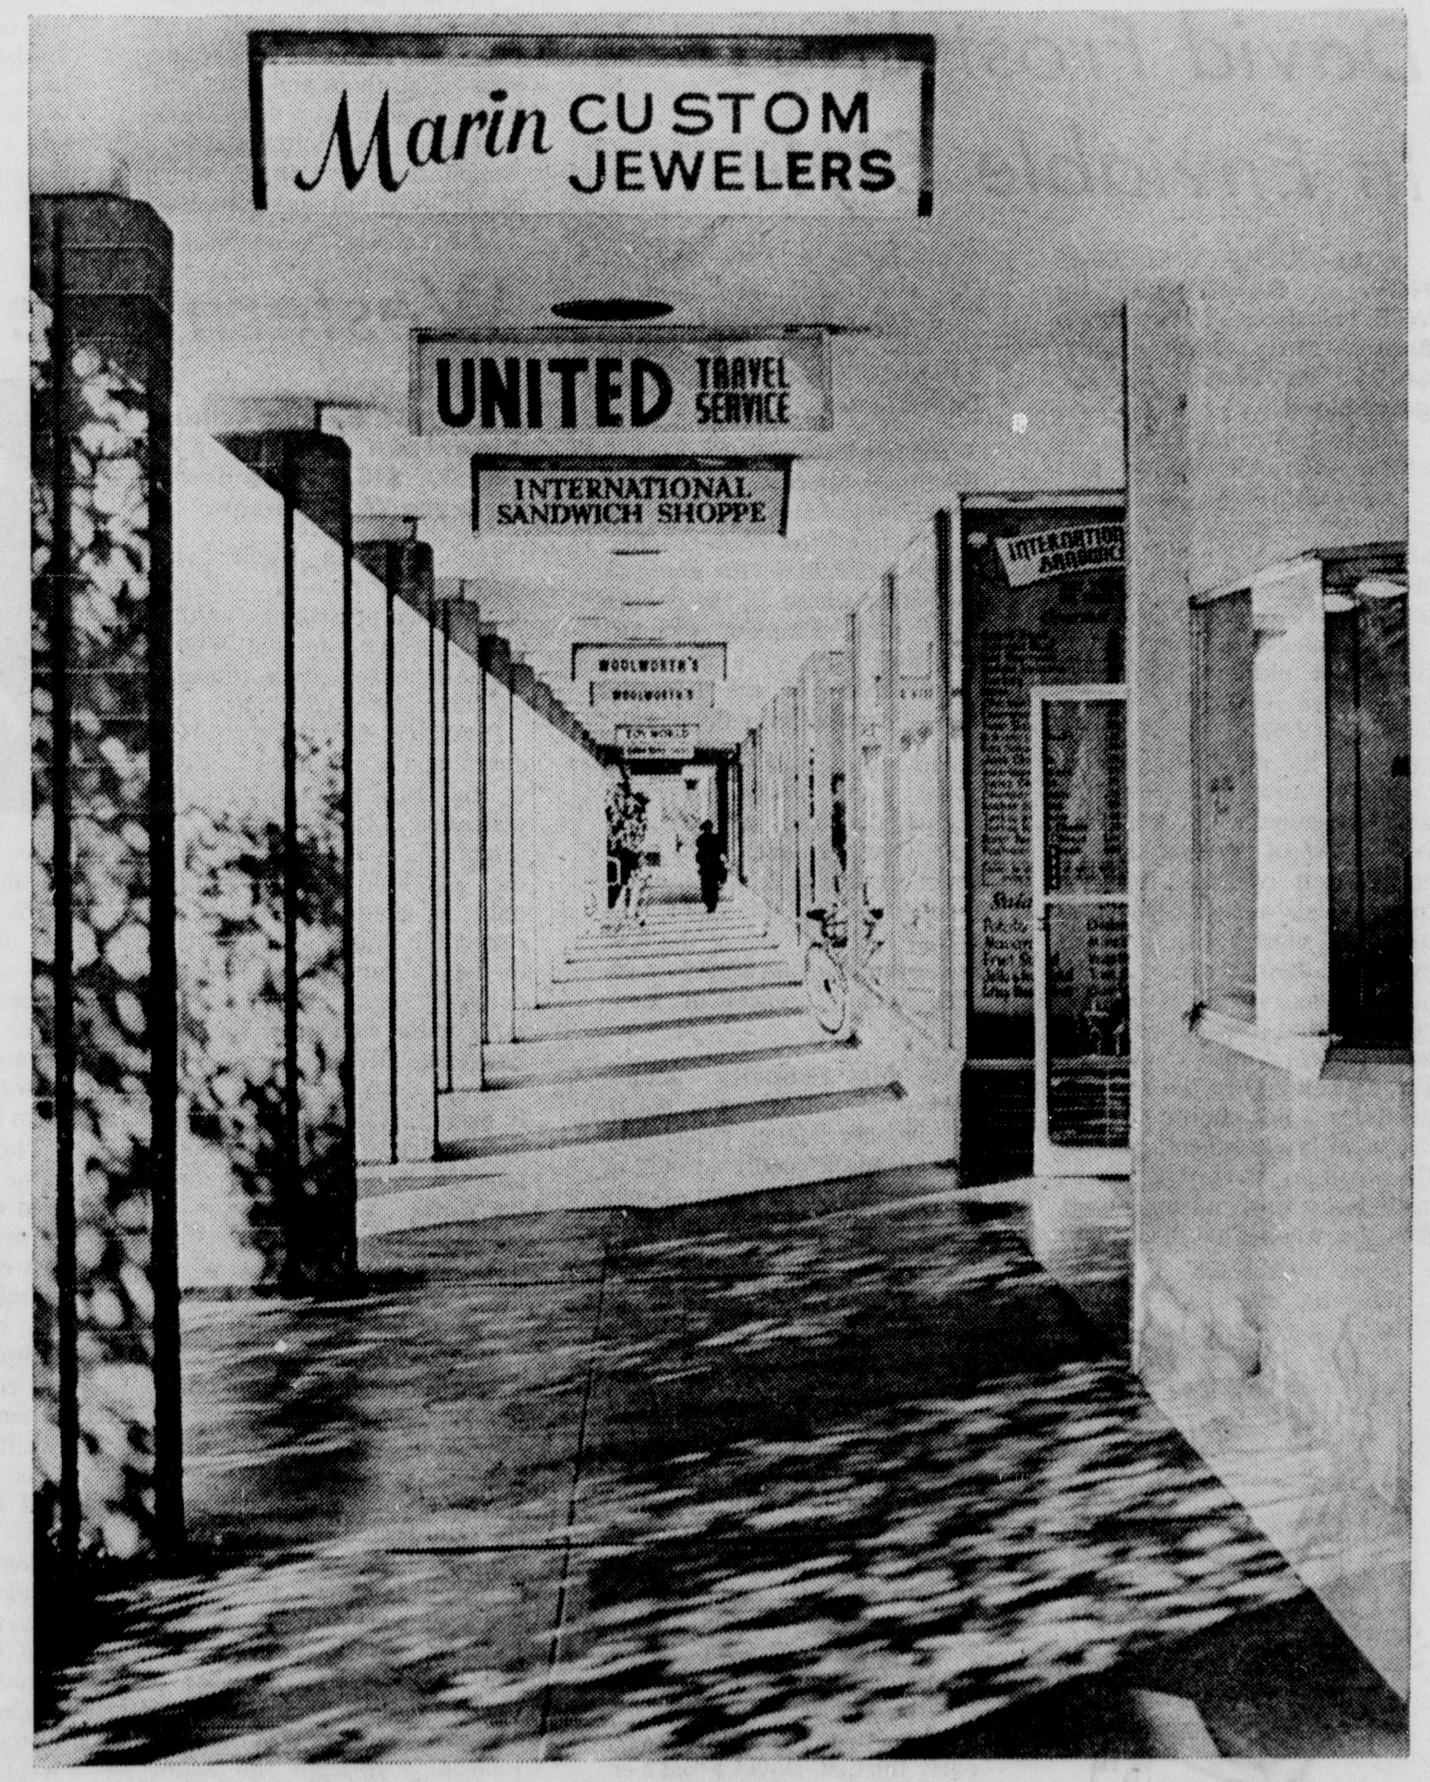
THE RAPID growth phase of Corte Madera has ended. With few exceptions, the only vacant lands are the tidal swamps along San Francisco Bay. Although much study has been given to the problem of how to use this area in a way to give the owners a profit, benefit the Town and at the same time conserve San Francisco Bay, no ideal answer has been found.

There has been progress in solving the transportation problem, but much remains to be done. Finally, there is the possibility of becoming part of a huge metropolitan complex formed by a consolidation of all southern Marin communities.

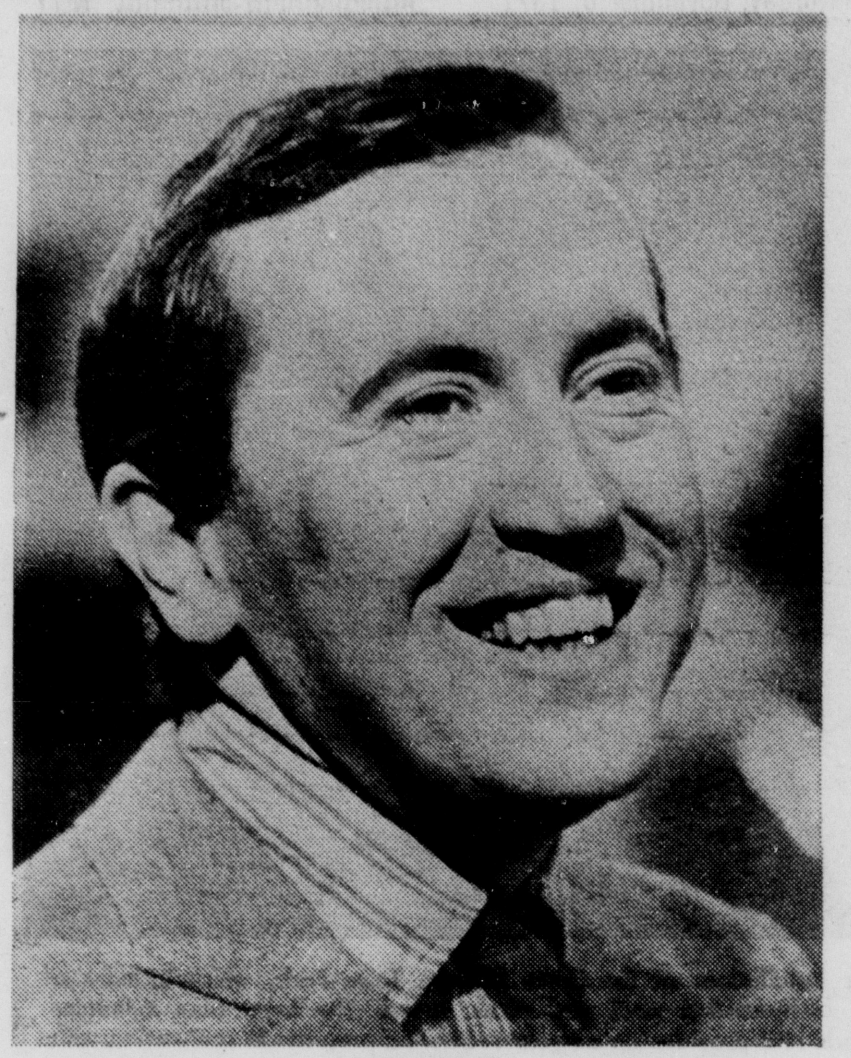
Contributing to the quality of life in Corte Madera and adjacent areas are five grammar schools, two high schools, four private schools, two colleges, seven churches, a public library, 12 homeowners association, five shopping centers, a Chamber of Commerce, Lions, Optimist and Sertoma Clubs, Women's Improvement Club, Twin Cities Little League, three cub packs, three scout troops, two explorer posts, two Brownie troops, four junior girl scout troops, one cadette and one senior troop.



TENNIS COURTS are among the popular installations at the Corte Madera Town Park, which includes a baseball diamond, children's playground, a fly-casting pool and picnic areas. The town also maintains playground facilities in several neighborhoods and provides an all-year recreation program in conjunction with Larkspur.



THE CORTE MADERA Shopping Center, anchored by Montgomery Ward, has served customers from throughout Marin, and plans have been disclosed for another major shopping area, east of Highway 101, which would make Corte Madera a regional shopping area.



DAVID FROST
The Good Life

David Frost Lives In Enviable Style

WILL YOU WELCOME NOW . . . DAVID FROST by Willi Frischauer; Hawthorn Books, Inc.; 248 pages, $6.95. Reviewed by Eugene Block.

If David Frost isn't living the great American dream now, he's coming close enough to make every male who reads about his life in "Will You Welcome Now" . . . jealously want to change roles with him.

Frischauer's story of Frost's work and play is filled with celebrities, beautiful women who did anything to become a guest on his program, internationally famous restaurants which schemed wildly to get the young host of the talk show to eat in their confines, bring as many guests as he wanted, and pick up gladly the tab for everyone, themselves.

The "biography" is 95 percent now and five percent filled with a very quick view of Frost's being born the son of a minister, not being overly bright in grade school, going to Cambridge, having a strong taste for satire, putting "That Was the Week That Was" into many people's living room on two continents, and making "Will you welcome now . . .?" a common household phrase in all parts of Britain and the United States.

The majority of the book is filled with anecdotes on Liz and Dick, Jackie and Ari, Meg and her husband the Photographer, Johnny and Joey: the competitors with whom David is such good pals, Frankie, Frankie, Jr. and Nancy, and many, many more of the beautiful people from all over the world.

Anecdotes are also given about world famous airlines, nightclubs and restaurants. Two separate ones are given about Ernie's in San Francisco. Footnoting one of them, the author calls it "one of the best restaurants in the world — superb cooking, excellent service."

As his publicity people worked at letting every potential listener know, Frischauer also spends a goodly amount of space telling how Frost spends as much time in London as he does in the States. Anecdotes are also related to affirm the fact that BOAC is proud to have Frost as one of their best customers.

With a life equally spent in two countries, innumerable tax deductions to be made in both of them, of beautiful women of two continents conniving for his favors — on and off camera —, leaders of world powers desiring an easy question to be posed to them on his program, an empire emerging of many diverse interests, unbelievable wealth, and still in his very early thirties, David Frost's enviable life is interestingly told by Willi Frischauer.

Militants Cry "Politics"

IF THEY COME IN THE MORNING by Angela Y. Davis and Other Political isoners, The Third Press, 281 pages, $6.95; reviewed by Mary Leydecker.

In an "open letter to my sister, Angela Davis," James Baldwin wrote, "we must fight for your life as though it were our own — which it is — and render impassable with our bodies the corridor to the gas chamber. For, if they take you in the morning, they will be coming for us that night."

"If They Come in the Morning" is a collection of writings and statements by and about black militants apparently published on the eve of Miss Davis's trial in an effort to raise money for her lagging defense fund.

There is little new in the book — Miss Davis's contributions are a statement she made in court earlier this year, a letter she wrote to Erica Huggins and interviews that have mainly been printed elsewhere.

The fact that Miss Davis has chosen to align herself completely with Rucbell Magee, the Soledad brothers and other militants is no longer news. However, for those interested in a compilation of writings which pretty well sum up the position of the black militants today, the book does that.

ANGELA DAVIS

The faithful, of course, will buy it out of loyalty but others who want to understand the "political prisoner" veiwpoint an certainly find it set forth in the book.

The writing is spotty and the editing is worse, but the message of the revolutionary blacks still comes through.

Miss Davis's own contributions in the book are well done — she is an articulate person as one would expect a college philosophy instructor.

The main problems with the book are first that it appears to have been thrown together very hastily, secondly, the questions of logic about the position Miss Davis has adopted since she was arrested.

Although she has repeatedly termed the Aug. 7 shoot-out a "glorious insurrection," she has also repeatedly proclaimed her innocence.

In an interview included in the book, Miss Davis makes an interesting statement about David Poindexter, the man who was with her when she was arrested in New York.

Although Poindexter was cleared earlier this year of charges of harboring a fugitive, Miss Davis is quoted as saying in an interview that "he put his life on the line in order to assist me to escape my executioners."

This statement, coming after a court cleared Poindexter because the government had put on no evidence to show he knew Miss Davis was wanted by authorities, seems typical of the curious position she has taken.

At any rate, she seems willing to play out the hand of a political figure, remaining in jail for months on end while her attorneys delay the case. The publication of "If They Come in the Morning" is apparently another chapter in a now familiar two-pronged legal and political defense.

Western Dream Of Riches

GOLD AND SILVER IN THE WEST by T. . Wtkins; American West, 277 pages, $13.95. Reviewed by Bryce W. Anderson.

The American Dream was really many dreams; and one of the most persistent was that of finding riches in gold on or in the earth of this great, mysterious, unexplored continent.

It started with the conquistadores, and after Cortes in Mexico and Pizarro in Peru found gold and silver "beyond the dreams of avarice," it could not die. Yet it lived only as myth until a chance discovery by carpenter James Marshall led to the California gold rush exactly 400 years after the Spaniards found rich silver mines in Zacatecas, Mexico.

It was a dream almost entirely peculiar to the Far West, and the hundreds of thousands who pursued it did much to shape the West.

Many have written of western gold and silver strikes, of the boom towns that turned ghost towns, of the men who struck it rich and those who didn't. But T. H. Watkins, associate editor of American West magazine, has given the story of western mining a new dimension in "Gold and Silver in the West: the Illustrated History of an American Dream."

Watkins follows the dream from the conquistadores until it died (or perhaps merely was lost in deep sleep) because of the depression of gold and silver prices in the 1930s. He follows it through the Southwest, California, the Rockies, the Great Basin, the Black Hills, even to Alaska and the Yukon.

Reviews Of New Reading

His account is no mere retelling of oft-told tales. He traces the searches, discoveries, developments and deaths of boom after boom, dream after dream, the almost-unvaried but ever-new transition from bonanza to borrasca.

The story was ever the same: There was not enough gold to go around. (And when it came to silver, there was even less chance, for silver could not be merely picked up or pounded out of the rock; it required complicated extraction processes, so that the discoverer was at the mercy of the financier.)

Little is missing from Watkins' account. But that is only half the book. The second part deals with the geology and technology, the city building, the stock promotions, the litigation-spawning complexities of mining law — all the appurtenances of "El Dorado" that made the West so different from the East, and from the West as depicted in popular fiction and movies.

Throughout, the volume is lavishly illustrated with pictures, old and new, that point up the story even more sharply than the writer's pulsing prose.

There has never been a book about the American West's peculiar dream to match "Gold and Silver in the West."

At that, it calls for a sequel. The saga of the prospector and of the towns to which he gave birth while (for the most part) failing in his quest is amply told in this illustrated history. But there is yet another story: that of those who did strike it rich, who made the millions of which they dreamed. And often it, too, is a tragic tale: Winfield Scott Stratton forlornly drinking himself to death in the house he built with his own hands in Colorado Springs before he made his millions out of Cripple Creek; Ed Schieffelin, Midas-rich from the discovery of Tombstone, found dead beside a cold pot of beans in an Oregon cabin where he had fled to escape it all; Baby Doe Tabor breathing her last in the snowbound shaft house of the Matchless, alone and forgotten. And many others.

For them, the dream came true, but terribly.

THE BOOK PAGES

The Past Is Recalled In Flood of Nostalgia

By FRANK FARRARA

Nostalgia is popular these days, be it a revival of a broadway musical, old movies or comic books, and it comes in many forms.

Publishers, who have been on the bandwagon with reissues of earlier works, are tapping other signposts of the past, including a street, New York City's 52nd Street, a magazine, the early-day Esquire, and the whole gamut of a year, 1929.

The name 52nd Street doesn't resound with the glamour of say, Basin Street, Bourbon Street or South Rampart Street, in musical annals, but it had it all ... blues, swing, jazz, bop, progressive, Dixieland.

Shaw recaptures the memorable days from his own recollections, and wisely from the people who made the street; musicians, fans, club owners, comedians and songwriters.

For those who sat in the small, smokey clubs, it provokes a heady reminiscence of the past, and for the younger readers, it is a lively history of a musical era that thrilled past generations as rock concerts thrill them.

The Count Basie Band wailing away ... the late Billie Holiday singing the blues ... the late Charlie Parker and Dizzy Gillespie with their unique sound of bop ... Coleman Hawkins and his unbelievably mellow solos ... the romping piano of Fats Waller ... sessions ... thousands of choruses that drifted off into the air never to be recaptured ... that's what the street was all about.

There also were the clubs where brash, insult comedy reigned, the 21 Club which attracted the film stars, the debutantes, the literary lights, the politicians and the debutants, and restaurants, but it was the music and the musicians who made the street.

Arnold covers the entire era from the start in the prohibition days until its death in the 1950s when the strip and clip joints predominated, and the clubs were torn down one by one to make way for big buildings.

In this new world of vast problems, it might not seem important to devote a book to the happy days and happy sounds of a long gone era, but it certainly isn't anymore trifling than writing about the antics of the New York Yankees in the 1949 World Series.

While 52nd Street has faded as a music mecca, Esquire magazine which flourished in those days, is still flourishing, and Arnold Gingrich, former editor, recalls the early years in "Nothing But People".

He goes back to the pre-Esquire days, when its predecessor was a trade paper, and covers the Esquire years from 1928-58.

Gingrich was at the helm in the days of Ernest Hemingway, F. Scott Fitzgerald, Theodore Dreiser and John Dos Passos, but his journal isn't focused solely on the literary scene.

It is rather a rounded view of the business, the advertising, the promotion, the front office maneuvers, the errors and the successes and editorial squabbles.

That Esquire remains solvent, while other national magazines are fading from the news stands, is somewhat of an accomplishment, but Gingrich, who has seen it change throughout the years, believes it has survived because it has returned to its original format.

Gingrich's recollections bear out the theory that magazine publishing is a risky business, where talent, daring and hard work can bring success or failure.

One of the least risky operations in the publishing business is putting out the World Almanac each year.

American Heritage Press and Workman Publishing Co. has such faith it is appeal they have published a hard cover facimile of the 1929 almanac, containing the "complete record of 1928," which they describe as "the last of the good years."

It was the year before the depression ... the year the federal budget had a surplus of $398 million ... Herbert Hoover defeated Al Smith for the presidency.

The facts and figures are there for the readers to mull over ... the major events and the oddities ... the advertisement that told of "Government Jobs ... at $1,260 to $3,400 a year."

San Rafael is listed as "San Raphael" with a 1920 population of 5,512, and Marin voted for Hoover over Smith by 7,862 to 5,686 in the 1928 election.

It's history in a familiar form and fun for the reader who likes to look it up himself.

Sleuths & Suspense

THE LABYRINTH MAKERS by Anthony Price; Doubleday, 192 pages, $4.95. Reviewed by Don Keown.

"The Labyrinth Makers" is a Crime Club espionage novel that starts quite slowly but gains momentum as it progresses and winds up a readable and entertaining yarn.

David Audley is a desk man with British intelligence, but when a British plane that carried World War II flying hero to his death in 1945 is recovered tardily from the lake into which it plunged, he is ordered out "into the cold" to investigate. The inquiry centers around the mysterious cargo the plane was carrying. The Russians are interested, too. And so is the daughter of the pilot who had died in 1945.

At the outset Price appears unable to generate any real excitement with his plot, but he seems to have gained confidence and zest as he wrote. The character of the girl is particularly appealing.

Of course we may have been biased in this author's favor by the notation that this is a first novel by a veteran English book reviewer (for the Oxford Mail).

CAMPFIRES of the Resistance" has been subtitled "Poetry from the Movement," which describes exactly what it is — but doesn't prepare you for its impact.

Todd Gitlin is the editor, Bobbs-Merrill the publisher, and the book is available in both hardcover, $7.50, and paperback, $3.95.

Most of the names will be unfamiliar to the older generations, although there are some like Gary Snyder and Allen Ginsberg who are holdovers from the Beat era, and others like Casey Hayden, Paul Goodman and Fred Gardner who have won recognition beyond the confines of the movement.

But for the most part the poets are names that are strange to parents and grandparents, and familiar to the young adults and students. Their verse is protest poetry — against war, against bigotry, against the media, against the establishment, against pretense, against government, against poverty, against bureaucracy, against pollution and against waste. The word "revolution" occurs often. And there are tributes — to A.J. Muste, to Che, to Ho, to Fannie Hamer, to Tom Paine, to Roger Allen LaPorte (the youth who died following self-immolation), to Martin Luther King, to one another. There are four-letter words and 12-letter words.

It is all very contemporary, and usually angry. One begins to wonder if anyone ever writes poetry anymore about June and spoon and moon and romantic love. Not these young poets, anyway.

"There is no such thing as America," begins a Terry Cannon contribution. "It is united by brute force only ..." And he concludes: "We are not Americans until we have created America. Until then we are spies, traitors, looters; suspicious, practical, dangerous young."

AIMED AT BOTH the amateur and the professional, "How to Attract Attention With Your Art — A Guide for Graphic Artists" (Sterling, $4.95) is the work of Ivan Tubau, 33-year-old, Spanish-born American artist with a record of commercial and critical success.

The book covers both technique and creative thinking in all types of advertising, from posters and billboards to newspaper and magazine "ads." Tubau recommends gouache, and sometimes acrylics, over watercolors and oils. And he offers his special hints on how the commercial artist can attain speed and efficiency that are essential if he is to make a living in the profession.

It's a small book, little more than a primer, but seemingly a sound and useful one.

CHARLES E. TUTTLE, the Rutland, Vt., publisher who seems to alternate between things Oriental and Americana is back in the Occident with "Decorated Stoneware Pottery of North America" ($15) by Donald Blake Webster.

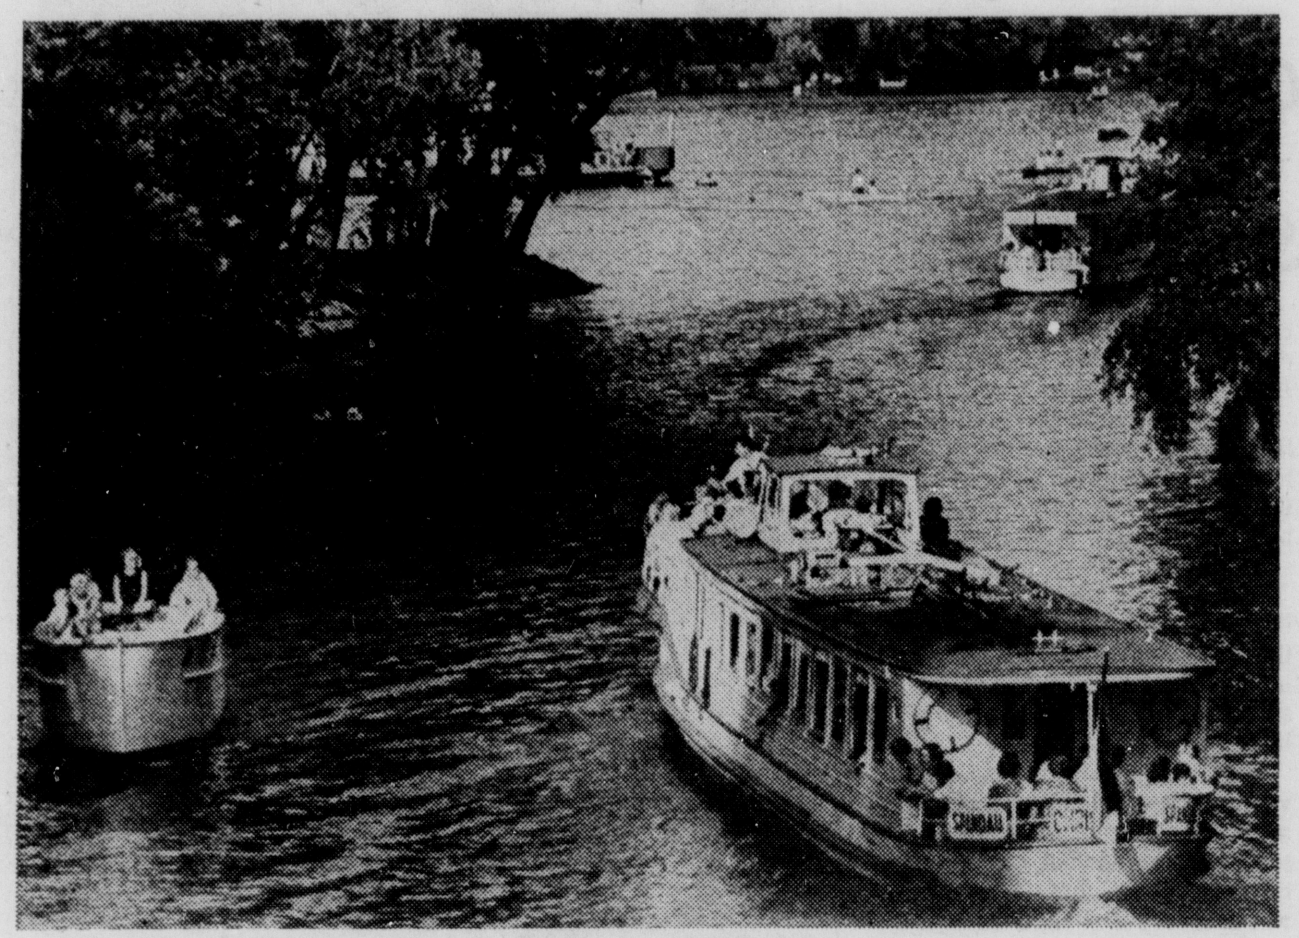
It is a big book in the coffee table category, devoted largely to black and white photographs of excellent quality and informatively captioned. But there is a text in which Webster, curator of the Canadiana Department of the Royal Ontario Museum, discusses learnedly but none too interestingly the growth in pottery production from one-man artisan establishments to huge factories.

In his foreword, Ivor Noel Hume says the Webster book fills a long felt need for a well-researched and profusely illustrated book on the subject.

As such, it will be welcomed by collectors and connoisseurs, who, we are told, are growing rapidly in numbers.

For the rest of us, the pictures are impressive, but hardly worth $15.

Berlin A Surprise To Visitors



HAVELSEE LAKE, where boating is popular, is one of the attractions of West Berlin, one of the greenest cities in Europe, which has many landscape wonders.

"Berlin isn't at all what we've expected," is a frequent comment heard from American tourists on their first visit to this city. Although the average foreign tourist hardly expects a clean and unattractive city, and although the wall is never the sole reason for a trip 110 miles into East German territory, very few tourists anticipate a place of many different aspects.

The first impression gained from the air before landing at Tempelhof Airport is that of a big green city with much water. West Berlin alone covers 185 square miles, an expanse large enough to hold the combined city areas of Washington, D.C., Cincinnati and San Francisco. Parks, forests, fields, rivers and lakes comprise almost half of West Berlin. Even busy downtown districts are dotted with parks of various sizes, and streets and boulevards are generously proportioned and lined with trees.

BERLINER Luft (air) has retained most of its clear, crisp envigorating sparkle, and a Berliner who feels obliged to complain about air pollution does not really know the problem. The magnificent panorama of the city as seen from the 22nd floor restaurant at the Europa Center is clear and free of haze.

The Europa Center, an example of the outstanding modern architecture found in abundance in West Berlin, combines offices, shops, restaurants, galleries, theatres, a roof-top health club, arcades and terraces on various levels, a hotel, apartments, a skating rink and pedestrian bridges and underpasses into a very livable urban center.

An international elite of architects, among them Mies van der Rohe, Gropius, Le Corbusier and many others, contributed to the physical appearance of today's Berlin. Landmark preservation and restoration are spelled with capital letters, and very few traces of war damage are left. As a matter of fact, a group of recent tourists found it hard to believe that Charlottenburg Palace was in ruins at the end of the war.

BERLIN'S museums rank among the finest of the world. Handsome new buildings for the Far Eastern and the Islamic Departments have recently been added to the huge museum complex in Dahlem. The Painting Gallery there takes pride in its Rembrandt collection — which is larger than that of Amsterdam and second only to the Eremitage in Leningrad. Also in Dahlem, and not too far from the big museum complex, a modern villa houses an outstanding collection of works by the artists of the Bruecke group of German expressionists.

Art of the 19th and 20th Century is on display in a magnificent setting in the New National Gallery built by Mies van der Rohe. But even tourists who have sworn not to set foot into one more museum should see the world famous Nefertiti whose awe inspiring beauty has been preserved over 3,300 years. She and a remarkable collection of other Egyptian antiquities are in residence in the Stuehlerbau, across the street from Charlottenburg Palace.

FASHION boutiques and other elegant stores along Kurfuerstendamm with its gourmet restaurants and sidewalk cafes cater to tourists at prices that compare favorably with New York, Rome and Paris. The best hunting grounds for antiques are on Eisenacher Strasse, where an amazing concentration of shops offer something for any purse. A visit to the Berlin State Porcelain Manufactury is recommended for special bargains in seconds which are only sold here.

Berlin's answer to Greenwich Village, to Soho of the Montmartre is Kreuzberg with its curio shops, and some lovely stucco facade 19th century buildings. A typical Kneipe (pub) here should be visited for local color and for a wholesome meal washed down with a good beer — all for not much more than a dollar. Not too many tourists explore the Berlin off the beaten track.

Similar bargain fares in an idyllic rural setting can be found at the village inn in Luebars, all the way to the north of West Berlin. Its 18th Century village church and several other charming buildings have been declared landmarks.

THERE ARE many ways to see Berlin. Buses, of course, are the best possible way to get an overall first impression. Such sightseeing tours are well organized, and English speaking guides explain the city. Unlike Berliners, tourists can cross the wall and visit East Berlin. An English speaking East Berlin guide will climb into the bus at Checkpoint Charlie to take over from there.

A visit to the Pergamom Museum is highly recommended and included in many tours. Stops at the Soviet War Memorial at Treptow seem to be an obligatory feature, as is a final stop at a restaurant. Drop in at the bar and ask whether the bottle of exotic yellowish liqueur with the dead snake inside is still available.

Back in West Berlin, a genuine, antique, horsedrawn mail coach takes small groups on two-hour trips. For a group of four the fare is DM 75. - (about $22). Impressive flotillas of sightseeing boats cruise along West Berlin's 80 miles of navigable waterways. Special moonlight cruises offer dining and dancing.

MANY BERLIN hotels have indoor or outdoor swimming pools. There are beaches on lakes and rivers and all the recreational facilities of a summer resort. Students report that Berlin can be done on $5 a day, especially, if the Berlin Information Center (at Hardenbergstrasse 20, Berlin 12) is contacted in writing for reservations at one of the youth hostels.

Berlin, at night, is one of the really swinging places on the European continent. Thousands of night spots are found in practically all parts of town, and many of them stay open to serve an early breakfast.

Air Force Academy Top Attraction In Colorado

As Colorado's number one tourist attraction — aside from the Rocky Mountain National Park — the United States Air Force Academy 10 miles north of Colorado Springs attracts more than one-and-a-half million visitors-a-year.

Sitting on 18,000 acres of the eastern slope of the Rocky Mountains' Rampart Range, the Academy is open daily to visitors. There is much of interest and beauty to see on the striking ultramodern campus, which was opened in 1958.

"From the Visitors' Center, just inside the south gate, which features displays of Cadet life and a free 25-minute, full-color sound movie depicting all aspects of the Academy, an air-conditioned bus leaves for a narrated tour of the grounds," reports Continental Airlines. "The bus stops at all key vantage points, allowing plenty of time for passengers to take pictures and visit the major buildings."

VISITORS, who can also drive their own car around the school, watch the Cadets assemble and march to their noon meal on week days at 11:30 a.m. to the martial music of the 120-piece Air Force Academy Marching Band.

The parade ground at this newest of the nation's service schools is right next to the modernistic 17-spire chapel, which is actually three churches in one. Protestant, Catholic and Jewish services may all be carried on simultaneously in separate sections. "Usually," reports Continental, "the chapel is the first thing visitors want to see at the Academy."

Other top attractions include:

MITCHELL HALL — Has a dining area big enough to seat 4,417 cadets at a single sitting. Named for Brig. Gen. Billy Mitchell, pioneer of military aviation and famed advocate of air power.

Vandenberg Hall — This cadet dormitory, named in memory of Gen. Hoyt S. Vandenberg, former Air Force Chief of Staff, is a quarter-of-a-mile long.

Fairchild Hall — The 45 science labs, 5 lecture halls, and library located here are where the cadets go to classes. Named for Gen. Muir S. Fairchild, first commander of the Air University.

Arnold Hall — Named for Gen. H. H. Arnold, World War II Air Force leader, this cadet social center has a theatre, recreation rooms, ballroom and snack bars.

PLANETARIUM — Housed in a dome-shaped structure, it is used to teach celestial navigation and astronomy to cadets. There are daily demonstrations for visitors.

Cadet Gymnasium — Built at a cost of $6.3 million it has facilities for everything from indoor football games to shooting ranges. The basketball arena alone seats 6,000 people, and there is a 2,600 seat all-year indoor ice rink.

Falcon Stadium — Built in a natural bowl, this is where the Academy plays its at-home football games.

THE ACADEMIC year at the Air Force Academy is from August through May, but some cadets — including those entering the new first-year class — are there throughout the summer months as well.

At several locations on the Academy tour there are snack bars open to tourists but very few visitors ever eat as much as the 5,500 calories-a-day consumed by the average cadet.

Kootenays — A Wide, Wide, World

By BARRY BROADFOOT

The Kootenay Country of British Columbia is a four-letter word. Also a five letter one. And six letters, too.

Good. Great. Groovy.

Good, because it has everything — mountains beyond anyone's count, scores of small lakes and a few big ones, fishing, hunting, ghost towns crumbling in ruins and her communities with that quiet air of antiquity about them, several bustling towns and small cities, and if you have the attitude of we'll-take-our-time-and-see-what-we-want-to-see, then the Kootenay Country is for you.

GREAT, because in the Kootenay — named after the intelligent, resourceful and fierce Kootenai Indians — people have the same attitude — why hurry? Tomorrow is another day. And they enjoy life, especially the outdoor life.

Groovy? Sure, why not? People who visit the Kootenay for the first time, or those who return again and again, seem to relate to this country easily, and when they do, they're hooked. So it's groovy.

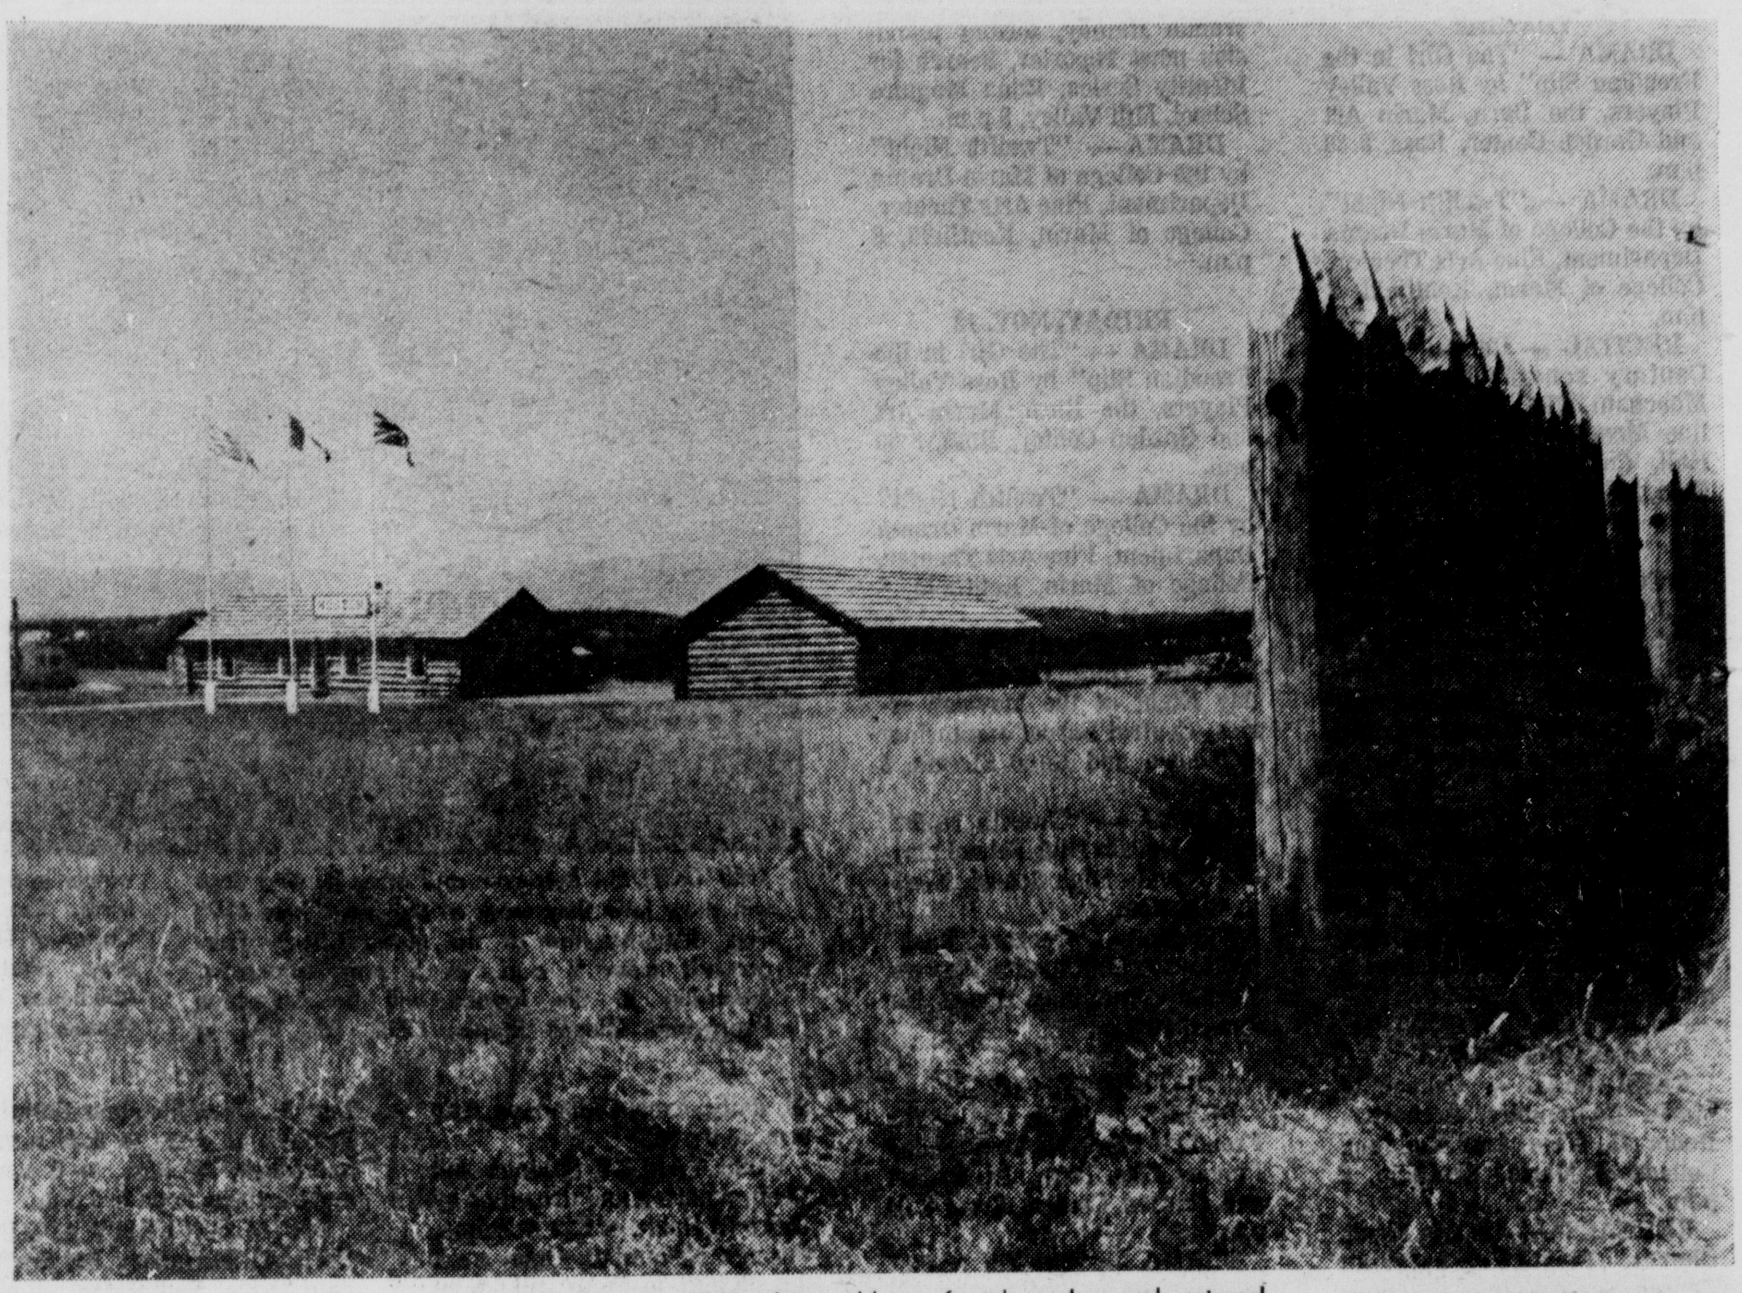
Where is it? Take a map. The International Boundary is the southern boundary. The east side of the Okanagan Valley, where Highway 3 climbs easily but seemingly forever over Anarchist Mountain is the western boundary, although some would disagree. The Alberta Boundary is the eastern line. North? Oh, somewhere south of the Rogers Pass and the Trans-Canada Highway. Say fifty miles, give or take a few.

NELSON could be said to be the geographical center. It's an old town — not old in years but British Columbia old, so there are old timers who still sit in the sun beneath the trees across from the Hume Hotel and talk of the old days. Minerals. Millions of dollars worth came from the mines of Kootenay — $14 million from one, $24 million from another, and $30 million from a third. And so it goes.

But one must never forget the big one of them all, the Rossland Mines, first staked in 1890 in an ancient volcano, and more than $125 million was dug from these mines. And ore, some of the continent's richest, is being taken from other mines to supply the giant smelter at Trail, the largest lead-zinc smelter in the world. Tours twice a day. Go on one.

And then back in the hills, are the holes. On top of a mountain. At the bottom of a cliff. Beside a lake. Anywhere, and everywhere. Hundreds of them, and each holding some man's dreams. And most failed. In fact, all but a few did. But still, today old men, and some young ones, continue to prowl the hills and valleys hoping to hit another big one. The chances are against them, but . . .

IT IS a country of good roads. The main east-west highways, and also a few north and south before they dwindle into gravel. But in between are dozens of small ones — those thin red and black and dotted lines on the map — and they lead into the most interesting parts of the country.



FORT STEELE is the most historic community in the Kootenay area of British Columbia, founded in 1863 when gold was found nearby, and restored by the provincial government. It is a few miles north of Cranbrook.

Into quiet valleys and little lakes, along tumbling, whitewater streams, or into the mountains out on to Alpine meadows. Past tumbledown farms and small ranches, symbolizing another type of pioneer's dreams.

It is extraordinary, really, why so few people use Kootenay Lake. Long, about 80 miles long. Narrow. Safe, with few storms to rile it up. Numerous beaches for camping as long as you want, far from the ways of man. Communities along its shore are not all that numerous, but rarely more than an hour's cruising from any spot, and then you're away again with fresh provisions. The trout, lurking deep and taken on a slow troll, are in the 25-pound class.

Nelson, on the west arm of the lake —it has a north, south and west arm — is probably the best place to launch your boat and store your car as it is reached by good highways from the coast, the U.S. and the prairies.

AND TOO many boaters miss the Upper and Lower Arrow Lakes. What a shame! Here is a great lake, long like a wriggly snake, and a place to get away from it all.

Castlegar at the south end of this 100-mile beauty, or Nakusp, east of Vernon, via Highway 6 in the middle, or Arrowhead, south of Revelstoke at the north end, are probably the best launching areas.

An interesting trip is from Nelson north to Kaslo along the west side of Kootenay Lake. A beautiful drive on a sunny morn. Don't forget to stop at Ainsworth and soak a while in the hot springs in a sandy grotto and let the water pour out of the native rock onto your weary bones.

Kaslo, quiet and peaceful now after its rip-roaring days of 70 years ago when the mines were booming, has berthed the sternwheeler Moyie and uses it for an interesting museum.

THEN CUT west through the mountains to New Denver on a road which climbs for miles on an old mining railway grade, past old workings, miners' shacks and barely discernible remains of old camps.

At Three Forks — a name on the map, but nothing but a sign on the site — turn off to Sandon where 12,000 miners once whooped it up. Today, it is a wreck, ruined by time which was the easiest on it, and a creek which went wild 20 years ago and ripped up the main street, and looters systematically stripped it of relics. One man lives there, name of Peterson. Someday, Sandon might become a restored town like Barkerville. It is interesting to poke around in the ruins, imagining what it was once like. Now apart from the squawking of crows and the indifferent clouds sailing overhead, Sandon, once with 23 hotels, is in another world.

And some random notes, of here and there in the Kootenay Country:

There is no valley more pleasant to the senses than the Windemere — What a lovely name! And what a lovely lake! A 1.4-mile drive north of town, there is a forestry road cut-off and you can drive within a quarter mile of the lookout tower on Mount Swansea, at 5,486 feet high, and a perfectly smashing view for miles. If you have time, do it.

KIMBERLY is the highest city in Canada, altitude 3,600 feet, and twice that in friendliness.

If you're driving from Nakusp, heading westward towards Vernon through the Monashee — another lovely name — Pass, please check your gas. It's 45 miles to the next pump, and traffic isn't all that heavy.

Don't be fooled by some of those tiny lakes you might dismiss as "potholes." Most beside the highway are real, although their inlets and outlets may be only dribbles, but often they have trout up to four and five pounds. A couple of cars with local plates parked besides the lakes is your tip-off.

Are you an Alpinist? One of those chaps who climbs mountains because they are there? Spillimacheen, meaning 'meeting of the waters,' is the jump-off place for the famed Bugaboos and the glaciers where, when conditions are right, you're likely to find climbers from many parts of the world.

THE AREA of Grand Forks has many residents of Russian descent. And the food served in restaurants and hotels is excellent. Especially the galoopsies. A good museum too, as most communities have in the Kootenays.

You'll hear that there is an East Kootenay and a West Kootenay. There is, but it is a dividing line from north and south that no one pays any attention to. But on the Kootenay Skyway the highest paved highway in Canada, 30 miles west of Creston, there is Bridal Lake, so named as the joining line of the two little-used geographical areas.

Fort Steele, a few miles north of Cranbrook, is the most historic community in the Kootenay, all the way back to 1863 when gold was found on nearby Wild Horse Creek. Now, the area has been restored by the provincial government as an historical attraction.

POINT REYES — C. B. GEARHART

Give The Garage Back To The Car

By STEVE ELLINGSON

If you've been parking on the street because your garage is so full of junk that a Honda couldn't find a place to sleep, you need an outdoor storage unit.

First, it keeps your garden supplies and tools where they're readily available and removes all that clutter from the garage.

Second, you'll find it a dandy place for storing camping equipment, toys and things of that kind.

Third, there's a potting counter inside on the left that's a delight for gardening and arranging flowers.

Below the counter are bins for peat moss, mulches and so forth. It was designed for efficiency, appearance and economy.

THE ENTIRE room, even the door, is lined with perforated hardboard. This makes it possible to neatly hang every kind of tool made, including your lawn mower. You will notice that along with garden tools, there is plenty of space for your woodworking equipment also.

And during rainy weather, it makes a good shelter for one or more bicycles. Best of all, when you're away from home, everything is locked safe from thieves.

Many folks use the little house as a cabana beside a swimming pool. It's just the right size for storing pool equipment as well as providing a place to change clothes. It also makes a dandy playhouse for youngsters.

To obtain the storage room plan Number 250, send $1 to: Steve Ellingson, San Rafael Independent-Journal Pattern Dept., P.O. Box 2383, Van Nuys, Calfironia 91409.

AN OUTDOOR STORAGE unit can free a garage of supplies that clutter it up and serve as an area for camping equipment, toys, etc. and contain a potting counter for the family gardener as television personality Bob Barker, hoe in hand, notes.

Making Planters Helps Escape From Daily Woe

Let's assume things aren't going well at home or office, and you are deeply concerned about someone or something.

Keeping the problem on the front burners of your mind can drive you up a tree. Getting away from a problem that only time can help solve, makes a lot of sense, so the smart step to take is to get as far away as possible, not to escape, but to get a new perspective.

The quickest escape requires doing something that necessitates using your head and hands. When your hands do something you are normally unaccustomed to doing, it forces the mind to focus on the job. Making these planters could provide hours of instant escape.

THE MAGIC of this concept actually starts when you receive the full size pattern offered below. Start tracing on wood. Saw along traced outlines. Assemble parts in exact position shown on pattern. Within an evening's time, you discover a new way to "get away from it all".

Doctors recommend woodworking to everyone in need of relaxation. If you invest a few dollars in an electric sabre or jig saw, and drill, buy a few patterns and lumber, you open the door to many stimulating hours of escape whenever you need to from whatever bothers you.

WHIRLIGIG, one of the giant-flowered zinnias, has multi-colored blooms, each different.

FALL SPRAYING IMPORTANT

Fall is an in-between season for California gardeners, even though it can be a beautiful time of year. Certain annuals may be still in full flower, while winter-blooming color bearers are coming on; and certain trees and shrubs are putting on an autumnal foliage show of color.

Fall is a time for a garden clean-up. Not only removing faded flowers and replacing them with new annuals, and planting bulbs, landscape shrubs and trees — but a general clean-up. A very important part of that clean-up is a garden spraying.

WHILE THE chance of warm weather still exists, so does the possibility of late garden infestations of aphids, whiteflies and leafhoppers. Such pests can cause early defoliation of some plants.

Check Roses frequently to determine any insect damage, and if necessary, spray to keep flowers and foliage presentable into late Fall. Let your nurseryman assist you by identifying the problem and suggesting any control measure to take. There are plant protection chemicals which are effective, and safe, when used according to instructions on the label.

A RECOMMENDED clean-up spray in Fall, using an oil emulsion control with lime-sulphur additives, is aimed at controlling overwintering pests and diseases. Next spring, when Peach trees leaf-out and the foliage is disfigured, this is a sign of Peach Leaf Curl, the bane of the home gardener. A Fall spraying is required now, at the recommended strength.

A second application, a dormant spraying, should be made just as the buds begin to swell, and before leaves appear. If in doubt which oil spray to use, and which proportion, let your nurseryman's advice guide you.

The garden clean-up isn't completed until dead flowers, leaves and branches are raked-up and removed. These are good locations for insect pests and diseases to spend the winter. By dispatching them from your garden to the dump, you've helped assure a lovely spring garden.

Lastly, a mulch of organic material around trees and shrubs, and in garden beds, will control weeds and help improve the soil.

Put A Cover On Your Bulb Bed

One of Spring's most appealing sights in the garden is that of bulb flowers growing through a cover of colorful annuals.

Picture the combination of golden Daffodils poking-up through a bed of blue Violas; or a mass of crimson Tulips with snowy white Alyssum at their feet. These are the things that add the finishing touches to the Spring garden.

You can plant a cover in the garden bed at the same time you plant bulbs, or if pressed for time, you can wait a few weeks or a month. The California Association of Nurserymen recommends the accompanying cover be planted before the bulbs have begun to sprout, however, so top growth won't be injured by digging.

A FLOWER that seems ideally suited to planting over a bulb bed is the Viola, previously mentioned in combination with golden Daffodils. Shopping early for Violas may yield separate colors of Violas.

Many nurseries will have them in shades of yellow, apricot, blue, ruby and white — in addition to a mixture of colors. With such a color range, it is possible to achieve flowering accents where colors compliment each other — or fashion interesting focal points with contrasting colors.

Another nursery transplant that goes well over bulbs is the Pansy. In addition to a choice of flowering mixtures of Pansies, you may find separate colors of blue, white and yellow. These cheery annuals are a cool season delight — and will add a unique touch to a bright bulb display.

THE ALYSSUM family has many members which will enhance bulb flowers. The white Carpet of Snow is dazzling in its own right, and can be used effectively with almost any bulb. Violet-purple Royal Carpet and pink Rosie O'Day greatly increase the potential of pleasing combinations in the garden.

Try accenting Hyacinths with pink Alyssum — and the violet performers with Anemones and Ranunculus in bright colors.

Many bulb cover candidates are to be found at your nursery. It's a fun family outing to choose spring-blooming bulbs — and the flowering choices to cover the bed — which will create much beauty in the months ahead.

Zinnias Easy To Grow, Furnish Many Flowers

Zinnias are so easy to grow and furnish the garden or the house with so many flowers, it's surprising that every garden doesn't boast one or more kinds.

The only real "trick" in growing zinnias is to plant the seeds after the soil is thoroughly warm.

Planting before this time does no good. In cool, damp soil the seeds rot and it's just as if you'd never planted them.

UNDISTURBED plants, grown from seeds sown where you want the flowers, will grow and bloom better than when seedlings are transplanted.

To make things easy for yourself, sow the seeds one at a time so you don't have to thin seedlings later. A few won't come up but most will.

If you are sowing giant type zinnias, plants should be grown 12 to 15 inches apart in the row and the rows made 3 feet apart.

SMALLER varieties can be sown in rows only 2 feet apart and plants allowed to grow 8 to 10 inches from one another.

Of course the really tiny zinias, like Thumbelina, fall outside these general recommendations. These midgets are often used as borders or even grown in pots.

Zinnias will thrive in any soil, but you'd be surpirsed to see how much better they produce in fairly rich soil.

They also show marked difference in growth when given plenty of water. A once-a-week soaking in dry weather pays off.

WHAT TYPE of zinnia to plant? There are so many from which to choose that you may have a hard time making up your mind.

There are giant-flowered zinnias, which include Tetra, Giant Cactus-Flowered, Zenith, Whirligig and State Fair, medium-sized flowers found in Cut and Come Again, and, a bit smaller, in the Pompons.

Midget zinnias: Thumbelina, Old Mexico and Persian Carpet.

Indoor Plants Distinct

The distinctive beauty of indoor plants blends nature with home decor, and adds a unique touch to any room — be it the living room, kitchen, family area, bedroom or bath.

Certain of the fancy-leafed plants are especially welcome as winter approaches. These include plants with variegated foliages, whose sunny leaves, sparkling with pattern and color, bring sunshine into any room.

Especially effective is the leafed charmer that can be trained on a support to showcase its refreshing beauty. The soft green leaves are splashed with yellow and the combination compliments most any indoor surroundings.

GOLD Dieffenbachia is a tall, upright-growing plant. It lights up a room with beautiful large leaves, whose color suggests chartreuse, sprinkled with ivory and edged with green. The oval leaves feature a dark the whole plant radiates a handsome effect.

Another variegated indoor plant is the Striped Dracaena, a modest-grower that's ideal for decorating a table or book case — in a lovely container. The semi-arching branches are long and narrow and radiate from the center of the plant. The crisp, green leaves are marked that call further attention to the structure of the plant.

WHERE space is at a minimum, the oval cream and white Peperomia is a good choice and its cousin, Variegated Pepper Face, with attractive four-inch leaves will please you. Variegated Nepthythis has an unusually-shaped leaf to start with — resembling a v-shaped, pointed cultivator tool. The varing dimension.

Nurseries have a wide selection of other brightly-patterned indoor plants to choose from. Holly, Holly, Holly

It is possible to achieve handsome landscape effects with the individual members of the Holly family.

It's not that there are great contrasting differences between the many Holly varieties — it's just that each has a special attribute, that, perhaps, seems natural in a given landscape situation.

What is very distinguishable is that the foliage colors differ — the shape of the leaves vary with individual Hollies and the foliage textures add a desireable dimension to the landscape.

TAKE WILSON Holly as an example. It is an upright grower with large, leathery, dark green leaves, which are spine-toothed. Often found trained as a single trunk tree, or as an espalier, it can be pruned for a hedge effect, too. As a good-size landscape shrub, it excels. This versatile performer is a good Holly for warmer climes, where it takes sun or shade and produces plenty of red berries.

English Holly varieties are marked by variations in leaf shape and color. In selecting varieties it is important to note there are male and female plants — the male serve as pollenizers.

Your nurseryman can guide you in selecting the proper varieties to assure fruiting — so that you can enjoy crops of berries. There are self-fertile varieties such as San Gabriel.

The variety Boulder Creek boasts bold — very shiny — deep green foliage and is heavily branched, representative of English Holly. There are variegated English Hollies, too, and all add interest to the garden with their interesting growth habits.

POPULAR with Californians is Burford Holly. It is a Chinese Holly, and as such, has rectangular leaves that are softer green than others and the growth is more open. It needs a long, warm season to set berries. Inland, avoid planting in full sun, advises the California Association of Nurserymen.

There is a dwarf Burford Holly that is a miniature edition of its larger counterpart that is much more compact in growth. Both command attention without overpowering the landscape.

ANOTHER dwarf that has been widely planted in California is the Dwarf Chinese Holly. It produces no berries, but this slow-growing Holly is dense-branching and attractive throughout the year. It is not uncommon to see a five-year old plant achieve a height of only two feet.

Best yet, it will take more sun than you would expect, and does well in semi-shade, too. Its use in the landscape is limited only by one's imagination — in borders, to define specific garden areas, as modest accent plants, or as low-growing foundation shrubs.

When you consider there are scores of Holly varieties produced in America, it's difficult to mention the distinguishing characteristics of very many in limited space. A wise move is to visit your nearby nursery, where you can view the Holly varieties recommended for local soils and climate.

OLEANDERS are among the very best shrubs for sun-baked gardens, are available in a delicate shade of pink, red, rose, white and even yellow. They also are available pruned up in tree form.

Why Leaves Change Color In The Fall

Vivid colors of autumn leaves provide a seasonal sensation, and add glamour to the landscape before the dormant winter season.

Californians enjoy fall colors from certain trees and shrubs, but the most renowned autumnal foliage displays are to be found in the northeastern states and Blue Ridge Mountains.

In the higher elevations of the West, autumn colors are delightful, but the central and southern states usually don't share in the phenomenal display.

The development of fall color is an inherited trait. Each tree or shurb species displays its particular color. Plus, each individual plant has its own shade of that color, which is influenced by climatic and soil conditions.

JUST BEFORE the leaves drop in autumn, the nutrients they contain start to move back into the stems and roots. The green chlorophyll pigment is no longer produced, and that which is in the leaf is destroyed by light.

Most leaves contain yellow color which is hidden during the summer by the green pigment. When the chlorophyll disappears in fall, the yellow becomes visible and brightens-up the scene. If no yellow pigment is present, the leaves turn brown.

To showcase orange, red and purplish shades the leaves must produce yet another pigment — which isn't simple. The particular shade of orange, red or purple is developed by anthocyanin and is related to the acid or alkaline condition of the sap of the plant. If the sap is acid, the color will be orange or red. With nutral sap the pigment is light purple; when the sap is alkaline, a dark purple or blue color is evident.

THE AMOUNT of anthocyanic pigment produced is dependent upon the accumulation of sugars and tannins. During warm sunny weather, much sugar is manufactured in the leaves. When the autumn nights are cool, with temperatures below 45 degrees, the sugars and tannins do remain in the leaves to be converted into anthocyanins, with the resulting vivid foliage color.

If fall weather is cloudy, sugar production is reduced. When nights remain warm, sugars will move to the branches and foliage color lacks intensity.

A SAFETY TIP for operators of lawn and garden tractors is to be sure to clear all debris from the area to prevent injury to persons or damage to the machine.

Gardening Manual For Homeowner

"Gardening and Home Landscaping: A Complete Illustrated Guide" ($9.95), by Jack Kramer, a practical manual for the homeowner on planning, maintaining and beautifying the home garden and grounds, has been published by Harper & Row.

It combines and relates designing and planning with facts of plant selection, methods of planting and care — from trees and shrubs to perennials, house plants and herbs.

IT INCLUDES the latest information on patio and container gardening, greenhouses, terraces, garden furniture, rock and natural gardens, and city gardening.

A CHECKLIST FOR GARDENERS OF MARIN

Here is the Marin gardener's checklist for the coming week.

✔Cool season annuals should be planted now for a garden-full of color in the winter months: Fairy Primroses, Pansies, Violas, Iceland Poppies, Calendulas, Stocks, and Snapdragons can be set-out now.

✔Spring-flowering bulbs should be onthe top of your planting list this week. Your nursery will have dozens of choices to choose from.

✔The earliest-flowering Camellias are commencing to bloom. By proper selection of varieties, one can enjoy Camellias in bloom through Fall, Winter and Spring.

✔Don't rush on lifting Dahlias. Foliage should be allowed to ripen-off and turn yellow, or the bulbs will be robbed of energy for next year's growth.

Plants Help Decorators

Have you ever noticed how interior decorators feature growing house plants in their store and magazine displays?

The plants aren't for sale. They're just there because they make the tables and chairs and couches look their best.

A glossy, tubbed aralia set beside a chair brings out the wood and fabric tones. Peperomias and wax flowers, philodendrons and ivy, call attention to the beauty of a walnut finish. They make maple furniture sing, compliment mahogany and teak, and point up the charm of natural woods.

GREEN LEAVES trailing from a shelf "finishes" that shelf with taste; and a graceful little palm can add distinction to a room.

The relationship between furniture and plants is a happy one, and more and more homeowners are taking advantage of this fact, taking a tip from professional decorators and using house plants to enrich their own decor.

Here's all you have to do: Choose the plants that appeal to you most, put them in suitable containers in the kind of light they prefer, and keep them healthy with a few minutes care each week.

SUPPOSE for instance, you would like a tall, dramatic plant against one wall, a low, bushy one to set on a table, and a trailing vine to spill downwards from a shelf. There are dozens of plants in eachcategory at your nursery, and from them you might choose a Queensland Umbrella Tree (tall), a peperomia (low and bushy), and a grape ivy to trail down. Your nurseryman will help you choose the right containers, and you can make potting easy by bringing home a bag of specially prepared soil mixture too.

Blast Delay Refused; 11th Hour Protests

Amchitka Test Readied —Weather 'Acceptable'

AMCHITKA, Alaska (UPI) — Technicians went through the final preparations for firing the biggest U.S. underground nuclear blast Saturday after the supreme court refused to order a delay. As the blast hour neared, tens of thousands of persons in the United States, Canada and Japan protested against the test. Environmentalists feared the blast would touch off an earthquake or tidal wave and harm fish and birdlife.

The weather was "acceptable" for detonation of the five-megaton Spartan warhead, with 25 to 30 mile an hour winds buffeting the bleak island which is the site of the test with the code name Cannikin.

Atomic Energy Commission officials said "everything is going smoothly" in preparation for the blast, which was set for 11 a.m. Bering sea time (2 p.m. PST).

They said the countdown could be stopped or delayed at any time within a split second of detonation of the warhead at the bottom of a mile-deep shaft.

Technicians and construction workers battled 100 m.p.h. winds, fog and rain Friday to put the last of 5,600 tons of gravel and sand into the 53-inch diameter bomb shaft. They sealed it with plastic plugs, then most of them were flown off the island.

They left behind about 225 persons, including AEC Chairman James R. Schlesinger, his wife, Rachel, and two of their young daughters.

The $200 million test of the warhead for the controversial Spartan anti-ballistic bomb had the explosive power of five million tons of TNT—250 times as powerful as the atomic bomb that destroyed Hiroshima during World War II.

With court approval and acceptable weather, AEC technicians on the island hewed to a lengthy schedule of preparation procedures with a five-man "arming party" making the final connections between the buried bomb and the control bunker 23 miles away.

The party had to leave Ground Zero about an hour before the AEC's final 15-minute, computer-controlled countdown began.

All personnel on the island were assigned to the underground bunker or to special control posts during the blast.

The arming of the nuclear warhead was programmed to start five minutes before the blast. The arming took two minutes.

Two television cameras were set up 3,000 and 12,000 feet from the flat knoll about 200 feet above sea level where the bomb shaft was dug.

The Cannikin emplacement was about a mile from the Bering Sea and two miles from the Pacific Ocean on this Aleutian island 1,200 miles southwest of Anchorage.

The post-blast priority list called for first recovering technical data such as tapes and film to determine if the test was a success or failure.

If the detonation had been cancelled, the bomb would have been destroyed by means of conventional explosives buried within the bomb shaft without causing a nuclear blast.

The underground hydrogen bomb test brought protests from throughout the world.

In Tokyo, the Metropolitan government put all floodgate operators on emergency alert in case of a tidal wave. Civil defense authorities in Hawaii activated emergency headquarters in Diamond Head crater and instructed citizens to review tidal wave evacuation procedures, but said they did not expect one.

The Supreme Court, in a 4-3 decision, refused to order a delay in the test. The majority —Justices Warren E. Burger,

A Call For Preserving Lagoon Area

The preservation of wildlife and restrictions on visitors were urged last night at a hearing on a county development plan for Bolinas Lagoon.

Nearly 100 persons attended the meeting at the Bolinas Community Center to tell Pierre W. Joske, director of the Marin County Parks and Recreation Department, that lagoon development should be kept to an absolute minimum.

Theresa Barker, parks and recreation commission secretary, said the group was unified in its belief that no development should be planned that would attract visitors to the lagoon area.

She said Robert Tartaul of the Sierra Club urged that all possible avenues be exhausted for development of a plan expressly designed to protect wildlife of the lagoon.

Bolinas residents spoke against plans for parking areas and observation points, they would encourage more automobile and foot traffic in the lagoon area and ultimately damage the environment.

The plan calls for observation points and nature interpretation centers as the only major development for the lagoon. Motor boats would be allowed only from the mouth of the lagoon to the existing dock area on the Bolinas side.

The plan recommends that Wharf Road become a pedestrian way during times of heavy use, permitting automobile access for residents only. Public parking would be provided near the entrance to the village.

The plan also calls for an ecological reserve status for all tidal areas of the lagoon so that strict control can be maintained over all shoreline development.

The next public hearing on the plan will be held Nov. 15 at 8 p.m. at the Stinson Beach Community Center.

Demo Reapportion Plan Temporarily Sidetracked

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — Republicans and dissatisfied Democrats have sidetracked and temporarily neutralized a Democratic-sponsored state Senate redistricting plan opposed by Gov. Ronald Reagan.

Democratic leaders Friday shelved their proposal for the time being in the face of a Republican threat to scrap it entirely and replace it with a GOP-drafted alternative.

Democrats outnumber Republicans 21-19 in the Senate but were handicapped by two colleagues who indicated they would support the Republicans and by the absence of two vacationing Democrats.

The decision to place the plan on the Senate "inactive file" followed a partisan collision on the floor marked by bitter personal exchanges. While the bill slumbers in limbo, both sides said they will attempt to negotiate further and reach a compromise settlement next week.

Sen. John Harmer, R-Glendale, GOP caucus chairman, triggered the floor fight when he proposed amendments that would rewrite the bill, including the striking of Democratic Sen. Mervyn Dymally's name as author.

Senate leader James R. Mills, D-San Diego, announced that the Democratic leaders were so intent on protecting their plan that he would keep the Senate in session all weekend, if necessary.

This would give Democrats the opportunity to recall vacationing Sens. Albert Rodda of Sacramento and Stephen P. Teale of Railroad Flat. Rodda is in England while Teale was reported returning home from a trip to the South.

Two Democrats, Lawrence Walsh of Huntington Park and James Wedworth of Hawthorne, were prepared to vote for the Republican plan, Democrats said privately.

This would have given the Republican 18 votes to the Democrats' 18 and enable Republican Lt. Gov. Ed Reinecke to cast the tie-breaking vote to amend the GOP plan into the Democratic bill. Any amended bill still would require 21 votes for final passage, however.

Walsh's district was proposed to be redrawn to make room for a Chicano district. Wedworth has objected to moving his district into part of Republican-oriented Orange County.

"This is totally undemocratic, completely unorthodox and discrimination in reverse," Walsh protested in a floor speech. "My district has been gutted and chopped up in order to make way for an ethnic group. I don't even think my house is in my district."

Harmer's plan would throw Republican Sens. Milton Marks of San Francisco and Peter Behr of San Rafael into the same district, meaning they would oppose each other in an election contest.

The north must surrender one Senate seat to the south because of the greater population growth in the south. That seat would be shifted to Orange County.

The district of Democrat David Roberti of Los Angeles would be placed into an area where Chicanos constitute 65 per cent of the population and 38 per cent of the voters. This would give Mexican-Americans a shot at his seat in 1974.

Dymally accused Harmer of failing to notify him in advance of the attempt to amend his bill and charged him with "trying to sneak amendments into the bill."

"This is a good example of the bad faith in which Senate reapportionment has been negotiated," Dymally said of the GOP side while insisting Democrats negotiated in "good faith."

Harmer replied, "There are amendments here for one rea-

Historic Old Hotel Burns Down

The nearly century-old Marshall Hotel, a haven through the years for a mixed assembly of rum runners, casual weekend visitors and the Bay Area elite, was destroyed by fire last night.

The structure, built in 1878, was consumed in flame about 11 p.m. despite the efforts of eight county fire units and a fire truck from nearby Synanon.

Twenty-five guests staying at the hotel, located on Shoreline Highway, were routed, all escaping injury. Damage was estimated at $95,000.

Firemen said the blaze apparently started in one of the hotel's 14 ornately decorated rooms.

Until last night, the hotel, owned by Thomas Quinn, who once described himself as a "fat, jolly, whimsical innkeeper," seemed indestructible. It survived an 1897 blaze, reopening two years later, and in 1906, the earthquake sent the two-story hotel reeling into Tomales Bay, but it rebounded from that disaster, too.

Overnight guests and tavern patrons were attracted by the hotel's elegant Victorian decor, including brass beds kept highly polished.

During the early part of this century, the North Pacific Coast Railroad emptied passengers virtually at the hotel's door, and visitors dined on continental breakfasts and herring dinners at 50 cents a plate.

Bootleg liquor, brought by boat during Prohibition, was delivered to the hotel through a trap door and stored for later delivery to San Francisco.

One of its former owners is ex-Marin Supervisor Thomas T. Storer, who opened for business in 1969 with a "63rd Anniversary of the Earthquake Party."

An attached pier that jutted into the bay was a popular spot for fishermen.

Housewife Slain In New Belfast Unrest

BELFAST, Northern Ireland (UPI) — British troops exchanged gunfire with snipers Friday night and today in Londonderry in skirmishes that killed a 40-year-old housewife.

An Army spokesman said Kathleen Thompson, 40, a mother of five, was banging a trash can lid to warn neighbors of the approach of troops when she was caught in crossfire.

She was killed shortly after a sniper in the Roman Catholic Andersontown area of Belfast "very seriously wounded" an off-duty Army major driving toward Army headquarters with his wife, the spokesman said. He was shot out of uniform.

In Belfast, bomb explosions damaged a number of stores in the city during the morning, an army spokesman said.

The explosion damaged five stores in a shopping arcade in the North Street area of central Belfast, the spokesman said.

Soon after the North Street explosion, two other blasts damaged an agricultural showroom near city hall and offices on Franklin Street, the spokesman said.

There were no reports of casualties, the spokesman said.

The Londonderry gun duels grew out of a series of spot raids by Army units on houses in the Creggan Estate in search of alleged leaders of the Irish Republican Army (IRA) no arrests were made.

The IRA claims responsibility for most of the continuing violence between Northern Ireland's protestant majority and Roman Catholic minority.

Its avowed aim is to wrest the north from British control and unite it with the largely Roman Catholic Irish Republic to the south.

Earlier Friday, Premier Brian Faulkner dismissed as "a lunatic assumption" predictions that Britain is about to impose direct rule on Northern Ireland's six counties. He also rejected a suggestion an "Ulster minister" in London might take over some of the powers of his government.

He also denied fighting between protestants and Roman Catholics, which has killed at least 112 persons in Northern Ireland this year, was a religious conflict.

"It is religious only in the sense that it involved a certain degree of group identification and historical association," he said.

Later in the evening a bomb hurled from a speeding automobile exploded at a Royal Navy recruiting office in Belfast, slightly injuring a couple and their four children passing in another car, the Army said.

Prisoners Riot In Los Angeles

LOS ANGELES (UPI)—Prisoners in the 11th floor cellblock at the Hall of Justice refused to return to their cells after breakfast today and began setting small fires and demonstrating against jail conditions.

A sheriff's spokesman said there were about 150 prisoners in the cell block and most were participating in the demonstration.

There were no reports of hostages or injuries and deputies predicted the situation would be under control.

Laird's Vow On Viet GIs

SAIGON (UPI)—Defense Secretary Melvin R. Laird said today that as long as there are American military technicians and advisers in Vietnam, there will be American fighting men to protect them.

Laird completed a three-day inspection visit to the war zone and said, "I don't want anybody to think for one minute that when we have artillery and we have air and logistics (supply) forces here that we will not have security forces here," Laird said. "They will carry on combat operations."

Asked about the possibility of further war prisoner exchanges such as the one last month involving S. Sgt. John Sexton for a North Vietnamese Lieutenant, Laird said this appears to be progressing but declined to elaborate.

"I do not think it is a good idea to get into a public discussion at this time on some of the avenues that are going forward on this subject," he said.

Laird has been in Vietnam looking into the progress of the Nixon administration's Vietnamization program. He will report his findings to President Nixon before Nixon makes his next speech about Nov. 15.

Laird indicated he would give Nixon a favorable progress report. He said troop withdrawals now being carried out will more than meet the President's goal of getting down to 184,000 men by Dec. 1. There were 543,400 GIs in Vietnam in April of 1969.

"We will meet and beat the Dec. 1 goal of 184,000 men," Laird said. And with Christmas period coming on, additional personnel will, of course, be returned to the United States."

Laird said he was confident that Congress will restore the foreign aid cut last week by the Senate including the full $549 million this year for aid to Vietnam.

He declined to be drawn into

State's Jobless Rate In Decline

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — California's unemployment rate declined slightly from 7.1 per cent in September to 7 per cent in October, but remained above the national average of 5.2 per cent, Reagan administration figures show.

The state Department of Human Resources Development said Friday that this year's figures are lower than the 7.2 per cent rate during October 1970.

The national average for October was 5.8 per cent, a decline from 6 per cent in September.

Sigurd I. Hansen, director of Human Resources Development, said October was the first time since July 1969 that the unemployment rate fell below the figure for the same month in the previous year.

Hansen said the number of unemployed persons fell by 24,000 between September and October to 489,000. This was 19,000 fewer than in October 1970.

Hansen said the year-to-year drop in the unemployment rate "may be an indication that the upward trend (in unemployment) has stopped."

"Month-to-month figures may fluctuate because of variations connected with strikes and other unforeseen factors," Hansen said. "The 12-month figures offer us a better comparison."

He said the largest drop in jobs during the past 12 months had been in manufacturing while job losses in the aerospace industry accounted for most of the decrease.

"But the aerospace complex has turned around in recent months," Hansen said, "with an additional 2,300 employed in October, 1,300 in September and 2,400 in August."

Hansen said 439,900 persons are currently employed by the aerospace industry.

Here is an area-by-area breakdown of unemployment rates:

Los Angeles-Long Beach, 6.7 per cent, down from 6.8; San Francisco-Oakland, 6.1 per cent, down from 6.5; Anaheim-Santa Ana-Garden Grove, 6.6 per cent, down from 7 per cent; San Diego, 6 per cent, up from 5.8 per cent; San Jose, 6.0 per cent, down from 6.7; San Bernardino-Riverside-Ontario, 6.4 per cent, down from 6.7; Sacramento, unchanged at 6.3 per cent; Fresno, 7.3 per cent, down from 7.5; Bakersfield, 6.3 per cent, up from 5.9; Oxnard-Ventura, 7.0 per cent, down from 7.5; Stockton, 8.9 per cent, down from 10.5; Santa Barbara, 5.8 per cent, down from 6.6 and Vallejo-Napa, 5.9 per cent, down from 6.9.

Reagan Blasts Democrat 'Myth'

SEATTLE (UPI)—The belief that the Democratic Party is the friend of the common man and the downtrodden is a myth that must be exposed, according to California Gov. Ronald Reagan.

He told Republicans at a Friday night fund-raising dinner that Democratic Administrations and congresses in the past have "pitted class against class, race against race, religion against religion ... until they have polarized us the way we have never been in our history."

Reagan blamed the Democrats for problems ranging from the war in Vietnam to the generation gap and said the Democrats aspiring to become President were wholly lacking in leadership at a time when the demands of the presidency were the greatest ever.

NOVATO HIGH CINCHES MCAL TITLE TIE

Novato High School defeated host Redwood, 21-15, yesterday to win a share of the Marin County Athletic League Football title.

In the other MCAL contest yesterday, San Rafael beat Drake, 57-0.

Tamalpais and San Marin tangled at Novato High in the lone league game today, while Terra Linda hosts St. Ignatius of San Francisco tonight at 8 o'clock on the San Rafael High School field.

WIRE NEWS BRIEFS From Everywhere

Storm On Move

NEW DELHI (UPI)—The second cyclonic storm to rise out of the Bay of Bengal in eight days headed for East Pakistan today, veering away from India's devastated Orissa coastline.

The official death toll from a cyclone and tidal wave that struck the Orissa coast Oct. 29 and 30 rose to 9,315 Friday. The eventual toll was expected to exceed 10,000 when all isolated areas are reached, including portions of the Cuttack district where 9,000 deaths have been recorded so far, generally from the tidal wave.

A U.S. Air Force weather reconnaissance plane over the Bay of Bengal reported the fresh swirling storm carrying 70-mile-an-hour winds approached the East Pakistan coastline just east of the area ravaged last year by a record cyclone which left an official death toll of 70,000 and unofficial estimates of up to 200,000 killed.

Border Crossed

ROTENBURG, Germany (UPI)—Three young girls from East Germany managed what authorities on both sides of the Iron Curtain consider nearly impossible. They walked unharmed across the barbed wire fenced and mine-strewn border separating East and West Germany.

The girls, two sisters and their friend, all aged between 11 and 13, told authorities they "wanted to see a proper, large and well-stocked department store" in West Germany.

The children boarded a train near their home in Weimar, East Germany Friday and rode to a point just east of the border.

"They simply walked across the demarcation line," said a police spokesman.

Authorities took the girls to visit shops, which donated gifts to them then they were put on a train for home.

Market Meeting

BRACCIANO, Italy (UPI)—Foreign ministers of the six European Common Market charter nations and the four candidates for membership met today before a roaring log fire in a 13th century lakeside castle to chart future relations with the rest of the world.

The ministers journeyed 25 miles from Rome to the Odescalchi Castle in Bracciano, which dates from 1234, to resume the twice yearly foreign ministers' meeting and discussion of a possible political union of the economic bloc.

The ministers of Italy, France, West Germany, Belgium, the Netherlands and Luxembourg — who Friday agreed to call a summit of prime ministers as soon as possible — were joined by ministers of the four candidate countries, Britain, Denmark, Norway and Ireland for today's session.

Art Destroyed

MADRID (UPI)—Rightwing extremist youths Friday night held a museum guard at knifepoint and destroyed 24 works by exiled Spanish painter Pablo Picasso.

The youths splashed some of the paintings and engravings with acid and smashed others then scattered leaflets praising Generalissimo Francisco Franco.

The leaflets called Picasso a "Marxist, Communist party militant, anti-patriot, homosexual, pornographer and illegitimate child."

Tito's Concern

QUEBEC (UPI)—President Tito of Yugoslavia said Friday he shares Canada's concern over new U.S. economic policies which he said have also hurt his country.

"I refer particularly to the surcharge on imports," he said in Ottawa. "Canada, of course, is suffering much more from this because it has so much more developed economic relations with the United States." Tito was to go to Halifax, N.S., today on the last stop of his five-day visit. He will attend a state dinner and receive an honorary doctor of laws degree from Dalhousie University. He returns home Sunday.

Party Crashers

WASHINGTON (UPI) —A young man and woman, reportedly protesting Soviet treatment of Jews, crashed a party at the Russian Embassy Friday night and handcuffed themselves to a bannister.

Officers of the Executive Protective Agency quickly snipped the handcuffs and arrested the pair on a charge of disorderly conduct.

The two were identified by police as Gordon E. Rayfield, 21, and Miss Terri Green, also 21. A Jewish Defense League spokesman said the pair was protesting alleged persecution of Jews in the Soviet Union.

A Drug Arrest— Ohio Youths Riot

COLUMBUS, Ohio (UPI)—More than 1,000 youths hurled rocks and bricks at police today in a melee touched off by a drug arrest near the Ohio State University campus. Police used tear gas to disperse the crowd.

More than 130 persons were arrested and at least 37 persons, seven of them policemen, were injured. Spokesmen at University Hospital said the injuries were minor.

Police Capt. Donald Bryant said most of those arrested were charged with failing to disperse from a riot situation. Hearings were scheduled Monday for those who posted the required $25 bond.

Bryant said about 150 policemen and Franklin County sheriff's deputies were sent to North High Street, a street that runs parallel to the east edge of the giant campus, after the arrest was made. It took police about 4 1-2 hours to restore order.

Bryant said two officers saw a drug sale being made in the area of a hamburger stand Friday night and arrested a suspect.

"A crowd began to form and the officers took the suspect from the area," he said. "At that same time we ordered all marked cars from the location.

"The crowd continued to grow." "And then the kids began to break windows and destroy property. That's when we moved in our men with riot equipment."

Bryant said tear gas and "knee knockers"—wooden pellets fired from shotguns—were used to disperse the large crowd which at one point sought escape from the police in the OSU student union.

Police, hesitant to enter state property, finally rushed the building and made several arrests.

Police Chief Dwight Joseph termed the police entry onto state property "strictly a defensive action."

"We were getting hit by bricks and I wasn't going to let them seek sanctuary there or at any church, either," Joseph said.

Bryant said more than 50 persons were jailed at city prison in police headquarters. Sheriff Stacy Hall said more than 80 persons were brought to the county prison after the city facility was filled to capacity.

Injuries Minor

April Berg, 17, of 30 Terry Road, San Anselmo, was treated at Marin General Hospital for leg bruises suffered in a car-bicycle collision yesterday at 12:25 p.m. in San Anselmo. Police had no details on the accident.

Girl Torture-Slaying — Man, Woman Held

HOWELL, Mich. (UPI)—Two young persons have been charged with first-degree murder in the torture-slaying of a runaway girl which authorities said occurred in the presence of about a dozen youths.

Raymond Humbel, 22, and Janet Lee Musser, 17, were arrested by state police troopers in Flint Friday and brought here under warrants issued by Livingston County prosecutor Thomas Kizer Jr. They were arraigned Friday night before district Judge Richard R. Robinson and ordered held without bond in the county jail.

Four juveniles also were held for questioning in the slaying.

Authorities would neither confirm or deny a report that Humbel, Miss Musser and others allegedly present when the slaying occurred were members of a cult called "Satan's Satanic Servants."

Humbel and Miss Musser were charged in the death of Kathleen Ann Gilbert, 17, also of Flint, whose nude and partially decomposed body was found in a wooded marsh about 10 miles north of here Thursday.

Kizer said that although the exact day the slaying occurred had not been determined, it was known that the body had been there for at least three weeks.

Detective Sgt. Vince Demsky of the state police post at nearby Brighton, which is handling the case, said Miss Gilbert, a runaway from the girls training school in Adrian, had been beaten, stabbed and shot. An autopsy showed she died of stab wounds.

Kizer placed the number of youths present when the slaqi occurred "in the vicinity of give or take several eith way," but would not reveal a details of the incident itself.

City Goes To Court To Clean Up Street

The City of Mill Valley went to court yesterday to clean up the Miller Avenue slide.

In a petition filed in Marin Superior Court by Deputy City Atty. Philip A. Torre, the city sought: a court order to allow city employees or agents access to the property to clear loose material that might touch off another slide; to force the owners of two parcels of property to abate the original slide, and to award the city $50,000 in damages for inconvenience and expense since the January 1969 slide.

That slide has kept a portion of Miller Avenue closed for almost three years and the property presents "a continuous threat and hazard of additional slide material being deposited on Miller Avenue," according to the city's petition.

Named as defendants in the action are Malinda Rowe-Beddoe, Henry T. Gunderson and Jospeh A. and Mary B. Moore. Mrs. Rowe-Beddoe and Gunderson are named as "owners or reputed owners" of the property on which the 1969 slide "appears to have originated."

The Moores, according to the petition, are owners of an adjacent parcel of property over which they have refused to allow Mill Valley crews to cross to do slide repair work.

The slide, termed a "dangerous and hazardous condition," was declared a public nuisance and ordered abated within 60 days by the Mill Valley City Council on July 19. The owners have failed to abate it, according to the petition.

The council also directed city officials to remove unstable material from the slide area and to extend the present fence around the area another 40 feet — action which has not been accomplished, according to the city's petition, because of the refusal of the Moores to allow city crews on their property.

Judge Henry J. Broderick yesterday ordered all of the property owners not to interfere with city crews seeking access to the slide area, and set a hearing for 9 a.m. Nov. 16 before Judge Samuel W. Gardiner for the defendants to show why the city's other requests should not be granted.

Auction Nets $4,500 For Petaluman

A two-week radio auction has raised $4,546 to benefit the Robbie Sturla fund in Petaluma.

Sturla, 15, has been paralyzed since suffering a neck injury during a practice football game Sept. 14 at St. Vincent's High School, Petaluma. The youth left Hillcrest Hospital Tuesday for the Santa Clara Rehabilitation Center at San Jose, where costs may range as high as $6,000 per month for treatment.

Agnes McGilvra, owner of radio station KTOB, reported that $4,546 was raised in the auction during the past two weeks. On several days more than $900 was raised in the one-hour auction period beginning at 8:05 a.m.

The auction is scheduled to continue through next Friday, with a sailboat, fur coat, silver and livestock among items scheduled to go on the auction block.

Michael Gonzalez, athletic director at the school, estimated that nearly $8,000 had been raised for the fund through the auction, other fund-raising events and outright contributions ranging from $2 to $100.

A spaghetti dinner to benefit the fund will be held tomorrow from noon to 7 p.m. at the school. Entertainment will include the state championship Petaluma Police Assistance League junior girls drill team at 5:30 p.m. and local singers.

Gonzalez said all proceeds from the school's homecoming game on Nov. 13 also will go to the fund.

Three Tam Art Students Win

Three Tamalpais High School students won top awards yesterday at an art and film festival at the Jack Tar Hotel in San Francisco.

Student work from high schools in six counties was entered in the contest, sponsored by KYA radio of San Francisco.

Diane Gower, a senior from Mill Valley, won the second award with an ink drawing and received a two-year scholarship to the Academy of Arts in San Francisco valued at $2,400.

Carl Willat, also a senior from Mill Valley, received the first award for an antimated film entitled, "George Washington at Valley Forge."

Olivia Scott, a junior, won an honorable mention award for a pencil drawing.

Marshal Shot In Response To Alarm

CRESWELL, Ore. (UPI)—A city marshal was shot dead Friday night when he responded to the silent alarm at a bank during a holdup by two men wearing halloween masks and wigs.

Service Area In Greenbrae Urged

The Greenbrae Property Owners Association has requested the county to create a service area in the unincorporated section of the community.

According to a petition filed Thursday with the Marin County Local Agency Formation Commission, the county service area would tax for maintenance and landscaping of public areas in Greenbrae.

Those areas primarily are landscaped road medians and entrances to the residental neighborhood.

The area proposed for the service area is north of Sir Francis Drake Boulevard and between Manor Road on the west and Via La Cumbre on the east.

The Local Agency Formation Commission has not set a date for a hearing on the proposal.

Responsibility for community maintenance was passed to the property owners association last year by Schultz Development Co., developers of Greenbrae.

At the time of the transfer, the property owners considered forming a service area but decided to attempt first to finance maintenance and landscaping through their association.

A county service area differs from a service district in that it is simply a taxing agent under the jurisdiction of the county board of supervisors.

The service district, on the other hand, is a form of community government with elected officials.

Student Found Dead In Room

A 25-year-old pharmacology student was found dead yesterday in his room in Mill Valley.

The Marin County Coroner's office reported Durel Evans Carpenter apparently had succumbed from an overdose of drugs in his room at 99 Del Caso Drive.

Carpenter was a student at the University of California Medical Center where he had a scholarship to study pharmacology and worked as an intern.

The coroner's office said he was found in his room at 3:30 p.m. by his landlady, Mrs. Ernest A. Brymer. A note was found indicating general despondency.

He was the son of Bernard Carpenter of Chino. Funeral arrangements were pending today at Russell and Gooch Mortuary, Mill Valley.

Guest Speaker

Rev. Dennis J. Bennett, leader of the charismatic movement in Seattle, will be guest speaker at the 8 p.m. service Wednesday at Holy Innocent's Episcopal Parish in Corte Madera.

Novato's Youth Cites Its Needs

The City of Novato's youth advisory committee has cited a need for more commercial recreational facilities and youth-oriented businesses in the community.

City Mgr. Charles A. Brown said the desires were outlined by the group, composed of junior and senior high school students, at a meeting Thursday night. Junior high representatives asked for facilities such as a roller skating rink, bowling alley, a cycle track and bicycle rental; more city recreational activities such as youth dances, nature walks and drop-in sports; community discussions on ecology, the war, environment, drugs and racial discrimination, and called for more public interest in a youth commission and youth representation on city committees.

Senior high students deplored a lack of businesses such as a low-priced record store, new movie theater, clothing stores for youth, a dance hall and rental stores with teen-oriented items. They also asked for organized dances but with fewer restrictions.

Members of the committee will attend public meetings to get first-hand information on the workings of local government prior to their next meeting at 7 p.m. Nov. 18 at the Novato branch of the county library.

Die Of Violence

LANSING, Mich. (UPI) — Most Michigan children who die between the ages of one and 19 are killed violently, not by disease, reports State Public Health Director Maurice Reizen.

Check-Passing Plea Date Set

Dana Lyn Michaels, 19, no known address, has been arraigned in Marin Municipal Court on a charge of passing stolen checks.

She is to plead to the charge next Thursday.

She allegedly passed a check in a Mill Valley store Oct. 21. The check reportedly had been stolen the day before from Elizabeth W. Gage, owner of Lisa's Leathers in Mill Valley.

34 Degrees Given Out In Sonoma

Thirty-four Marin and Southern Sonoma students received degrees from Sonoma State College at the end of the summer session, according to president Thomas H. McGrath.

Local students earning master's degrees were Katherine Susan Jones Berman of Novato; Billie Blaine Brower, Jacqueline Edwards, Tula Rachel Jaffe, Stephen Laughlin and George E. Prydz of Cotati, and E. Ray Butler, Gloria Ann Gessaman, Ray F. Hubbell Jr. and Tresa Marks Sannella of Petaluma.

Students earning bachelor's degrees, listed by hometowns, were:

Cotati — Ronald G. Carner, Daniel N. Clayton, George J. Couch, Pamela S. Phelps.

Fairfax — Judith Darral Hallowitz and Roy D. Wolford.

Larkspur — Perry E. Hodgson.

Mill Valley — Karen L. Lloyd.

Novato — Ronald L. Baldwin, Gaylen S. Hunter, Virginia I. Onderdonk, Normajean Perry.

Petaluma — Diane Robb Balter, Beverly J. Bond, Peter C. Grace, Nick H. English, Gloria W. Johannsen, Arlene C. McKeown, Donald L. Watson, Yvonne A. Williams.

Rohnert Park — Kristin A. Barstad, James C. Park.

San Rafael — Daniel H. Chambers, Glenn D. Hawthorne.

Theft Suspects Plead Innocent

Two San Rafael men, Frank Dewey Haygood, 47, of 805 Fourth Street, and Richard Lee Miller, 32, of 1426 Lincoln Avenue, have pleaded innocent in Marin Superior Court to two counts of burglary.

Jury trial was set for the week of Dec. 6.

They are charged with burglaries of the Fleur de France restaurant, 720 B Street, San Rafael, on Oct. 4, and the Cellars Bar, 534 Third Street, San Rafael, on Sept. 30.

'Newhall Campaign Offices Ransacked

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI)— Scott Newhall not only lost the mayoralty race, his campaign headquarters were ransacked.

Police said thieves took seven typewriters, three electric heaters, two alabaster sculptures and three cases of "Old Newhall," an expensive bourbon sold only in the city of Newhall, where the former newspaper executive's family resides.

MEADOWSWEET

Corte Madera Plan Gets Good Marks

The proposed Meadowsweet Station development, when fully built, could reduce Corte Madera's tax rate by 11 per cent despite increasing the town's population by 15 per cent.

In a generally favorable evaluation of the controversial townhouse plan, consultant Thomas Cooke of Sedway and Cooke of San Francisco said the 540 units proposed near the Koch luggage plant would increase the town's population by almost 1,500.

Protecting the new residents would require two new policemen and two new firemen at a cost of $62,000 a year, but the $24 million project would more than pay its own way, Cooke predicted.

His plan was submitted to the town in completed form Tuesday, just prior to a planning commission hearing on the development plan of Harter and Odenthal Investment Co. of Orinda.

Homeowners near the 73-acre site have fought the plan, saying the townhouses would be unattractive, cause traffic congestion, increase taxes and ruin their uncrowded neighborhood.

While not speaking directly to the first and last points, Cooke's analysis refutes the other two arguments.

"The size of the project, housing type mix, and provision of recreation facilities as an integral part of the project indicate that it will not adversely affect the community's financial situation," Cooke said in his report.

He estimated the cluster development would increase the expenses of the town and the Corte Madera Sanitary District by $85,610, but would increase revenue by $146,155.

If expenses unrelated to the townhouses do not rise, the city and sanitary district could reduce their combined tax rate from $1.63 per $100 assessed valuation to about a $1.45, according to Cooke's figures.

Cooke does not say what effect the development will have on school taxes. Cooke recommends the children attend the closest schools, which are in the Reed School District, although the site is in the Mill Valley School District. The Reed district. The Reed district has scuttled the idea leaving it unclear where the children would be educated.

He said existing recreational facilities of the town would suffice because the planned development would have its own recreation areas.

Cooke also predicted existing sewage treatment facilities and streets could handle the increased load.

Although not a burden on man-made facilities, Cooke said the development could harm the environment if imporperly done. He recommended against steep excavations proposed by the developers and said the ridges around the development should be left untouched.

"The PUD (planned unit development), if developed in accordance with recommended provisions, will be a major step in promoting protection of the last remaining open land separating urban development in the southern part of Marin County," Cooke said.

Despite Cooke's generally favorable report of the project more than 125 persons who attended the Tuesday meeting of the planning commission continued to oppose the development.

The planners are scheduled to set another hearing on the issue at their regular meeting Monday.

Ferry Cost $408,000 For A Year

The Golden Gate Bridge District's Sausalito ferry, despite overwhelming popularity, nevertheless will cost the district $408,000 to run this year.

The reason for the heavy deficit, district officials said yesterday, was that the single ferry carries the same administrative and overhead costs that will be shared by other ferries when they are added to the fleet in 1973.

The district is planning to build three new 165-foot $2.5 million ferries to expand service to Corte Madera.

Stanley M. Kowieski, the district's ferry transit manager, predicted that 1.2 million passengers will ride the ferryboat this fiscal year, paying some $600,000 in fares. Taking only direct operating expenses of $474,500, the ferry will show a surplus of approximately $126,000, he said.

But when overhead and administrative costs are cranked in, the net result will be a deficit of $408,000 this year, Kowleski explained.

The district's consulting naval architect, Phillip Spaulding, has estimated originally that these operating costs would total $357,000, but that they had risen because of unexpected inflation and because of extra security and deck employees not planned by Spaulding, according to Kowleski.

District Seeks Panel Members

Residents of the Dixie School District are being sought by the board of trustees to serve on a 1971-72 Citizens Advisory Group, according to Supt. Clifford W. Campbell.

The committee will review district finances, study enrollment trends and assist in preparing and disseminating information in connection with the June 1972 election over whether the district should be unified with San Rafael.

Those interested in serving on the committee, who need not be parents of district students, may telephone the superintendent's office or any of the school principals.

Program Of Amigos To Be Explained

The Marin chapter of Amigos de las Americas — a group of youths trained to immunize rural villagers in Central and South American — will explain its program and seek recruits at a meeting in Ross Wednesday.

"Amigos" also have been responsible for nutrition, literacy, public health and community improvement programs.

Dr. Richard S. Hahn of Greenbrae, Amigo training director, will show slides at the meeting in St. John's Parish House at 7:30 p.m.

Amigos must be 16 years old as of Feb. 1, 1972 and have a knowledge of Spanish. Training is conducted after school.

Arguments Set On Abortion Law

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI)— The California Supreme Court has set all arguments on the constitutionality of the state's abortion law for Wednesday, Dec. 8.

The court will decide between two conflicting opinions of the law rendered by different districts of the state Court of Appeal.

The verdict in one appellate ruling held the California abortion law constitutional, the verdict in another district of the same court was that the law was unconstitutional.

The Supreme Court accepted appeals of both rulings.

The California abortion law became effective in 1968, but in January, 1970, a municipal judge in Santa Ana held the law unconstitutional and his opinion was upheld later by the Los Angeles district State Court of Appeal.

However, in August, this year, the State Appeallate Court in San Francisco ruled that all abortions in the state were legal if performed by a physician in a licensed hospital during the first 20 weeks of pregnancy.

The California law permits abortions in cases of rape, incest and danger to the mother's physical or mental health. The state Department of Health reported in August that 62,000 legal abortions had been performed up to that time as compared with 15,339 in 1969 and 5,039 in 1968 before the law became effective.

Year Of Chile's New Economics Shows Allende Reform Is Paying

SANTIAGO, Chile (UPI)—A Roman Catholic university economics professor said in a recent lecture that if the "new economics" of President Salvador Allende are successful, all classical and Marxist economic textbooks of the world will have to be rewritten.

For starters, Allende, who has just completed his first full calendar year in power must be the first Marxist chief of state to have initiated his administration by spurring consumerism.

His short-range policy has paid off. By the end of 1971, projections indicate, the industrial growth will have increased by 10 per cent; the Gross National Product by 6 to 8 per cent; and inflation on the official consumer index (which trails true inflation by an estimated 7 to 10 per cent) will have been held to a relatively low 18 per cent, compared with 35 per cent for 1970.

On the debit side of the ledger, falling copper prices and increased imports will have whittled net foreign exchange reserves to about $100 million, and this may portend future trouble. Allende inherited $335 million in net reserves when he took office Nov. 4, 1970.

A deep recession had begun in August, 1970, due to electoral nerves, and developed into a near panic with a short-lived bank run after Allende's narrow victory on Sept. 4. His first task was to revitalize the economy.

Economy Minister Pedro Vuskovic, an obscure Marxist economics professor, sparked the private sector with increased demand. This was achieved through a price freeze and mandatory New Year pay increase, especially for the lower income brackets.

By April, Chile's economy was perking at nearly full capacity.

Allende, who heads a "Popular Unity" coalition dominated by his own Socialists, who are doctrinaire Marxist-Leninists, and Communists, and including a smattering nonMarxist splinter groups, has stated his intention to socialize Chile.

He plans to nationalize 200 major firms to create the "social area" of the economy and all farms over 250 acres in size for conversion into peasant communes. Non-strategic enterprises of less than $500,000 capitalization would be left untouched. There is also a strong mixed (government-private) sector, which would be expanded.

Targeted for nationalization are banking and credit; all monopolies; strategic industries; foreign commerce; public utilities; major subsoil resources and the internal means of distribution.

In 1971, nationalization went faster then most observers expected. The textile industry (which weighs heavily in the official consumer index) has been taken over under depression era anti-lockout legislation. Following state-inspired labor agitation by Marxist-led copper unions, which produces 80 per cent of foreign earnings, has been nationalized along with coal and steel; 11 of 21 private banks and all five foreign banks will have been bought out by year's end.

The government expropriated 1,400 farms in 1970 and announced that it will complete the expropriatory phase of the agrarian reform in 1971 by taking 1,700 more.

The government is counting on the discipline of the Marxist-led labor unions to hold 1972 wage demands inside recommended guidelines, but this remains to be seen.

Man, Wife Are Bound Over

Paul A. Verdone, 24, and his wife, Janet, 22, both of San Anselmo, have been bound over to Marin Superior Court on charges of possessing marijuana and marijuana paraphernalia.

They are to be arraigned in superior court Nov. 22.

They were arrested Aug. 2 after police were tipped that marijuana was growing in their bathroom.

Hearing On Rezoning Request Is Slated

I-J Special Report

SANTA ROSA — A hearing on a west Cotati rezoning request was set yesterday for Nov. 18 by the Sonoma County Planning Commission.

The 3:15 p.m. hearing will be on the request of Larry Johnson to rezone 1.10 acres to general business with parking at 707 Gravenstein Highway near Stony Point Road, Cotati.

Teacher Halt At Daly City Viewed

The Daley City teacher strike at school opening this fall was the result of a vote by a "small group of teachers" who attended a meeting last spring, a man who was in the middle of it told the San Rafael Parent-Teacher Council yesterday.

Fred Schweickhardt, principal of Westlake School in Jefferson Elementary School District, traced the strike's history at a meeting of the PTA group in the San Rafael City Schools administration building.

The first teacher resentment came over pay, he related. Two years ago, Jefferson teachers staged a "mini-strike," arbitrarily setting up a minimum school day and using the rest of the regular class periods to parade and explain their grievances. This, he said, won much sympathy from parents, but not from the district board.

The following year, the board failed to make good on a promise that any extra funds received would go to upgrade teacher salaries, according to Schweickhardt. This resulted in a two-day strike in 1970, which caused the board to relent and grant a collective bargaining contract (which the California Teachers Association calls a "master agreement") to the CTA-dominated certificated employees' council.

Later, acting on legal advice from the San Mateo county counsel's office, the Jefferson board resolved not to enter into such a contract for another year — several such contracts having been declared illegal by courts in Southern California.

Then came the meeting of the CTA local last spring — attended by only a few, according to Schweickhardt — at which the decision was made to strike when school opened to force the contract.

The strike failed. Less than half the teachers walked off the job. The schools operated with substitute teachers.

Schweickhardt said he felt the striking teachers were lucky to be given their jobs back after they abandoned the contract demand, "and they didn't get the contract."

Richard V. Godino, assistant Marin County counsel, described the exclusive bargaining contracts and school boards' objections to them. The latter, he said, are primarily that such a contract "takes away the power of the community and the school board it has elected" in operation of the schools.

"There is no proof of any sort that the education of the children is benefited in any way by a collective bargaining agreement," commented Godino.

Neal Brengle, president of the San Rafael Teachers Association (CTA), and Frank Wells, president of the Marin County Federation of Teachers (AFL-CIO), upheld the concept of collective bargaining contracts between teachers' organizations and school districts.

Schweickhardt and Brengle differed as to whether the Daly City strike was actively pushed by CTA as a "test case." Schweickhardt said it was; Brengle claimed it was purely the action of local teachers, with CTA forced to back it after the teachers walked out.

"I don't see any urging of CTA members to go for a strike or to go for a master agreement," Brengle said.

(Such "master agreement" contracts have been declared a major goal of the National Education Association, CTA's parent body. A bill providing for them was introduced on CTA's behalf in this year's legislature, but was killed in committee.)

Work Order In Petty Theft Case

Paul Joseph Clausen, 19, of Novato, has been ordered to work five days for the Marin County Parks and Recreation Department as a result of a petty theft conviction.

Judge Robert A. Smaliman of Marin Municipal Court sentenced Clausen on the misdemeanor charge.

Following Clausen's plea, a misdemeanor charge that he possessed marijuana was dismissed at the request of the district attorney's office.

Clausen was arrested Oct. 21 with Robert Daniel Percy, 18, and Eric Winfield Alford, 18, both of Novato, on suspicion of felony possession of marijuana for sale, as well as petty theft. Only the two misdemeanors were filed against each of them.

Percy's case has been transferred to Marin Juvenile Court and Alford has pleaded innocent and is to return to municipal court Monday.

They were arrested when police allegedly saw them trying to pry open an oil rack at a Novato service station. In their car, police said, they found 19 cans of oil and about a pound of marijuana.

Two Girls, 11, Set Brush Fire

San Rafael police say they have implicated two 11-year-old girls in a hillside fire that burned 900 square feet of grass and brush at Butternut and Mahogany roads Thursday.

The blaze was put out at 5:15 p.m. by San Rafael and Marin County firemen after it was started by the youngsters playing with matches. Four other youngsters playing on the hill tried unsuccessfully to stop the blaze and all six children then alerted a neighbor to call firemen.

No citations were issued.

Shooting Claims Trio In Maryland

ISSUE, Md. (UPI)—Sheriff's deputies suspected a double murder and suicide in the shooting deaths of a plumbing contractor, a construction worker and a suburban Washington man, in this southern Maryland town Friday night.

Francis B. Mathews, the contractor, and Albert E. Silliday, the worker, were found shot to death at a home, where Mathews had been working on the plumbing.

About three hours later, deputies found the body of Vincent Galleano, 56, of Prince Georges County, in the Maryland suburbs in the front seat of his car.

A spokesman for the sheriff's office said Mathews, brother of Charles County Orphans' Court Judge Mary Mathews, had been shot twice in the back and Silliday was shot twice in the Chest. Galleano was shot once in the temple at close range while sitting in his car.

All three men were shot by a pistol, police said. It was reported that a pistol was found under Galleano's body in his car.

Mathews, who lived in nearby LaPalta, Md., and owned some property in the area, had some "business dealins" with Galleano in the home construction business, according to the sheriff's spokesman.

Manslaughter Case— Policeman Is Fired

SAN JOSE (UPI)—Policeman Rocklin Wooley, 27, four-year veteran of the San Jose Police Department charged with manslaughter in the shooting of a black IBM technician, was fired Friday night.

City Manager Thomas W. Fletcher announced the dismissal and said it was based on eight counts. He declined to give details of any of the charges because of an earlier gag order issued by Santa Clara County Superior Court Judge James B. Scott.

Fletcher did say that two off-duty officers who were involved in the fracas which led to the killing of John H. Smith, 37, were also disciplined.

Wooley was indicted this week by a county grand jury for the Sept. 19 predawn killing of Smith. The shooting occurred after Wooley stopped Smith for a minor traffic violation. The officer said he thought Smith was armed but no weapon was found.

Patrolman Darrell Richter, 29, was suspended for one year and Patrolman Robert Watts, 24, was dismissed on five counts. Richter and Watts were off-duty and out of uniform when they came to the aid of their fellow officer prior to the shooting, officials said.

Judge Scott's gag rule was a tough, sweeping order. It applied to all attorneys and investigators on both sides in the case, all court employes, all public officials involved, including the City Council, mayor, city manager, police chief and every man on the police force.

The rule even extended to sheriff's deputies, grand jury members and "dismissed jurors."

Auto Theft To Superior Court

Charles Anthony Wood and Michael Starks, both 18 and of San Francisco, have been bound over to Marin Superior Court on a charge of car theft.

They are to be arraigned in superior court Nov. 22.

They were arrested Oct. 21 when the California Highway Patrol saw the car they were riding in moving erratically on Highway 101 near San Rafael.

A check revealed the car had been stolen Oct. 10 in San Francisco, according to the highway patrol.

Graveyard Vandalized At Olema

Halloween vandals damaged a dozen gravemarkers at Olema Cemetery in what deputy sheriff Michael McLean described as a "cheap, perverted trick."

"I am posting a $250 reward for information leading to the arrest and conviction of the perverted punks," said McLean. "It was more than just a Halloween prank. They just wrecked the place and even started digging up one grave."

No bodies are missing at the cemetery, located on Shoreline Highway about a mile south of Olema.

The damage wrought Sunday night consisted of broken markers, headstones uprooted and heavy marble slabs broken into several pieces. The wings of stone angels had been broken, and garbage emptied on the top of graves.

Among the graves desecrated were those belonging to the James Alberigi family and the Nelson family of Point Reyes, the deputy reported.

"Everyone is hopping mad about it. There has been minor vandalism at the cemetery before but never this bad."

any discussion of how much further the U.S. force in Vietnam could be cut back or how soon. Asked about President Nguyen Van Thieu's remarks to a dozen correspondents in late September that he envisioned 50,000 U.S. military technicians and artillerymen in Vietnam indefinitely, along with a combat force of thousands of men as in Korea and Germany, Laird said, "I would not want to get into any projections like that."

"President Thieu did not give figures like that to me," Laird said. "I don't know where you got those figures. They had nothing to do with any discussion I had with him."

Laird left Saigon by plane for Honolulu today en route to Washington.

Before his news conference, Laird put on the fatigue uniform of the combat soldier and toured battlefronts then visited a new Vietnamese ordnance depot on Saigon's outskirts.

As Laird visited the war zone, American B52 bombers kept up their unannounced campaign against Communist truck traffic along the Ho Chi Minh Trail in Laos, military sources said.

The U.S. command did announce that one B52 raid dropped at least 90 tons of bombs inside South Vietnam. The B52s were aiming for a truck storage area 28 miles southeast of the abandoned Khe Sanh base and four miles from Laos, a military spokesman said.

Arrested In Knife Probe

A San Francisco man was booked into Marin County Jail yesterday on suspicion of burglary, auto theft and possession of a switchblade knife after Corte Madera officers said they saw him leaving the neighborhood of a Corte Madera house burglary.

Victor Royal Van Wagner, 28, was being held today in lieu of $5,000 bail to appear in Marin Municipal Court Monday.

Police answered a neighbor's call that a burglary was in progress on Sonora Avenue at 1:22 p.m., and spotted a car fitting the description of the burglar's vehicle, three blocks from the home.

A television set taken from the home was found in the car after officers stopped Van Wagner, officers said. The car was reported to have been stolen in San Francisco.

son and one reason only: Because negotiations hit a stalemate. It is the only meaningful way we can proceed."

Reagan two days ago warned he would veto the Democratic bill unless it gave Republicans a better shake.

Throughout the negotiations with Republicans, Dymally said, Harmer repeatedly warned Democrats that the governor would veto such a bill.

"We have not threatened a governor's veto to anyone on the floor," Harmer said. "We have said if the bill comes out manifestly unfair, there will be a veto, a second veto and a third veto."

After a long exchange of bitter allegations, Republicans met privately and agreed to withdraw their amendments if the Democrats put Dymally's bill on the inactive file.

But Dymally, who called a closed-session of his Elections and Reapportionment Committee for Monday, warned Republicans he had no intention "of redistricting the entire state" to suit them.

BLAST

Potter Stewart, Harry A. Blackman and Byron R. White — issued an order denying the delay without comment.

Justices William J. Brennan Jr., Thurgood Marshall and William O. Douglas wanted to postpone the blast so the court could consider the merits of its opponents' arguments. Brennan and Marshall said the arguments by environmental foes confirmed a lower court's views that the case presented "a substantial question as to the legality of the proposed test."

Larkspur Panel Sets Meeting

The Larkspur Planning Commission will meet with the city's architectural review committee at 7:30 p.m. Tuesday to discuss giving the committee more authority.

The committee now holds authority only to make recommendations, architectural review, according to John W. Appleton, town planning director. Under a city staff proposal, it would be empowered to pass judgment on design issues.

Also set for discussion are a nature preserve suggestion for Larkspur Creek and revision of parking regulations.

MRS. WIERSCHKE

Harriet M. Wierschke of Santa Rosa, for many years a teacher in little Union School on the Sonoma-Marin line, died yesterday in a Sonoma County Hospital.

Mrs. Wierschke, 70, was a native of Kentucky but was reared and educated in Antigo, Wisc. She lived in the Petaluma area for 28 years with her late husband, Samuel, and moved to Santa Rosa three years ago.

She is survived by two daughters, Joyce Lorenz of Petaluma and Rosemary Suttle of Novato, six grandchildren and a great-grandchild, as well as a sister, Sarah Rath of Los Angeles.

She was a member of the American Association of University Women, the San Francisco Opera Association, the Petaluma Women's Club and the Christ United Methodist Church of Santa Rosa.

Funeral will be at 2 p.m. Monday in the Parent funeral chapel, Petaluma, followed by private burial in the Odd Fellows Cemetery, Santa Rosa. The family prefers donations to the American Cancer Society.

Innocent Pleas To Pot Charges

Three men arrested Sunday in Sausalito have pleaded innocent to marijuana charges in Marin Municipal Court.

Preliminary hearing was set for Nov. 16 for Michael Arnold Spencer, 24, of no known address; Daniel Alan Gelinas, 19; of Gate 6, and Jason Edward Omar, 26, of 240 Glen Drive, Sausalito.

They were arrested when police went to Omar's residence after complaints of noise and found 54 pounds of pot at the house.

The three are charged with felony possession of pot for sale and a misdemeanor count of possessing narcotics paraphernalia.

School District Shift Considered

The Kentfield School District board will consider shifting jurisdiction over the Air Force Nike Missile site on Mount Tamalpais to the Mill Valley School District at 8 p.m. Monday at Wolfe Grade School.

Because of confusion over boundaries, Air Force dependents have attended Mill Valley schools although the installation is in Kentfield territory.

F. CARPENTIER

Mass of the Resurrection for Fernand Carpentier, retired bulldozer operator and a Marin resident for 63 years, was held today at our Lady of Loretto church in Novato.

Carpentier, 71, of 1104 Second Street, Novato, died Thursday in a local hospital after a short illness.

He was born in Portland, and came to California in 1904 as a child. He moved to the Black Point area of Novato in 1908. For many years he was a blade operator for Bobo contractor in Ignacio.

He was a retired member of operating engineers local 3.

Carpentier is survived by two brothers, George Carpentier and Louis Carpentier, both of Black Point.

Recitation of the Rosary was last night at Redwood Chapel Funeral Home in Novato. Burial was in Mount Olivet Cemetery, San Rafael.

ALBINI BERNARDINI

Albini Bernardini, 77-year-old San Anselmo resident, died yesterday in a Bay Area hospital following a lengthy illness.

Mrs. Bernardini was born in San Francisco and moved to Marin County in the 1920s. Her last address was 44 Mariposa Avenue. She and her late husband, Virgil, operated a restaurant at one time.

She is survived by two sons, Lawrence of San Anselmo, and Alfred; a sister, Rose Cervini, and nine grandchildren.

Mass of the Resurrection will be celebrated at 10 a.m. Monday at St. Anselm's Church, San Anselmo, followed by burial at Italian Cemetery, Colma.

NEW PRISON PUMPER

Two unidentified inmate firemen check out a newly acquired pumper truck for the San Quentin Prison fire department. The $26,000 rig will serve the institution, homes on the reservation and the village of San Quentin. Officials report the truck will always be outside and ready to go — largely because it won't fit in the fire station.

Pope Ends Synod With A Defense

VATICAN CITY (UPI)—Pope Paul VI closed the Third International Synod of Bishops today with one of his strongest defenses of the 12th century church law barring Roman Catholic priests from marrying.

The speech, ending 38 days of deliberations by more than 200 churchmen, came shortly after Synod sources said delegates had ruled out the possibility of allowing some elderly married men to become priests.

The sources said churchmen voted 107-83 against a step even the Pope had agreed to consider.

"What the Synod has said," the Pope said, "We confirm."

The 74-year-old pontiff called celibacy "not a minor part of the great gift of the priesthood."

There was no final, formal proclamations by the Synod of its two themes, the priesthood and justice, because of the large number of amendments and proposed changes in the wording of documents on the two issues.

The vote on the priesthood was the final official act by the Synod, which earlier rejected a clause which would have left the door ajar for some married men to become priests under special conditions and with the Pope's approval.

Many liberals voted against the motion, Synod sources said, because it did not go far enough.

The motion was reworded but still failed to satisfy many liberal delegates. Most of the document on justice also was rejected, and Synod officials decided not to address final documents to the world, but to the Pope only.

The priesthood and justice were the only two themes on the synod agenda when it opened Sept. 30, but because delegates could not agree completely on wording in final documents, synod officials decided to drop the idea of final formal proclamations.

Almost all of the justice document, which included comment on everything from pollution to population growth, and five of the 19 clauses in the priesthood document failed to win a required two thirds majority.

Altogether, 806 amendments were proposed during voting on the two documents. Many overlapped or were minor changes in language. But some were major proposals.

All were subject to another vote.

In any case, decisions by delegates were not binding on the Pope although Vatican sources said he was sure to consider them in any future pronouncements.

The Atmosphere Is Pretty Heavy

MOSCOW (UPI)—The atmosphere weighs 5 quadrillion, 157 trillion tons, the Soviets said yesterday in an announcement of great import to scientists and connoisseurs of trivia.

The official Tass news agency said an electronic brain known as the Minsk-22 computer had figured out the total weight of Earth's air cover more precisely than had been done before. "The mass of air enveloping our planet is now estimated at 5 quadrillion, 157 trillion tons," Tass said.

"This calculation is essential for research in cosmonautics, space geodesy and gravimetry," Tass said.

It said Minsk-22's arithmetic "for the first time took into account all the peculiarities of the earth's relief and the distribution of temperatures on its surface."

Seven Born To Woman In Chile

SANTIAGO, Chile (UPI)—A 26-year-old Chilean woman gave birth today to seven boys in the Catholic University hospital of Santiago, the sixth reported incident of septuplet births in this century.

Physicians at the hospital said the mother, Mrs. Graciela Calderon de Avila, and six of the infants were in good condition. The seventh was suffering from respiratory problems, they said.

Weight of the septuplets ranged from two to three pounds. All were placed in incubators in the intensive care section of the hospital.

Mrs. Avila's husband, Gabriel, 28, is a furniture varnisher. He said physicians had told him to expect twins or triplets. The couple has one other child, also a boy.

The Guinness Book of World Records lists only five other septuplet births in this country but has no record of whether any of the children involved survived. The first was in Nigeria in 1907 and others were reported in East Africa in 1920, in Portugal in 1931, in Guiana in 1933 and in India in 1937.

SEOUL (UPI) — President Park Chung-hee announced today 10,000 South Korean troops will be pulled out of Vietnam by June 30 in the first step toward withdrawing all 50,000 Korean soldiers fighting in Indochina.

Ghetto Cancer Remedy Urged

NEW YORK (UPI)—The American Cancer Society said Thursday that ghetto residents often are frequent victims of certain kinds of cancer and suggested an accelerated program to remedy the situation.

"This is the population in which many cancers are diagnosed too late to expect survival," ACS executive vice president Lane W. Adams told the annual meeting of the society.

Lane said the ghetto is where "some cancers hit hardest—cancer of the cervix, cancer of the lung and cancer of the stomach..."

He recommended the establishment of task forces against cancers of the breast, the colon-rectum and the lung similar to one already working on uterine cancer.

TIPS FOR HOUSEWIVES

Start A Business To End Boredom

By GAY PAULEY

NEW YORK (UPI)—One way to get rid of the "I'm just a housewife" syndrome is to start a business in your home.

Some one million women already are operating home businesses successfully, doing everything from cooking to crafts, reports the National Home Study Council. Some of them are earning only $1,000 to $5,000 a year. Others are seeing what started in the household turn them into millionaires. At the same time, almost all are balancing their home careers with caring for house, husband and children.

YOU'RE FAMILIAR with some of the tycoon-type success stories — how Margaret Rudkin's home-baked bread for her child needing a special diet became Pepperidge Farm, how Ruth Handler created an adult doll for her daughter, named it "Barbie" and ultimately became president of Mattel, which calls itself the world's largest toy company.

Whether you want just to earn extra money, say, for home improvement, putting the children through college or buying yourself a mink coat, you can get into the act with the other one million.

There are, however, pitfalls along with the rewards. In a new publication, "The Family Circle Book of Careers at Home" (Cowles), Mary Bass Gibson outlines the methods of starting a business. Mrs. Gibson, who now writes at home, used to occupy the executive suite as editor of the Ladies' Home Journal.

MRS. GIBSON starts with the premise, "A survey reveals that 90 per cent of all housewives have the daily routine of housework finished before noon." So, there's time to do other work.

To the housewife who says, "But I have no talent," she answers, "sit down and make a list of things you do at home that are special....cake decorating, flower arranging, needlework, dressmaking, crocheting and knitting..."

"Discovery of her own worth is the first and most important reward to a housewife who launches a career at home," she says. Mrs. Gibson believes a home career makes a woman a better housewife. But she warns, "The whole thing is totally impossible without a husband who wants it to work."

Among the pitfalls are overextension, financially and in optimism. Start small, she says. Test your market thoroughly. Keep your financial paperwork up to date and don't go overboard in inventory.

SHE LISTS a 4-E (for energy, enthusiasm, ego and excellence) aptitude test to a woman planning a home career. Here it goes, in 20 question form:

Do you enjoy being busy? Do you get your housework done early in the day? Do you like to try out new ideas? Are you more concerned with pleasing than being pleased? Do you feel you have a special talent that is a money-maker (potentially)?

Do your friends and family believe you have a special talent? Are you a perfectionist? Is your husband easy to get along with? Are your children cooperating? Did you hold a job before you were married? Do you throw yourself wholeheartedly into whatever you do? Can you take criticism and/or rejection?

Do you have a hobby you can turn into a career at home? Does boredom seem unnecessary to you? Do you need to make money? Would having your own money make you feel more important? Do you have patience?

DO YOU think a wife and mother gains respect from her family if she can make money on her own? Are you a good organizer? Do you have imagination in working out your problems?

Score five points for each "yes" answer. A score of 100 per cent means, "What are you waiting for? Get going." A score of 50 per cent means proceed with caution. A score of between 50 and 100 per cent means you can make it if you're willing to face up to shortcomings and do something about correcting them.

Women Liberationists Taking Slow, Cautious Road In Spain

By TONY NAVARRO

MADRID (UPI) — Women's liberation is tip-toeing into Spain, a country of deep-rooted traditions of unequality between the sexes.

The road chosen by Spain's women liberationists is a slow and cautious one. They talk kindly of men. All they seek is equality for women by changing Spain's antiquated civil laws.

THEY WANT to win the Spanish housewife such freedoms as being able to open a bank account, start a business or accept an inheritance without her husband's written and duly witnessed consent.

In short, they want to change a principle which is unequivocally expressed in the Spanish Civil Code: "The husband must protect his wife and the wife must obey her husband."

A chic, strong-willed widow in her fifties is the leader of Spain's version of women's liberation. Maria Telo Nunez is a lawyer, civil rights specialist and president of the newly created "Spanish Association of Women Jurists" which has taken the lead in the fight for revision of laws which make Spanish women second-class citizens.

FIGHTING FOR the liberation of Spanish women means trying to bring our laws up to date so they conform with reality," Mrs. Telo said.

"Our present laws limit a Spanish woman to a point where she suppresses her personality. She always has to be represented by her husband."

The experiences of Spanish women illustrate Mrs. Telo's campaign.

"Our situation is absurd," said Laura Vazquez, wife of a civil engineer. "When I was single, I put some money into a savings account. Since I'm married, I have to get my husband's written consent if I want to withdraw some of that money."

SINGLE WOMEN are relatively free under Spanish law, even though the age of consent is 23, and an unwritten law demands that they be home by 11 p.m. Things really get bad once a woman gets married. From that day on, her husband's "licencia marital" (consent) begins to play an all-important role in her life.

"HOW IS it possible," Mrs. Telo asked, "that the principle of marital consent, which was imposed on us in Napoleonic times, could survive in Spain? Among civilized nations, only Turkey has a similar situation."

Mrs. Telo plans to continue her fight from her desk and not in rallies or in the streets.

But still, there is some sort of demonstration of women's liberation in the streets of Madrid and Seville —the first traffic policewomen have made their appearance.

MR. AND MRS. MARIO A. MEDEIROS
Married in Novato church

(Makela photo)

Mario Medeiros And Debbie Harter United

Debbie Susan Harter of Novato and Mario Anthony Medeiros of San Rafael were married last Saturday at Our Lady of Loretto Church in Novato.

A reception followed at the Novato Community House.

Matron of honor for her sister was Mrs. Edward Schaefer of San Rafael. Bridesmaids were Linda and Patty Harter, the bride's sisters; Nancy Zitella; Diana Perron; and Diane Davis, all of Novato.

Rick Medeiros of Sonoma was best man, and guests were ushered to their seats by the bride's brother Craig Harter, Dennis Chase, Butch Phillips, Ed Sears and Raymond Medeiros, all of Novato.

Following a wedding trip to Carmel the couple will live in San Rafael.

Debbie is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William F. Harter of Novato. She was graduated from Novato High School and attended College of Marin. Bill Harter is also her brother, and she is the granddaughter of Mr. and Mrs. Francis Harter of Daly City. The bride is employed by Western Title Insurance Company in San Rafael.

Mario is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Medeiros of Novato. He is also a graduate of Novato High School and is employed at the Chevron Station in Belvedere.

Sausalitans Repeat Vows At Sea

A wedding at sea last Sunday joined in marriage Linda Sue Carrico and Robert Martin Ellwanger, both of Sausalito.

The unusual ceremony was performed about 26 miles off the San Francisco coast by Capt. James Cannon aboard the boat he owns and where he lives. Maid of honor was Cheryl Penny of Mill Valley, and best man was Marshall Still of San Francisco.

The reception was held after the ceremony at Muir Beach, and the couple flew this week to Hong Kong for a week's honeymoon. In January they plan an around-the-world voyage on a boat they have built. They will live in Sausalito.

The bride, who is the daughter of Mrs. Benjamin Carrico of Pueblo, Colo., attended the University of Colorado and is a hostess with Pan American World Airways. She is the sister of Mrs. Bill Young and Dr. James Swanson of Pueblo and Mrs. Kenneth Ruff of Colorado Springs.

The bridegroom, who is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence Ellwanger of Rochester, N.Y., was graduated from the University of Rochester and is a free lance commercial artist in advertising. He is the brother of Kenneth, Mark, Jeff and Rick Ellwanger of Pueblo.

Parolee Help Suggested By First Lady

Mrs. Richard M. Nixon has suggested that recidivism among paroled prisoners might be decreased by having some parolees assigned to volunteer workers instead of parole officers.

In a Reader's Digest article from the book "People Helping People" Mrs. Nixon suggested that a volunteer could befriend a parolee and talk things out with him, help him find a job and transportation.

Volunteer service has been a special concern of the First Lady, and she gave high praise to young people who volunteer in tutoring, recreation, care for the aged, the mentally retarded, the prisons and courts.

ON THE AGENDA

Corte Madera Women's Club To Mark Anniversary With Bazaar

Marking the club's 65th anniversary, the Corte Madera Women's Club has chosen "Gaslights" as the theme for its annual bazaar to be held Tuesday at the Corte Madera Recreation Center.

The gaslight theme was chosen to honor founding members of the club whose first major project was the installation of 51 electric street lights to replace the gaslights used in the town.

The sale will open at 10 a.m. and lunch will be served from 11 a.m. to 1:30 p.m. Featured items will be Christmas decorations, hand sewn aprons, bakery goods, plants, needlework and a selection of gift items.

Proceeds from the luncheon and sale will go toward support of the recreation center.

A sneak preview of the sale will be held Monday night for the Corte Madera Lions Club and their wives from 7 to 9 p.m.

COUNTY CLERK George Gnoss will speak at the meeting Wednesday of the Marin County Legal Secretaries Association at Tiburon Lodge. A social hour will begin at 5:30 p.m. with dinner scheduled at 6:30 p.m. Reservations and program chairman is Jane Swall.

A short business meeting will follow the talk to discuss the Legal Secretaries board of governors meeting to be held this month in Visalia.

A LUNCHEON and fashion show will be held by the Marin County Alumnae of Alpha Omicron Pi at 11:30 a.m. Tuesday at Tiburon Tommie's restaurant. The event will be a benefit for the Endowed Bed Fund at Ross General Hospital.

The Ross Hospital Volunteers will assist the alumnae and the Marin Mannequin League members will model the clothes. Models will be Mmes. Fred Paolini, David Stewart, Fred Dutch, Arthur Schumacher and Yeta Wright.

Chairmen are alumnae president Mrs. Ruth Ann Windsor Cantel, Mrs. Gordon A. Phillips and Mrs. Roderick McKenzie. Mrs. Phillips is reservations chairman.

THE ANNUAL membership meeting of the Marin County Chapter of the Kidney Foundation of Northern California will be held at 1363 Lincoln Avenue, San Rafael on Monday. It will begin at 7:30 p.m.

PETALUMA BRANCH, American Association of University Women will have a public meeting Wednesday at 7:30 p.m. at the United Church of Christ, Middlefield Drive.

Mrs. Ronald Simpkins, chairman, has announced an "art in action" display. Members of the Petaluma Art Association who will demonstrate skills will be Alice Hanna, quilting techniques; Mmes. Robert Daley, oil painting; David Richardson, pottery; and Dorothy Smith, dried arrangements.

Hostesses for the event are Mmes. Earl Egan, Arthur Flynn, Kenneth Golterman, Edward Witte and John Dado.

THE CLIPPED Wings will meet Tuesday night at Marin House, a home in Larkspur for six mildly retarded women and present a fashion show for the residents.

Marin House is a project of Marin Aid to Retarded Children.

Modeling for the show from the Clipped Wings group of former airline stewardesses are Mmes. Sheldon Morris of Novato, Bernard Cummins and Phillip Shivell of San Rafaal, and Victor Bacigalupi of Terra Linda.

MR. AND MRS. Donald Leisey will be honored at a reception Tuesday at 7 p.m., hosted by members of the San Rafael Council Parent-Teacher Association and the San Rafael Board of Education, at the San Rafael City Schools administration building.

Mr. Leisey is the new business manager for the San Rafael City Schools.

Chairman of the reception are Mrs. Ronald Horne and Morton Rothman.

TAMAL REBEKAH Lodge 393 will have a public hot dish and salad luncheon Tuesday at Odd Fellows Temple in San Rafael from 11:30 a.m. to 1:30 p.m. During the luncheon the members will also have a bazaar, bake sale and plant table.

Chairman of the day is Mrs. Ada Earwood.

CHRISTMAS DECORATION and gift ideas will be presented by Gordon Baker Lloyd for the San Rafael Improvement Club at 1:30 p.m. Tuesday at the clubhouse in San Rafael. One section of his show and demonstration will be on making holiday gifts.

A tea will be held after the program.

A MODEL MEETING will be held by Omicron Alpha Chapter of Beta Sigma Phi at 8 p.m. Tuesday at the home of Mrs. Bevan Robinson in San Rafael. Scrapbooks and other mementos of the chapter will be displayed. New pledges to be welcomed are Mmes. Thomas Cefalu, Robert Davis, Thomas Lyons, James Murphy and Robert Trost.

A BRIDGE AND card party will be held by the Central Marin Welcome Wagon Club at 10 a.m. Tuesday at Peacock Gap Country Club. The meeting will also include nominations for new officers.

Party chairmen are Mmes. Carlton Zimmer and Kingston Ebner. Reservations chairmen are Mmes. Raymond Maroney and Robert O'Brien.

THE GENERATION RAP

by Helen and Sue Bottel

Just Remind Your Ex-Girl She's Ruining Herself When She Talks

DEAR SUE AND HELEN:

I was horsing around with the gang one night and pretended to hypnotize my best friend, who was in on the joke. We pulled it off, and everybody thought I could do it.

I wouldn't ever try again because I know I can't, but I tell people it is because hypnotism is dangerous unless it's done by a trained expert.

Well, there's a girl I dated for a couple of months but she was getting too serious so I broke up with her. She was pretty mad and called me a lot of names.

Now she's spread it around that I hypnotized her and got her to do anything I wanted and that's why she dropped me. Every day she remembers another wild detail, so I hear. Actually I never touched the girl that way — which is one of the reason she's mad at me.

Several girls lately have turned me down when I've asked them out. This never happened before, so maybe they really believe her!

My problem is do I lose face and tell the gang that I can't hypnotize anybody — and prove it — or how do I shut this girl up? — NO SVENGALI

P.S. What if I tried to prove I couldn't hypnotize — and found out I really could?

DEAR NO:

Why don't you remind the girl that by trying to mess up your reputation, she's ruining her own? And, if she doesn't shut up plus take it all back, you'll be forced to tell the kids the truth — and you can prove it!

Usually a girl won't risk having it known that she threw herself at a guy who ducked. — SUE

DEAR NO SVENGALI:

You might also tell her there's a big gap in her story: People under hypnosis don't remember what they did. Tell her, too, that most everyone still believes — though it's not always true — a hypnotized person won't go against her basic standards, so the more she builds up those wild stories, the harder she'll have to look for a guy who is not going to take her out for all he can get. — HELEN

P.S. Don't try any more hypnotics. You just might connect, and it could be dangerous.

DEAR "RAP":

Is it abnormal for me to turn off on a guy who smokes? Whenever I find out a fellow I admire is a cigarette smoker, I get disinterested. My friends and my Dad smoke, and I don't hate them. But I've got a real hangup about dating a smoker.

There's this really great kid, and I know he's going to ask me out but if he lights up in the car, I'll probably get sick. Should I see a doctor about this? — MIXED UP SANDY

DEAR SANDY:

Why not tell the fella you're allergic to cigarette smoke? Then, if he asks you out, he should be thoughtful enough not to smoke in the car. Maybe you really are allergic, which would mean it isn't a hang-up but a medical problem. — SUE.

DEAR SANDY:

You didn't say, but I'll bet part of your turn-off is aversion to cigarette-breath, especially on someone who might kiss you.

When this great guy finds out you're allergic — and if he likes you enough — he may just kick the habit. Good luck! — HELEN

SALLY ANN GILLESPIE
Plans May 7 wedding

Wedding In Spring Is Planned

Mr. and Mrs. Martin V. Gillespie of Fairfax announce the engagement of their daughter Sally Ann to Kenneth Robert Andrews. The future bridegroom's parents are Mr. and Mrs. Robert Andrews of San Rafael.

Sally and Kenneth plan to be married on May 7.

The future bride is the sister of Linda Gillespie of Terra Linda, Ronald Gillespie in Vietnam and Walter Gillespie of Fairfax. She is a graduate of Sir Francis Drake High School and is employed by Ways and Means in San Rafael.

Mary Andrews is the future bridegroom's sister, and he is the grandson of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Metten of San Anselmo. A graduate of San Rafael High School, he attends College of Marin and is employed by Duffy Brothers in San Rafael.

Alumni Brunch

Local alumni of Yale and Princeton will get together Nov. 13 at 10 a.m. in Berkeley to have brunch and listen to the broadcast of the Yale-Princeton football game. The game will be broadcast over private telephone circuits. The event will be held at His Lordship's restaurant on the Berkeley Marina. Proceeds will go to the schools' scholarship funds.

Engagement Of Petaluman Announced

The engagement of Terri Molinoli of Petaluma to Kenneth Pounds has been announced.

The bride-elect is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joe Molinoli of Petaluma and Kenneth is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Ray Pounds of Novato.

Both are graduates of Petaluma High School, and Terri attended Santa Rosa Junior College. She is employed in a doctor's office in Petaluma. She is the sister of Sue and Tony Molinoli of Petaluma.

Kenneth was graduated from Santa Rosa Junior College and the University of California and is employed as a sales representative for the George A. Hormel Co.

The couple will be married next summer.

Vegetables Are Easy To Grow In The Kitchen

Vegetables can be grown as well as cooked in the kitchen. The ideal containers are clay flower pots, which should be scrubbed and soaked with water before covering the drain holes with pottery or screening to hold the soil.

Add a cushion of potting mix, set the plant on it and fill around with more soil.

Cherry tomatoes will thrive in a kitchen if they are planted in a hanging pot, since they grow horizontally and hang down with the weight of the full crop.

Plant a husky, established tomato plant in a 12-inch pot; leave an inch and a half rim free for water; provide a porous, rich soil. Feed only twice — once three weeks after potting, then again three weeks later. Dust occasionally with fungicide and insecticide before fruit ripens, and water frequently.

The Bodyshirt Is Top Fashion Item

The bodyshirt is one of the ideal answers for a top to be worn with pants or skirts because the snap fasteners at the crotch prevent the shirt from gapping and coming out, according to Women's Wear Daily.

Also called the jumpshirt and the crotchshirt, the tops are ideal to wear with the low waistband pants being offered for spring.

Polyester Is Fastest Growing Fiber In The Textile Industry

By EUNICE FARMER

Because so many of you have been confused about the words Dacron, Trevira and polyester, I hope to clear up all of your letters with one answer.

Polyester is a generic classification for a type of man-made fiber. It is used for wearing apparel, yard goods, carpets, draperies and sheets as well as for many commercial applications. Polyester is the fastest growing fiber in the textile industry.

Wool is the generic classification for the natural fiber from the sheep's back; cotton and flax are natural fibers. Today we are seeing more and more of these natural fibers blended with the man-made fibers to utilize the best advantages of each.

Some of the most frequently seen names in polyesters are Dacron by DuPont, Kodel by Eastman, Trevira by Hystron and Fortrel by Celanese. These names all belong to the polyester family but are manufactured by different companies. I would suggest you keep this column as a reference to avoid further misunderstandings when it comes to polyesters.

MRS. SUNNY Schriefer of San Diego is this week's Tailor Trix pressing board winner for her sewing suggestion:

"I keep a piece of felt approximately 14 inches square in the top drawer of my sewing machine. Whenever I start to sew, I place it right on the sewing machine counter. It's perfect to place my shears on, pins won't roll off, needles can be stuck into it. In other words, everything stays put, including buttons, hooks and eyes, bobbins, zipper foot or anything that pertains to my sewing, and it's ready when needed. This has been very practical for me, and I never think about sewing without automatically reaching for my square of felt."

DEAR EUNICE,

I sent a lovely knit dress to the cleaners and apparently when they pressed the hem they stretched it, now it's uneven and almost flared at the hemline. Can I do anything about this?

MRS. L.M.J.

DEAR MRS. L.M.J.,

If this were a ribbed knit, it is very easy to find the hemline stretched in places. I would suggest sewing a line of stitches by hand just inside the hemline's edge and gently pulling it up slightly to keep the rib-knit even. Don't pull the thread too tight or it will look drawn up.

Place the skirt on your pressing board, wrong side out, pat it into shape and hold the steam iron above it. As it is moistened, again pat it into shape. If you have a pounding block, this works nicely instead of using your hand, or use the flat, wooden area of your Tailor Trix pressing board.

DEAR EUNICE,

Last year I made an imitation leather coat from a vinyl type fabric and found it very serviceable. However, the edges of the coat seemed to crack and split. Was this because the fabric was so stiff? If so, is there anything I can do to avoid this happening on the coat I am presently planning?

MRS. M.B.

DEAR MRS. M.B.,

The stiffness of the fabric does have some effect on the edges of your garment. I have found that when you top-stitch these outer edges with two rows of machine stitching, one row about 1/2 inch from the outer edge, the second row as close as possible to the edge, it not only creates a tailored, finished effect, but seems to prevent the cracking. I have also checked on the expensive ready-made garments of this type and found that some of the manufacturers have also done this.

If you would like to make your own frog closings and Chinese ball buttons, complete instructions on how to make them are given in the booklet "Spaghetti Straps and Rope Belts." To obtain your booklet send 10 cents and a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope with your request for it to Eunice Farmer in care of the Independent-Journal.

Vows Are Repeated In San Rafael

Bernadine Joyce Connell and Robert Ernest Durenberger Jr., both of San Rafael, were married last Saturday at St. Raphael's Catholic Church in San Rafael.

Parents of the bride are Mr. and Mrs. Daniel L. Connell of San Rafael, and the bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Durenberger of Cotati.

Matron of honor was Jeanne Dallara MacArthur of San Rafael, and bridesmaids were Cindy and Kathy Connell, the bride's sisters; Ann Durenberger, the bridegroom's sister; and Carol Ann Hutton of West Covina.

Jerome Durenberger was best man, and Richard Galassi and John Michael Burns of San Anselmo and Donald MacArthur of San Rafael ushered.

Following a wedding trip to Maui, Hawaii, the couple will live in San Rafael.

The bride is a graduate of Terra Linda High School and is the secretary to the sales director of the Sheraton Palace Hotel in San Francisco.

Robert was graduated from San Rafael High School and attended College of Marin. He is employed by Cooper Brothers Plumbing in San Francisco. John Durenberger is also his brother.

NO ACTION, THOUGH

Vocal Support For Road-Ramp Meters

The City-County Planning Council of Marin has voiced support but taken no action on a state proposal to regulate freeway traffic by installing signals at on-ramps.

Sol Silver, chief of the county planning department's advance planning section, said the council may take formal action at a later meeting.

As proposed by the state division of highways, the so-called ramp metering would regulate the flow of cars entering Highway 101, depending on highway congestion.

The traffic signals would cause cars to wait on ramps and city streets instead of adding congestion. Under the signalization proposal, preferential treatment could be given mass transit busses.

In other action, the council supported a recommendation by county supervisors for a recreational travel study at Point Reyes National Seashore.

The supervisors have proposed that an internal and external rapid transit system be used and that eventually all private autos be prohibited from inside the park.

Criminal Complaint On Dividing Parcel Of Land

A criminal complaint has been filed in West Marin Justice Court alleging that developer Douglas G. Adams illegally divided a parcel of property near Inverness.

The complaint, filed by the Marin County Counsel's office, charges Adams, son of real estate man David S. Adams, with dividing and selling a 10-acre lot from a larger parcel adjoining the Paradise Ranch estate development.

Adams's action, taken in April but only discovered by county public works officials last month, violates the county's land division ordinance, Asst. County Counsel Joseph A. Forest said yesterday.

He said the maximum penalty is a $500 fine or a six-month jail sentence.

The complaint was filed last Friday and will be heard Wednesday.

Holiday Recipes Switched, Two Listed In Error

The Independent-Journal Holiday Cook Book, containing the 25 award winning holiday recipes, was in error designating recipes for fruit cake and hoska Czechoslovakian bread as contest winners.

Recipes for French coffee cake submitted by Mrs. Frank Biare and potato chip cookies by Etha I. Webster, both of San Rafael, were contest winners but were not designated as such in the special edition.

Headlines on recipes for Festive Cinnamon Candy Salad and Cheese Puffs, both award winning recipes, were inadvertently switched.

Guilty Plea, In Assault

Gregory Grant Orr, 21, of Terra Linda, has pleaded guilty in Marin Superior Court to a charge of statutory rape.

He is to be sentenced Monday.

Following his plea, two other rape charges stemming from the incident were dismissed at the request of the district attorney's office.

Orr was accused of raping a 15-year-old San Rafael girl in an automobile March 24 off Smith Ranch Road near Santa Venetia.

Dozen Alsatians Die In Airplane

BANGKOK (UPI)—A dozen pedigree Alsatian dogs died of lack of oxygen on a cargo plane delivering them to Bangkok police from Germany, police reported today.

Eight other dogs in the shipment survived the trip.

State Aid For Water Tightened

SACRAMENTO (UPI) —The California Water Commission Friday tightened requirements governing state grants and loans for local water projects because available money is running short.

The commission approved a proposal giving preferential consideration to local governments and agencies needing help in financing only water projects required "for the protection of public health and safety."

The State Water Project program, administered by the commission, provided loans and grants not only for development of local domestic and irrigation water resources but also for recreational and fish and wildlife enhancement.

Californians in 1960 approved $130 million for loans and grants under the act which authorized the sale of $1.75 billion in bonds for construction of the State Water Project.

Loans and grants totaling $90 million already have been approved and there are applications totaling more than $40 million pending with the state Water Resources Department.

Under the new commission policy, grants and loans totaling more than $15 million requested for two Southern California projects would be discouraged.

Commission officials said the change in requirements would make $5 million available for loans and grants, including those requested for badly needed domestic water projects at Montague in Siskiyou County and Blue Lake in Humboldt County.

Cereal Prober Happier Now

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn. (UPI) —Robert B. Choate said Thursday cereal manufacturers are putting out a better product than they were 15 months ago when he told a Senate subcommittee 40 to 60 of the nation's top-selling breakfast cereals were almost worthless ktritionally.

Choate said 45 of the cereals have been at least modestly improved and Cheerios and Wheaties are "much improved."

Still on Choate's bad list are Kellogg's Corn Flakes and Rice Krispies, and General Mills Lucky Charms, Cocoa Puffs, Frosty O's, Kix and Trix.

Hearing Ends For Professor

STANFORD (UPI) — Marxist-Maoist H. Bruce Franklin made his final argument Friday as to why he shouldn't be fired from his tenured post as a Stanford University associate professor on charges of inciting students to violence.

During six weeks of almost unprecedented hearings, Franklin said no evidence had been established that his speeches directly caused the violence involved.

He also said his words were free speech protected by the First Amendment. In any case, the young specialist on Herman Melville, said University regulations are too vague to conclude that he had violated them.

Franklin, 37, is accused by Stanford President Richard W. Lyman of urging students to occupy the university computer center Feb. 10 and or urging them to resist the police. Twelve persons were arrested, and afterwards several student conservatives were beaten and two wounded by gunfire.

Another specific charge is that Franklin participated Jan. 11 in heckling and chanting which prevented former Ambassador Henry Cabot Lodge from concluding a speech.

Raymond Fisher, an attorney for the administration, said in his closing arguments Thursday that the university can't tolerate "a person who deliberately provokes the use of force or violence to achieve his goals."

Fisher said Franklin, a faculty member since 1961, should be fired because he gave no evidence that "his behavior in the future will be different."

The hearings have little precedent in U. S. academic history for their scope and careful re-thinking of free speech issues.

No Action On Prison Complaint

An attorney for the San Quentin chapter of the California Correctional Officers Association (CCOA) has been told by the state Department of Industrial Relations that it will not act on a complaint about unsafe working conditions at the facility.

This summer, prior to the Aug. 21 escape attempt at the prison, the association filed a 15-page complaint with the department listing 64 instances of allegedly unsafe working conditions.

Jack F. Hatton of the department of industrial relations said a letter was mailed Tuesday to William Heekin of Carmichael, attorney for the CCOA. The letter said the department felt it had no jurisdiction in the complaint. Hatton said the matter of prison safety was now being handled by other public agencies.

CCOA spokesmen said they would discuss the letter at an association meeting in Sacramento, Monday, indicating appeal steps would be taken.

Prostitutes Used In Drug Experiment

CARSON CITY, Nev. (UPI)— An experiment using prostitutes to test a new drug for use against venereal disease will probably end in December, according to state health officer Dr. John Carr.

HEARING TEST SET FOR SAN RAFAEL, CALIFORNIA

Electronic hearing tests will be given at 1435 Fourth St., San Rafael, November 8 thru 15th by Hearing Aid Specialist Joe H. Woods.

Anyone who has trouble hearing or understanding is welcome to come in for a test using the latest electronic equipment to determine his or her particular degree of hearing loss. Diagrams showing how the ear works and some of the causes of hearing loss will be available.

Everyone should have a hearing test at lease once a year if he has any trouble at all hearing clearly. Even people now wearing a hearing aid or those who have been told an aid won't help should have a hearing test and find out about the very latest hearing aids.

IF YOU CAN'T COME IN CALL OR WRITE BELTONE OF MARIN, 1435 FOURTH ST. 94901 (457-1144) (Parking off E Street in Redwood Bank Parking Lot.

HOMEOWNERS'

SOOTHE YOUR TAX BITE

Your tax bite may be getting bigger all the time. But if you own a home or property, you can protect your investment by borrowing on it to pay those painful tax bills.

Because with your equity — that's the difference between the value of your home or property and the amount you owe on it — you can arrange to borrow from $1,000 to $10,000 or more through Union Home Loans. With flexible payments you can handle easily.

How much you can borrow depends on your current equity. So to soothe that tax bite — or for any reason — call Union Home Loans and ask about arranging to borrow that extra money you need on your very own home or property. Do it today.

Child Welfare Plan Criticized

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — Assembly Ways and Means Chairman Willie L. Brown Jr. says "not one dime" of the $18 million provided in the new welfare reform law for day care programs has been spent on children.

The San Francisco Democrat made the statement Thursday in accusing the state Social Welfare Department of "bungling" the administration of day care program funds and proposing to illegally spend the money.

"While the administration's social planning plutocrats blindly wend their slow way through their self-manufactured bureaucratic maze," Brown said, "children are not helped, parents cannot accept employment and the taxpayers are being bilked."

Birth Pills Bring Lawsuit

PITTSBURGH (UPI)—A former Miss America is suing a major pharmaceutical manufacturer, charging that its birth control pills caused her to suffer a stroke a year ago.

Jacquelyn Mayer Townsend, 28, Miss America 1963, who now lives with her husband, John, in Washington, Pa., filed suit Thursday in U.S. District court here, seeking damages of more than $10,000.

Named as defendants and accused of manufacturing an unsafe product were Ortho Pharmaceutical Corp.,, and its parent company, Johnson & Johnson, Inc.

Mrs. Townsend, mother of two, contended she suffered a cerebral vascular stroke Nov. 27, 1970, and was hospitalized, as a direct result of taking the pills.

Crop Fluoride Levels Accepted

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — Fluoride residues on crops in the Santa Clara and Salinas Valleys are well within tolerable levels, according to the State Department of Agriculture.

A spokesman said Thursday that samples of the crops recently were analyzed in the department's Sacramento laboratories and found to be free from harmful levels of fluorides.

The survey confirmed the findings in a special investigation conducted last year after a private laboratory reported that some raspberries in the San Jose area contained nearly four times the acceptable levels.

Japan Train Crashes — But No Injuries

YOKOHAMA, Japan (UPI)—Japan's fastest train hit a pile of logs at 126 miles an hour today but there were no injuries in what police termed an attempt to wreck the Tokyo-Yokohama express.

The streamlined blue and cream-colored Kodama 222, popularly known as the bullet, sustained no damage. Railway officials said it was the 47th attempt to sabotage the bullet trains since they went into operation in 1964. None of the attempts has been successful.

HOW TO PLAY

WINNING BRIDGE

By ALFRED SHEINWOLD

West's Lead Is Correct, But It Gives South Game In Spades

Bridge is a very scientific game, and the skillful player will surely win in the long run. But, and a very big but, there are still pockets of luck. The opening lead, for example, is probably one part luck to every two parts of skill. Today's hand tells the story.

South	West	North	East
1 ♠	Pass	2 ♠	Pass
4 ♠	All Pass

Opening lead — ♣ J

APPROVED PLAN

West opens the jack of clubs, poor fellow, because the lead from a sequence of honors is approved by all the experts. But this lead allows South to make the contract.

It's true that the average declarer would go down anyway. He would draw trumps and lead hearts, hoping to find either the queen or ace of hearts in the West hand. About four minutes later, South would be down one, losing three hearts and a diamond.

The skillful declarer wins the ace of clubs, draws two rounds of trumps, cashes the king of clubs and ruffs a club. Then he leads out the top diamonds and a third diamond, allowing the defenders to take the trick where they like.

BEST DEFENSE

The best defense is for West to win the third round of diamonds in order to lead the nine of hearts through dummy. Declarer covers with dummy's jack, and East wins with the queen. But now East cannot get out of the lead safely. If East leads a heart, dummy's king will win a trick; and if East leads anything else, dummy can ruff while South discards a heart.

Now let's get back to the opening lead. Westcan defeat the contract by leading a heart. East wins as cheaply as possible and gets out with any safe play (such as the ten of diamonds).

SAME LINE

South goes through the same line of play as described earlier, but West wins the third diamond and leads another heart to give his partner two more heart tricks.

There is no way for West to know that a heart lead is best in such hands; and that's why bridge is not 100 per cent scientific.

DAILY QUESTION

As dealer, you hold:
♠ - A K J 10 5
♥ - 7 4 3
♦ - A K 4
♣ - A 5.
What do you say?

ANSWER: Bid one spade.

The hand is not quite worth a forcing opening bid. You would bid two spades (forcing to game) if the jack of spades were the queen or if you had a sixth spade in the place of any low side card.

Aniversary

The Baha'i Communities of Marin will observe the 154th birth of Baha'u'llah, prophet-founder of the Baha'i Faith next Friday with a 7:30 p.m. service at the San Geronimo Valley Art Center on Sir Francis Drake Boulevard.

Plea Made On Burglary Count

Bruce David Morawe, 28, of no known address, has pleaded innocent in Marin Municipal Court to a charge of burglary.

Preliminary hearing was set for Nov. 16.

Morawe was arrested Sunday after a man was seen leaving the residence of Patricia R. Swedenborg of 365 Lovell Avenue, Mill Valley. Morawe was stopped as he drove east on Miller Avenue and police said they found a billfold with $17 taken from the residence in Morawe's car.

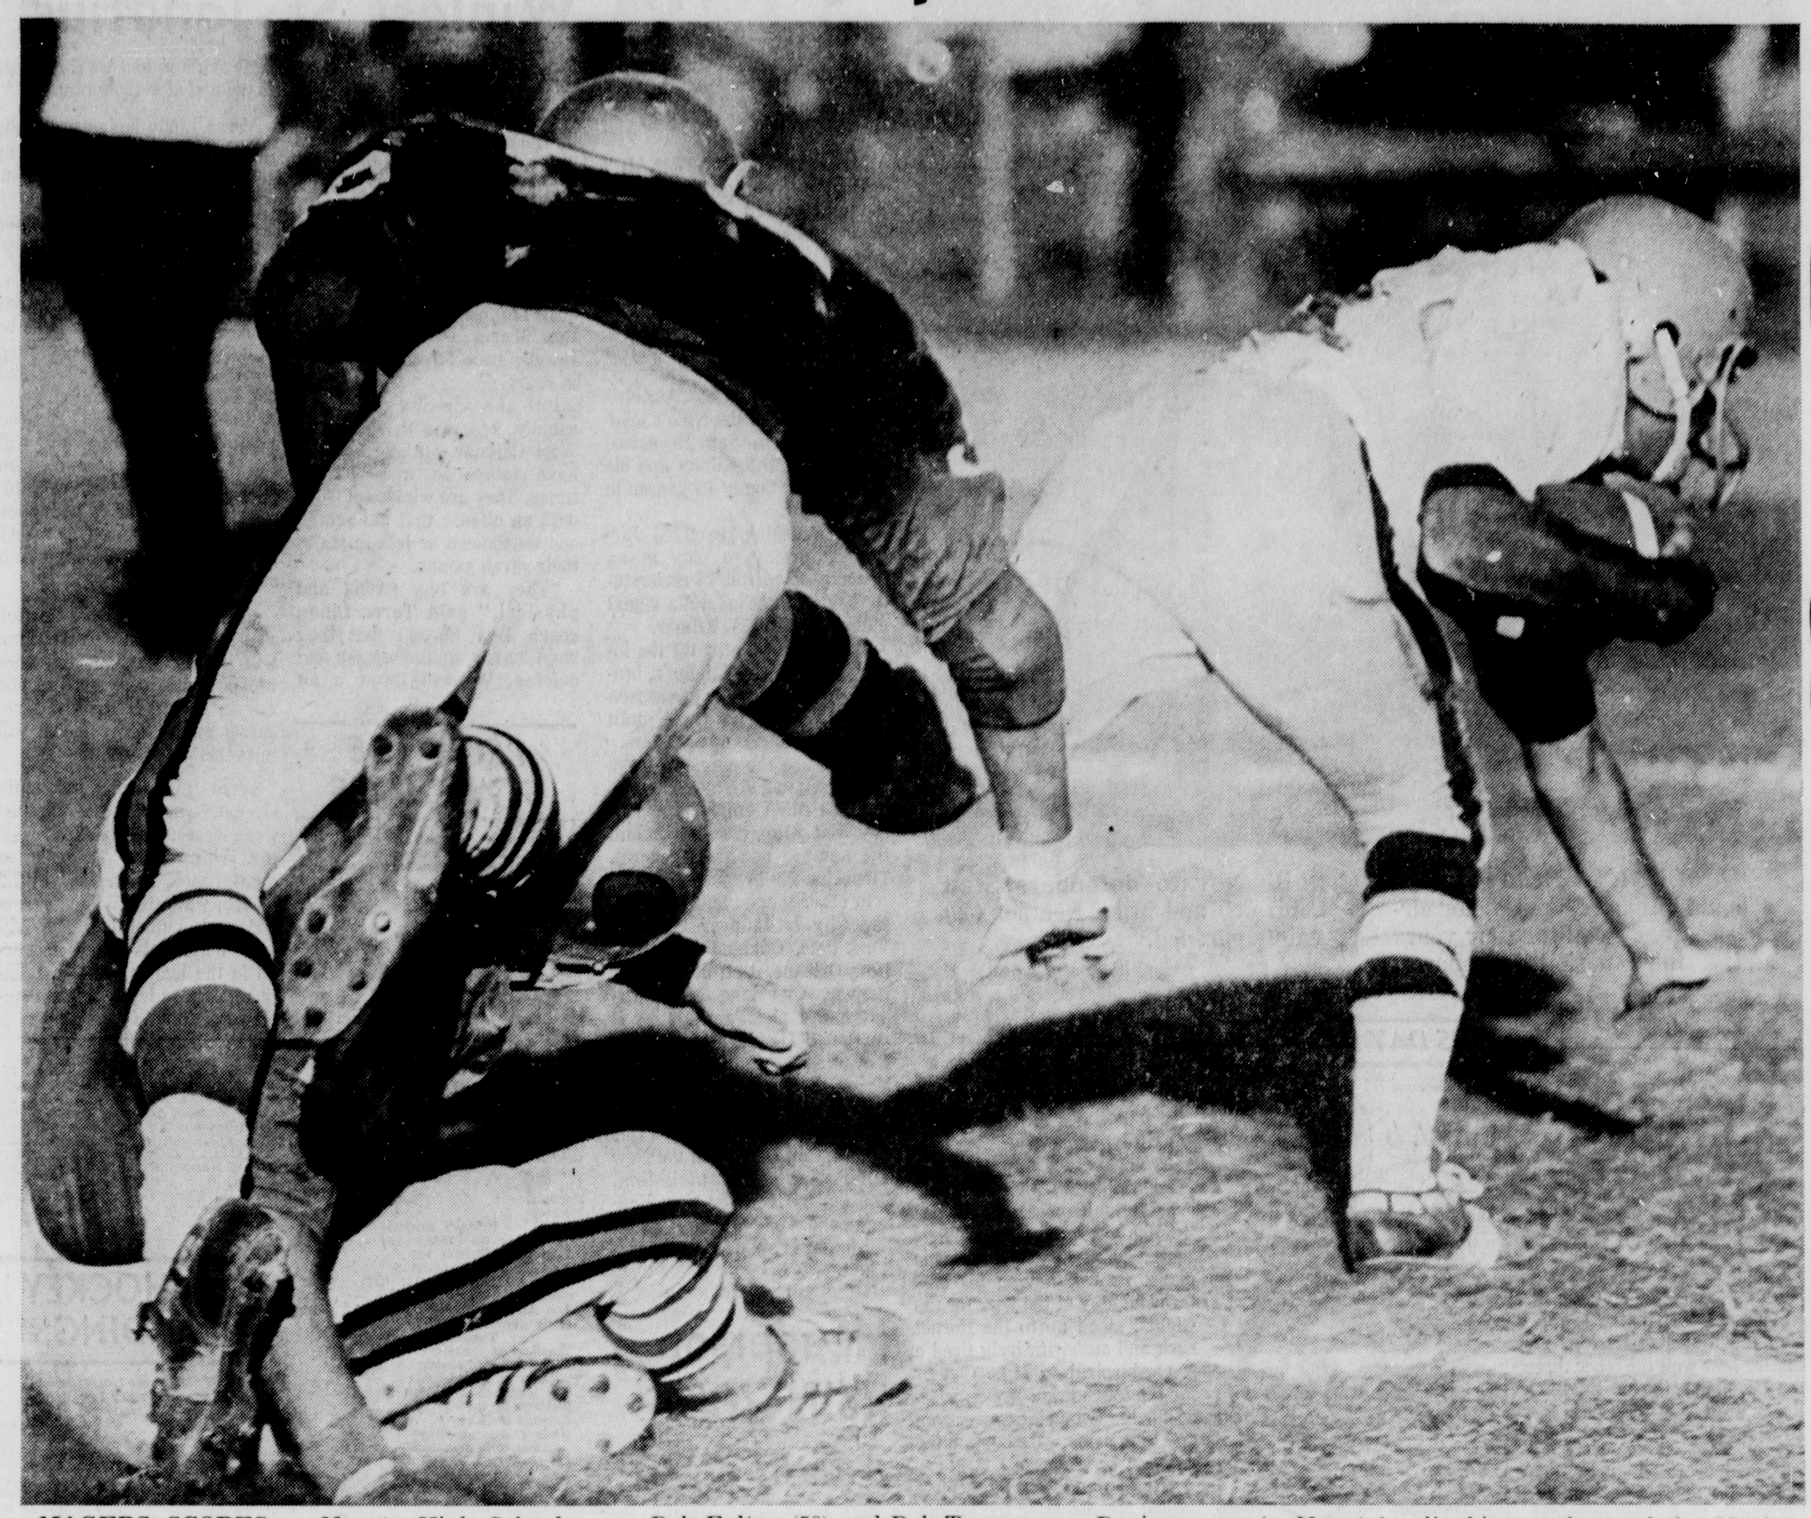
Novato Clinches Prep Grid Title With 21-15 Victory



MAGERS SCORES — Novato High School halfback Leo Magers culminated an eight-play, 89-yard drive, with a five-yard bust past falling Redwood High School linebacker Bob Fulton (50) and Bob Troppmann. During this strictly ground assault in the third period, Magers maneuvered for 41 yards in four thrusts. This sequence was instrumental in Novato's clinching a share of the Marin County Athletic League football crown with its 21-15 decision over Redwood in Larkspur yesterday. Magers, Moroski Lead Hornets Past Redwood

By PAUL CANE

Featuring brilliant individual performances by Leo Magers and Marty Moroski among a cast of thousands, Novato High School clinched a tie for the Marin County Athletic League football title yesterday, with a physically bruising 21-15 triumph over Redwood High.

The win gave Novato a perfect 5-0 league mark with one game left, against San Rafael (4-1) next Saturday. The Bulldogs, 57-0 winners over Drake yesterday, will need a win to get a share of the title.

Magers swept for 93 net yards and two touchdowns while Moroski connected on nearly 70 per cent of his passes and another touchdown, as the visiting Hornets eliminated Redwood from MCAL title contention.

Novato coach Al Scott said "Magers had one of his greatest games in three years," and "Moroski is tough. It's great to have a quarterback like that."

Defeated coach Phil Roark concurred in his appraisal of the two Hornet standouts, and expecially lauded Moroski; "As far as I'm concerned, he's the all-league quarterback."

The 6-3 senior signal caller clicked on five straight passes in a first period 64-yard march for the game's initial touchdown. Joe Powell caught the scoring lob, which really was a lob over the defenders' heads in the far corner of the end zone for 7-0.

"It was a super catch," Scott exulted following the win. The Hornet mentor also heaped praise on the vanquished Giants; "They are really big, they come at you and hit." He said he couldn't believe the transformation from the 1-8 team of last year to 1971's title contender. "I've got to hand it to the coaching staff and kids at Redwood, they came back and had a great season."

But not quite great enough. Novato gave up the passing attack temporarily in the third period, and moved 89 yards in eight rushing plays for 14-0, with less than six minutes remaining in the quarter. Magers, with jersey ripped and torn from rough handling, car-

Powerful San Rafael Crushes Drake, 57-0

By RON LENT

San Rafael High School has possibly the most explosive offensive machine in the Marin County Athletic League. Just ask Drake.

The Bulldogs ably prove it by trouncing the visiting Pirates, 57-0, last night.

"I guess we've been running fairly well lately," Bulldog coach Bob Muster understated following the homecoming football game on San Rafael High's field.

Indeed they have; the Red and White churned out five touchdowns on the ground, plus one in the air. All-League halfback Scott Duncan rambled for another four touchdowns, which included runs of 22 and 21; he added a 28-yard fumble recovery burst and an electrifying 78-yard kickoff return to start the second half.

Despite the seemingly tremendous onslaught, Muster restrained his enthusiasm, claiming "we've still got a long way to go," facing Novato next Saturday at 1:00 p.m. in quest of a share of the Hornet's newly won crown.

"I can't wait until we go to Novato next week," fans enthused on their way to the exits last night. Neither can the Bulldogs as they demonstrated intense determination for the upcoming tussle by dismantling a good Drake contingent.

"Eat 'em up," sideliners exorted shortly before the kickoff, and San Rafael did just that in the following manner.

After Drake failed to dent the Bulldog defense, San Rafael tallied the first time it touched the ball, parading 58 yards in eight attempts. Duncan culminated the effort, going 22 yards around end with a quick pitch.

The underrrated San Rafael defense promptly contained Drake within its 10 yard line, forcing a punt. From the Pirate 24, the Bulldogs launched another six-point-producing sequence with Duncan going in again from 21 yards away. On this play, Duncan spun through the line, broke through two would-be tacklers and darted unmolested the rest of the way.

Two plays later, the Bulldog defense recovered a Drake fumble on the invader's 27. Three plays and 11 yards hence, fullback Mark Farrar blasted over, ending the 20-point San Rafael opening quarter bombardment.

The shell-shocked Drake Pirates certainly were happy when the gun sounded to end the quarter. However, the shot could not stop San Rafael from notching 14 points in the next two quarters — and neither could the Pirate defense.

The Green and White defenders received little respite following Farrar's tally in the waning seconds of the first quarter, because safety Jeff White intercepted his first of two passes. After the elusive secondary standout darted and dashed some 20 yards on the final first quarter play, San Rafael took over on the Drake 40 to start the next period. The Bulldogs welcomed in the new period by unveiling its little used passing attack.

"Our boys felt bad when they read they were last in passing offense," Muster said, "so we worked on it, like we always do." The results were two tosses, two completions, and a touchdown. Quarterback Dirk Gansloser heaved a 31-yard bomb to end Duke Bessee in highlighting the drive and in so doing, serving notice that the San Rafael aerial game must be reckoned with. Bessee had to tip the throw up in the air and catch it while crashing to the earth.

Gansloser hit tight end Mike Sinclair with a nine-yard scoring pass on the next play. The hosts closed out the first half scoring with 1:35 left when Duncan scooped up a Drake fumble and roared 28 yards.

Duncan then began the second half the same way he ended the first — by making a touchdown. He took the kickoff starting the final 24 minutes of play and bolted 78 yards for his last touchdown in the cold night.

Alternate running back Paul D'Ambra scampered for the final two touchdowns, sandwiching runs of five and 34 around a Bulldog safety. Drake quarterback Jim Tang was dropped in the end zone in the latter portion of the closing period.

'Sad Sam' Jones Dies Of Cancer

MORGANTOWN, W. Va. (UPI) — Sam Jones, a hardthrowing right-hander who gained fame in the National League as a no-hit ace and a 20-game winner, died Friday night in West Virginia University hospital of cancer.

Hospital officials said the 45-year-old resident of Monongah, W. Va., was admitted to the hospital Sept. 21 but had undergone numerous treatments previously.

Jones won 21 games and lost 15 for the San Francisco Giants in 1959. He threw a no-hitter against the Pittsburgh Pirates May 12, 1955, while pitching for the Chicago Cubs.

Funeral arrangements were incomplete.

Jones, who won over 100 games in his career, also pitched for Pittsburgh, St. Louis, Detroit Baltimore and Cleveland. His two best seasons were in 1959 and 1960 when he recorded 21-14 and 18-14 records.

He retired in 1966 after spending several seasons as a player-coach with the Columbus Jets of the International League. He is survived by his wife, Mary, and two sons, Mike and Nick. and Nick.

Jones was known as "Sad Sam" and "Toothpick" during his playing days. The "Sad Sam" nickname came from the almost mournful look he always wore on his face while the "Toothpick" label came from the fact that he always pitched with a toothpick stuck between his teeth.

Jones' no-hitter, a game he called, "the best I've ever pitched" was filled with drama at the end. The Cubs led 4-0 but Jones walked the first three Pirate batters to face him in the ninth. He then needed only 12 pitches to strike out Dick Groat, Roberto Clemente and Frank Thomas for the no-hitter.

QB Dave Steele Aids San Rafael Title Clincher

San Rafael High School's freshman football team clinched a tie for the Marin County Athletic League championship by defeating Terra Linda 13-6 yesterday at San Rafael.

Quarterback Dave Steele threw a 60-yard touchdown pass and ran for a 10-yard touchdown for the winners.

San Rafael's junior varsity shut out Drake 21-0 at San Rafael.

Raiders Two TD Picks Tomorrow

NEW ORLEANS (UPI) —The Oakland Raiders may be two touchdown favorites to beat New Orleans Sunday but at least one Saint—Jim Hanifan—isn't impressed.

"All those big teams are alike," said the New Orleans middle linebacker. "They can be had. We beat Oakland pretty easy in an exhibition game in 1970 while I was with the Packers. I didn't think they were that good."

The game will be televised on Channels 3 and 4, beginning at 11 a.m.

While Hanifan beat the drums Saints coach J. D. Roberts sounded a warning call from the other side.

"The Raiders are the most aggressive team we'll play this season," said Roberts. "They do everything well and they beat you with the big play."

Roberts has named Edd Hargett to start at quarterback in place of rookie Archie Manning. Hargett took over last Sunday against Washington and barring injury he figures to go all the way this Sunday.

Manning has a pulled thigh muscle and while he worked out during the week, Roberts is reluctant to rush him back into service.

Also hurting on the New Orleans side is defensive end Richard Neal with an ankle injury.

The Raiders are relatively healthy but one "able" body who won't see action—in fact he isn't even in New Orleans— is wide receiver Eldridge Dickey.

Coach John Madden suspended Dickey Friday after the player missed practice two days running.

Madden declined to discuss Dickey's situation other than to confirm he "is off the squad and didn't make the trip to New Orleans."

Drew Buie, a member of the Raiders three years, has been activated to take Dickey's place at wide receiver. Dickey got his chance to play when regular Rod Sherman hurt an ankle two weeks ago.

Buie hasn't caught a pass this season and has only three receptions in two previous years.

"I've been waiting for a chance to start for a long time," said Buie. "Now, I have to make the most of it."

Oakland goes into Sunday's game—the first ever against New Orleans—with a 5-1-1 record in the AFC West. The Saints are 2-4-1 in the NFC West.

While New Orleans is out of the running for a division title the Raiders are tied in their division with the Kansas City Chiefs.

"Obviously, a victory means more to us than to them," said Madden, a man who never puts much stock in odds and points-preads.

Rangers Wallop Seals, 8-1

OAKLAND (UPI) —Jean Ratelle, Rod Gilbert and Vic Hadfield, pro hockey's highest scoring line, have completed a triumphant march through California.

That potent New York Ranger trio accounted for five goals and nine points Friday night in an 8-1 rout of the California Golden Seals who absorbed their worst pasting of the young season. It also was the first tarnish for the Seals to end a five-game unbeaten streak.

Wayne Carleton scored for California on a breakaway with 2:43 remaining in the second period to rob netminder Gilles Villemure of a shutout.

Ratelle, Gilbert and Bruce MacGregor each chipped in with two goals to lead the Rangers' potent attack which has piled up 56 goals in 13 games.

49er Defensive Tackles Hurting On Eve Of Game

BLOOMINGTON, Minn. (UPI) — The San Francisco 49ers hope for the best but fear the worst in their game Sunday against the Minnesota Vikings. (The game will be televised on Channels 5 and 10 beginning at 1 p.m.)

Ordinarily, they would be going into the game full of confidence but injuries to key players on their defensive unit have chilled things a bit.

Even before injury to Charlie Krueger, Earl Edwards and Stan Hindman, three of the stars on San Francisco's front four, the Vikings were three-point favorites.

Krueger is running with a pulled hamstring, Edwards has a pulled groin muscle and Hindman had fluid removed from one of his knees Wednesday.

All three are expected to play Sunday but probably at less than full speed. Any reduction in effectiveness would hurt San Francisco's chances because it has been the club's front four that has kept the 49ers in business this season. For instance, the defense has sacked opposing quarterbacks a league leading 29 times in seven games.

The good news for San Francisco is that defensive ends Cedrick Hardman and Tommy Hart are healthy.

The Vikings, too, rely a lot on their defense. That unit has allowed only 59 points in seven games. Minnesota goes into Sunday's game with a 6-1 record and the lead in the NFC central division. The 49ers are on top of the NFC west with a 5-2 mark.

While the San Francisco offense rates near the top in the 26-team NFL, Minnesota's shock troops rank 11th. But the Vikes have found ways to score enough points to win, and that's the name of the game.

Gary Cuozzo did not play last week in a 17-10 victory over the New York Giants but should be able to go against San Francisco. If he can't or is limited, then Norm Snead will take over at quarterback as he did last Sunday.

Tight end Stu Voigt has a knee injury but should be able to play. Running back Dave Osborn also has a tender knee, but he, too, should be in uniform.

Sunday's game is the first of a string of "toughies" for the 49ers, who last year defeated the Vikings in the first round of the playoffs.

San Francisco leads Los Angeles by a half game in the west while the Vikings have a full game lead on Chicago in the central.

Warriors To Face Lakers

OAKLAND (UPI)—It will be a different Los Angeles Laker team that will face the red-hot Golden State Warriors tonight at the Coliseum-Arena.

Jerry West is back off the injured list and ready to resume his popping for the Lakers who are a game behind leaders Golden State in the National Basketball Association.

West is one of the premier shooters and playmakers in the NBA. His loss was felt last Sunday when the Warriors upended the Lakers 109-105 for one of their rare victories in the Forum.

Golden State has won five in a row. Top scorer Cazzie Russell, who rode the bench for the New York Knicks last season, attributes the success to "tremendous cohesiveness."

"We're really pulling together," he said. "And not just on the court. Fritz Williams and Jeff Mullins are helping me look for a home. Everybody cares about everybody else."

The Lakers will be without Elgin Baylor who retired from the game earlier this week.

RAMOS DISQUALIFIED

Dazed Carrasco Awarded Crown

MADRID (UPI) —Spanish boxing fans reacted in stunned disbelief Friday night as a Nigerian referee saved Spain's Pedro Carrasco from an almost certain knockout by disqualifying Mando Ramos of Los Angeles for hitting below the belt in their world lightweight title fight.

The verdict gave ex-sailor Carrasco, 28, the vacant World Boxing Council (WBC) title and made him the first Spaniard to be a world champion since Jose Legra lost the featherweight crown in 1969.

The 14,000 fans never exploded into the burst of joy which usually greets Spanish sports victories. Carrasco himself was too dazed from the punishment handed out by Mexican-born Ramos in 11 rounds to fully realize that he had been proclaimed world champion.

All he gave was a weak grin. In the dressing room later he solemnly acknowledged that "the world fell on top of me" when Ramos, 22, sent him to the floor with a smart left cross in the first round for the first of four knockdowns. But he did insist he got hit below the belt and thus deserved victory.

Carrasco weighed 134 3-4 pounds and Ramos 135.

The fight was stopped by referee Samuel Odubote, a 42-year-old electrical engineer refereeing his first world title bout, as the fighters came out of their corners for the 12th of the scheduled 15 round fight in Madrid's Sports Palace.

Ramos, unmarked except for a slightly puffed left eye, looked confident and seemed to wear a cocky smile in the corner of his mouth.

With good reason —Carrasco had taken two counts of eight in the 10th round and looked groggy and wobbly-legged throughout the 11th, which he finished by slipping from a clinch to the floor. The two fighters did not trade another punch.

Odubote sent them back to their corners, and Ramos started dancing up and down laughing, obviously expecting that the referee would stop the fight to award him a technical knockout.

The smile froze on his face as the referee briefly consulted officials, then called the fighters and raised Carrasco's arm.

Ramos' manager Gene McCoy said he had "never seen anything like this."

"I knew it was tough to win a fight in Spain," he added. "I knew you had to flatten your opponent to win —but you don't even get a chance to hit him."

Odubote, upholding his judgment, said later, "Everyone could see" that Ramos hit Carrasco below the belt. "I had warned Ramos earlier in the fight," he added.

A dejected Ramos said he "can't believe it ... I had it won and knocked the Spaniard down four times.

"He was finished. I did not think he could take that much punishment. If I had won the fight the way he won it, I wouldn't feel like a champion. If he does not offer me a return fight, I'll never consider him a champ."

Ramos took control of the fight from the start. He had Carrasco on the floor in the first, in the eighth and twice for counts of eight in the 10th. At the end of the 11th Ramos wrestled the Spaniard to the floor in a corner clinch.

Carrasco's victory meant that there are two world lightweight champions —himself and Ken Buchanan of Scotland. Buchanan was stripped of his crown by the WBC earlier this year for refusing to meet Carrasco. He is still World Boxing Association (WBA) lightweight champ.

NFL ROUNDUP

QB Happy Skins Face Weak Foe

By U.P. INTERNATIONAL

Every National Football League coach should have George Allen's quarterbacking woes.

The Washington Redskins mentor faces the cellar-dwelling Philadephia Eagles tomorrow in D.C. Stadium and a happy dilemma.

The former Los Angeles Rams boss has the NKL's leading passer in San Francisco 49er castoff Bill Kilmer and his predecessor Sonny Jurgensen in reserve.

The Redskins reactived Jurgensen Friday to play in an unaccustomed role of understudy behind the Cinderella signal caller from UCLA, Kilmer.

Jurgensen, coming off the injury list after sustaining a broken shoulder in a pre-season contest, can only wait until Kilmer is banged up or falters.

These are the only two ways Jurgensen will see much action, because Allen emphasized Friday that Kilmer would remain the number one field general. The skins are 14 point favorites.

In other games Sunday, Kansas City is 14 over the New York Jets, Oakland is 14 over New Orleans, Detroit six over Denver, Cleveland and Pittsburgh are pick 'em, Dallas is six over St. Louis, Minnosota by 4 over San Francisco, Chicago is six over Green Bay and Miami 17 over Buffalo.

Also Atlanta is four over Cincinnati, San Diego and the New York Giants are pick 'em, Houston is five over New England and, on Monday night, Baltimore is six over Los Angeles.

Henderson Rolls 705 3-Game Set

Bill Henderson rolled a 705 three-game series at Country Club Bowl in San Rafael to lead Marin County bowlers last week, while Shirley Johnson's 644 at Country Club topped all women.

Henderson, a truck driver who sports a 205 average, was 12 pins ahead of Gene Helbing of Country Club. Top man at Greenbrae Lanes was Ed Henry, 685, and top men at Nave Lanes were John Doherty and Gene Vasco, 601.

Marilyn Epidendio's 626 was the top women's score at Greenbrae, and Penny Tauscher recorded a 620. Gerri Gravel's 583 was the best at Nave.

The honor roll:

COUNTRY CLUB BOWL

GREENBRAE LANES

Men — Ed Henry 685, Colin Rose 633, Jim Wade 626, Will Bettencourt 619, Tony Mendes 616. Women — Marilyn Epidendio 626, Penny Tauscher 620, Sharon Peicich 596, Nikki Perriman 596, Penny Tauscher 587. Junior — Cliff Coates 631, Mike Blum 620 and 606, Steve Coates 603.

NAVE LANES

Men — John Doherty 601, Gene Vasco 601. Women — Gerri Gravel 583, Jackie Newsom 572, Anne Gildersleeve 569, Norma Headricks 554, Mitzie Brown 543. Junior — D. Medvetz 503.

Bunning Named

PHILADELPHIA (UPI) — Former Philadelphia Phillies' pitcher Jim Bunning Friday was named manager of the club's Reading (AA) farm team in the Eastern League. Bunning, 40, retired from baseball in September.

Terra Linda Hosts Winless St. Ignatius

In a normal year, some sort of mythical Bay Area championship might have been riding on the upcoming game between Terra Linda and St. Ignatius of San Francisco. But this is not a normal year.

The two high schools meet tonight at 8 o'clock at San Rafael High's field, with the host Trojans apparently out of the Marin County Athletic League race for the first time in years.

But the visiting Wildcats, usually a power in the tough West Catholic Athletic League, have fallen on even harder times. They are winless at 0-6-1, with an offense that has scored one touchdown or less in six of their seven games.

"They are big, strong and physical," said Terra Linda coach Don Lucas, "but they have a very simple offense and defense. We will throw a lot against them and we'll gang up to try and stop their running."

Terra Linda has enough injuries to drive most coaches up the wall, but Lucas is calm. "We have good depth, and it will be a good chance for some of these kids on the second team to play," he said.

Mike Sabel is out for the year with a hip pointer, and will be replaced at split end by Rich Nicholes and at defensive end by Larry Chiaroni. Defensive halfback Jeff Leaird strained ligaments in practice and will be lost for the season, with Greg Beltran replacing him. Tim Buckley has a bad back and will be replaced at safety by Pete Corbett, although he'll still start at flanker.

Reserve safety Mike Corrick and reserve guard Mike Finn will be lost for the year with broken collarbone and pinched nerve, respectively, and reserve guard Bill Hobbs will miss this game with the flu.

Terra Linda pits its main strengths against St. Ignatius' weaknesses. The Trojans' passing, with Kevin Donohoe at quarterback, is the best in the MCAL, while the Wildcats' secondary is vulnerable. The Trojans' defense is the best overall in the league, and St. Ignatius has been less than spectacular on offense.

Terra Linda's lineups:

Terra Linda (Offense): SE Rich Nicholes, LT Steve Rowell, LG Mark Sullivan, C John Loberg, RG Brian Jordan, RT Larry Madden, RE Wes Emerson, QB Kevin Donohoe, TB Sean Casey, FB Doug Long, FLK John Buckley. (Defense): LE Emerson, LT Loberg, MG Trygg Anderson, RT Madden, RE Larry Chiaroni, LLB Jordan, RLB Steve Withers, LHB Nicholes, RHB Greg Beltran, S Pete Corbett, M Paul Berry.

NBA ROUNDUP

Bucks Tip Bulls, Keep Their Lead

By U. P. INTERNATIONAL

It's the same old story in the National Basketball Association's Midwest Division. No matter how well the other three teams play, the Milwaukee Bucks always seem to play just a little better.

The Bucks maintained their lead in the Midwest's "Suicide Division" race Friday night, bouncing back in the fourth period to defeat the Chicago Bulls 104-102. The victory left Milwaukee two games ahead of Chicago with Detroit 3 1-2 out and Phoenix a half game further back.

The division is termed suicide since the last place team, Phoenix, with a 5-5 record, could lead another division and would be well placed in the other two. Last season's last place finisher—Detroit—had one of the best records in the NBA but was lost in the power shuffle.

Kareem Jabbar scored 11 of his game high 33 points during a 21-8 spurt early in the fourth quarter that boosted the Bucks ahead. The Bucks held on to win despite a strong finishing effort by Chicago's Bob Weiss, who hit 12 of his 30 points in the last 12 minutes. Bobby Dandridge added 20 for Milwaukee and Bob Love hit for 29 for the Bulls.

In other NBA action, Boston edged Detroit 103-102, Seattle downed New York 101-97, Los Angeles beat Baltimore 110-96, Buffalo tripped Atlanta 122-117 in overtime and Phoenix drubbed Cleveland 107-87.

John Havlicek's 35-foot basket at the final buzzer lifted the Celtics over Detroit and spoiled the coaching debut of Earl Lloyd, who replaced Bill Van Breda Kolff earlier this week. Havlicek's basket came after Jimmy Walker who had 34 points for the Pistons, had put Detroit ahead 102-101 with three seconds left.

Jo Jo White, who set up Havlicek's game winning basket, was high scorer for the Celtics with 29 points while Walker led the Pistons.

Player-Coach Lenny Wilkens hit five consecutive free throws in the last 2 1-2 minutes to boost the SuperSonics past New York. Seattle battled back from a 15-point deficit to beat the Knicks as Pete Cross sparked the rally.

Gail Goodrich scored 19 of his game-high 31 points in the first quarter as the Lakers downed Baltimore. Jim McMillian added 22 for Los Angeles while Jack Marin led the Bullets with 30.

Randy Smith scored seven points during the overtime period to spark Buffalo over the Hawks. Smith, playing his finest game as a pro, led all scorers with 35 points and fellow rookie Elmore Smith had 26. George Trapp, also a rookie, led the Atlanta attack with 34.

The losses for Baltimore and Atlanta left them tied for the Central Division lead despite 3-8 records.

Clem Haskins and Dick Van Arsdale combined for 47 points and Lamar Green had 22 rebounds as Phoenix whipped the Cavaliers. The Suns, playing without Connie Hawkins, took an early lead and controlled the game. Bobby Washington was tops for Cleveland with 19.

BULLDOGS

sive coach Phil Avilla smiled, "some defense, huh. We got them, and so did our secondary. How do you like White's two interceptions? I wonder what they think about our secondary now. You know, it really is a good one."

Muster, agreeing with Avilla's statement added: "we kind of feel that if the opposing team puts the ball in the air, we've got a good shot at picking it off."

In addition to lauding White plus his offensive stalwarts, Duncan and Farrar, Muster gave kudos to Bessee and defenders Dirk Correnti and Mike Cook. "Correnti really hit them good, and Cook did well in holding up the right side of the line."

The entire Bulldog defense looked solid, according to losing coach Bob Franceschini. The veteran mentor pointed out, "you can't afford to make this many mistakes against a team like San Rafael and expect to win. We just got the tar kicked out of us."

ried four times in the drive for 41 yards, including the five-yard TD burst.

Following the kickoff, quarterback Bob Brown led Redwood through the air to its first score, going 69 yards in seven plays. Brown, having his best throwing day of the year for the Giants, stood up to the Hornet rush and authoritatively fired a 25-yard spiral to Mike Connor for the touchdown. Brown passed for the two-point conversion, and the Giants were back in the game.

An inspired Giant defense stalled Novato after the kickoff and on fourth down, the center snap sailed over punter Magers' head. The stocky, 5-foot-10 senior ran the ball down, and got off a shaky punt under pressure from the Redwood defensive line.

Brown alternated runners Mark Asiano, Daryl Edralin and Connor in the subsequent 31-yard march, with Connor taking the pitch and going outside for a four-yard score. Steve McGee added the kick, and with barely nine minutes left in the game, the Giants were in the driver's seat, 21-15.

"Redwood's a good football team. They came roaring back on us even down 14-0," Scott praised.

Behind for the first time, Scott said the Hornets took it matter-of-factly and went out to do something about it. "The offense met on the sidelines; there were no complaints. They just said 'We gotta score,' and they went out and did."

Magers topped the clinching drive with a two-yard off-tackle dive that put the Hornets in front for good.

The true drama of the game came with two minutes left, and Redwood in Novato territory. On fourth and three from the 45, Brown faked to the back coming through the middle, and then turned to give it to the other running back on a counter. But Greg Straw, an offensive standout for Novato at end "Shot in so quick he knocked the first back into the quarterback, and then Jeff Eisenhauer really cleaned him," said Scott.

Taking over on downs, the Hornets ran out the remaining minute to clinch a share in their first title since 1968.

Roark, subdued after the loss, said he was proud of how his team played. "We really had a helluva year," he said quietly.

In the upcoming battle between Novato and San Rafael, Roark said he would tab the Bulldogs. "They're a lot more balance than Novato," he said. The coach acknowledged Moroski's and Mager's ball handling skills, but said that the potent San Rafael offense would prevail.

The Giants play the Tam High Indians next week, possibly without starting lineman Ellard Roush, who may have a fractured thumb. Roark said, "We'll be a little down — we have to be — but it's the coaches' job to make sure the kids are up" for the game that would clinch the Tamalpais High School District trophy.

Trevino Starts Bid To Catch Maxwell

By U.P. INTERNATIONAL

MEXICO CITY — A hot battle was brewing between Billy Maxwell and Lee Trevino today as the 70 surviving participants in the Mexican Open golf tournament began play in the third round.

Maxwell, of Jacksonville, Fla., was the leader with an 11-under-par 133 after 36 holes. Trevino, the "Super Mex" who is after his fourth national open title in one year, was second with 136.

Pacing

INGLEWOOD — Albatross, starting from the second tier, raced to a 3½ length victory last night in the $50,000 Western Pace at Hollywood Park as he scored his 24th win of the year and increased his 1971 earnings to more than $500,000.

The 3-year-old pacing sensation sped the mile in 1:57 4/5 to the roaring approval of a crowd of 19,200.

Football

LONG BEACH — Terry Metcalf scored three touchdowns last night to lead Cal State Long Beach to a 30-13 victory over Fresno State to move the 49ers into first place in the Pacific Coast Athletic Association. Cal State is 4-0, Fresno 3-1.

Track

BOSTON — The Boston Athletic Association Games, the oldest indoor track meet in the United States, has been canceled because of low interest and high costs.

The action, leaves the city without a major track meet for the first time in 91 years.

NEW YORK — A 67-year-old security guard, Harold Wagner, was in serious condition at St. Clare's Hospital today after being stabbed in the back during a post-fight riot last night at Madison Square Garden's Felt Forum.

OAKLAND — A Superior Court jury has awarded $475,000 in damages to University of California graduate student Wayne Brooks, who lost a leg after being injured in an intramural touch football game in 1968.

The panel ruled yesterday the UC Board of Regents was negligent in the way the game was officiated and doctors on the Berkeley campus and the UC Medical Center in San Francisco were guilty of medical malpractice.

Bad News For Wells And Dickey

OAKLAND (UPI) —Oakland Raiders wide receivers Eldridge Dickey and Warren Wells got some bad news Friday.

Coach John Madden suspended Dickey, the No. 1 draft choice in 1969, for at least two weeks for undisclosed "disciplinary reasons." Dickey missed practice Wednesday and Thursday and was reportedly late to at least two other sessions. Drue Buie was activated to replace Dickey.

Wells, meanwhile, was recommended for a stay in a California state prison other than San Quentin after several weeks of evaluation at the reception guidance center at Vacaville. Wells was imprisoned after his probation was revoked for an assault in a Beaumont, Tex., bar.

College Of Marin Harriers Triumph

The College of Marin cross-country team won a triangular meet yesterday in Belmont as Mike Arago set a new course record of 20:29.8 on the hilly four-mile layout.

The score was Marin 26, Solano 44, Skyline 53. College of Marin's conference record is 6-1, with the conference meet coming up Saturday.

Drake Booters Win; Get First Place Share

Drake High School's soccer team defeated San Marin, 1-0, yesterday to pull into a tie for the Marin County Athletic League lead with San Rafael.

San Rafael was held to a 0-0 tie by Terra Linda. Drake and San Rafael each have 9-1-2 records for 20 points.

Doug Harnsberger scored the one goal for Drake. Dave Harvard scored two goals and Carl Bettinger one as Redwood drubbed Tamalpais, 3-0. The other MCAL game saw Novato whipping Marin Catholic, 5-0.

WHITE SOUTHERN CONGREGATION

Black Minister Finds Acceptance

OAK RIDGE, Tenn. (UPI)— The one thing members of Kern Memorial United Methodist Church do not want is to be pictured as heroes, as having done something outstandingly praiseworthy.

"The only thing we really were concerned with," says Paul Wilkinson, lay leader of the church, "was getting a Christian minister. If the pastor were truly Christian, there was nothing we could do but accept him. That's the way the people here feel."

And it was in this context that the Rev. Walter Willis, a 40-year-old native of Sylacauga, Ala., became the first black pastor of an all-white Methodist church in the southeast, in July.

"There was obviously a lot of discussion," Wilkinson said in an interview, recalling last spring when the district superintendent came to the leadership of Kern Memorial and asked them if they would work with a black minister.

Bishop L. Scott Allen, the first black head of the Holston United Methodist Conference, which covers east Tennessee and a small area of southwest Virginia, was looking for a white church which would work with a black minister.

"We were among 25 or so churches under consideration," said Charles Kite, chairman of the administrative board of the church.

A special meeting of the board was called, and most of its 50 members were there, plus some other members of the congregation. The proposal was openly and thoroughly discussed and put to a vote by secret ballot.

"I think the vote was 38 to 6 in favor," Wilkinson said, and with that approval the "venture in faith," as Willis calls it, was launched.

"Naturally we had some doubts," Kite said. But for the church leaders, there was a ready-made out, anyway—built right into the structure of the Methodist Church, the practice of moving ministers around every two or three years.

"If the pastor was not an ideal match, black or white, it was not going to break the church," Wilkinson said. "We'd had experience with white ministers who were not always an ideal match.

"If anybody was taking a chance, it was much more on the part of the preacher than on the part of the church membership."

Willis came to Oak Ridge after three years in the division of curriculum resources of the United Methodist board of education in Nashville.

He had entered the ministry in 1949, had served as minister and dean of men at Huston-Tillotson College in Austin, Tex., and as minister at Claflin College in Orangeburg, S.C. He had been pastor of a number of churches in Alabama and Tennessee, after his start in Evergreen, Ala.

He liked what he was doing in Nashville. And the decision to come here was not easily made.

For Willis, the venture began with a request that he take the appointment from Bishop Allen.

"If he had not ever asked me, I would have been happy," Willis admits. "A lot of time was spent in prayer. It was basically the children with whom I was concerned."

There are three Willis children, Henry Walter, 13; Timothy John, 9, and Stephen Edward, 6. In addition, Mrs. Willis' mother, Mrs. Lula Garrett of Greenville, S.C., is a member of the family which moved into the parsonage near the church in a white neighborhood.

"I had the feeling that I just could not say no," Willis says. "It was a challenge, and not an easy thing to do. It allowed me to put my faith on the line, even though I would do something that might be risky."

Willis says his main concern was not for himself but with how the children would adjust to being removed from a basically black environment in Nashville, where they had friends, and put into a white environment where they would have to start over.

Three months is too short a time to really evaluate the final outcome of the move, but Willis has found his "venture in faith" a rewarding experience so far.

There have been no threatening phone calls, no nasty letters, only one small incident which could be interpreted as hostile—a neighbor who asked that the Willis children not come into his yard.

There were some who found the move hard to accept, but even they came to church and gave their new pastor a look.

"This is a very open church," says Willis, "with a strong spiritual quality." And, although many were doubtful about the "publicity" a news story would give the church, on the Sunday this reporter attended services the congregation was warm, friendly and generous with the new pastor.

"We have a rather broad cross-section of the community in this congregation," Wilkinson said of Kern Memorial, which has about 853 members—third largest among Methodist congregations in the city.

The church has a history of greater than average social concern, Kite said, and this may be a factor in its acceptance of Willis.

"We're active with Youth Haven, a temporary shelter for wards of the court. Some Sunday school classes regularly visit Eastern State Psychiatric Hospital at Knoxville to visit the elderly or to meet with drug addicts," Kite said.

"We were asked by the Holston Conference to contribute $2,600 to the Fund for Reconciliation—a $20 million program to help the economically disadvantaged. The church contributed $6,200."

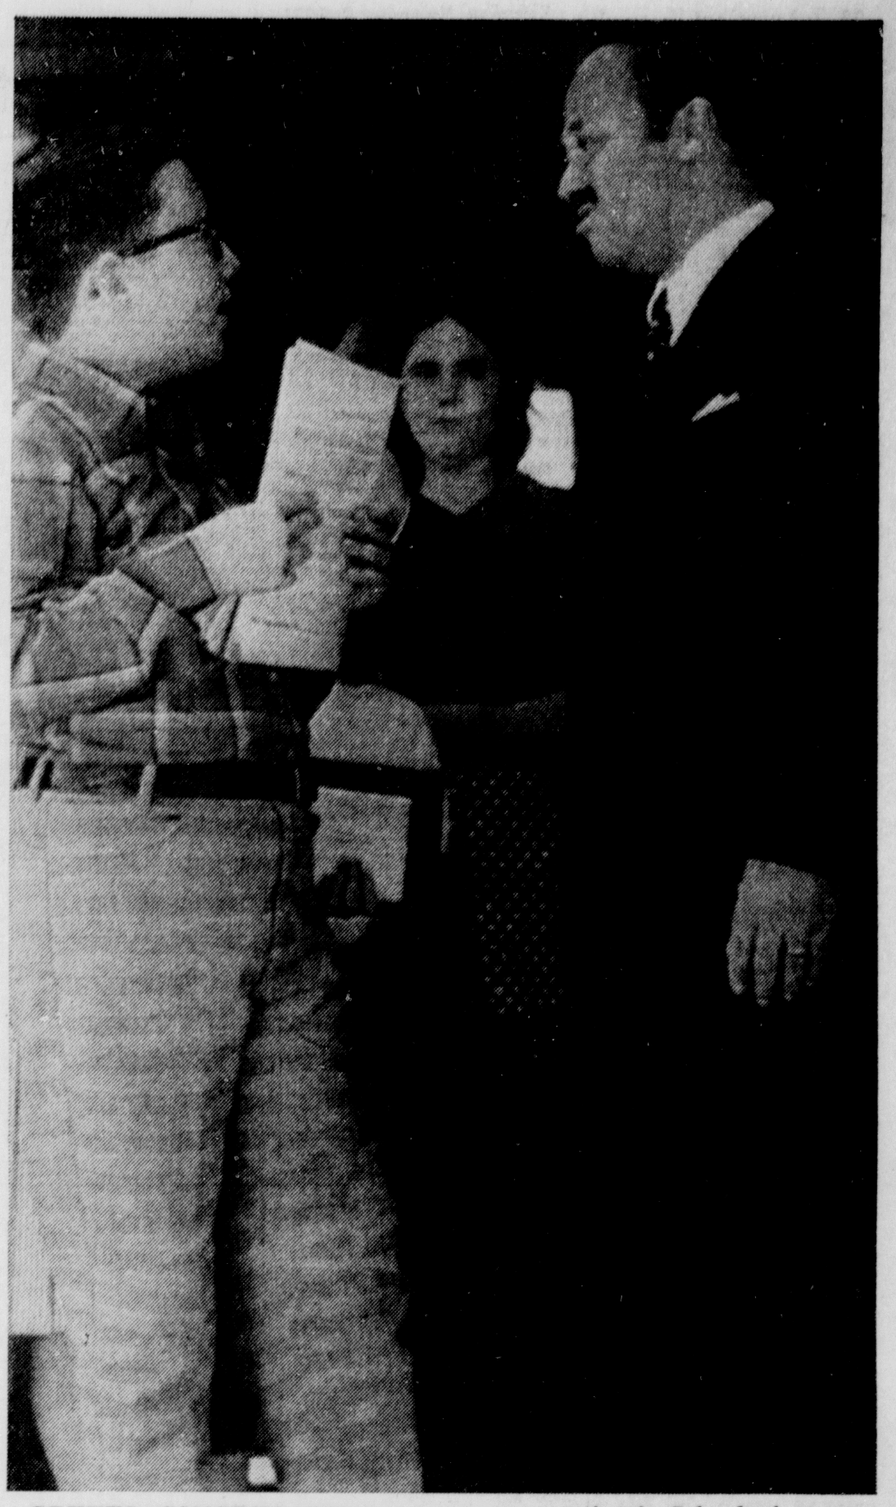
Willis hasn't performed any weddings or officiated at any funerals, yet. "But I'm not sensitive about that," he said. He has been sought out by members seeking counseling, "and you don't ask counsel of someone you don't trust."

As to the future, Willis says he would not hesitate to go to another all-white church after his experience with Kern Memorial. And he believes Kern will be a different church for the experience, even though it may not have another black minister for many years.

"This church won't become a dumping ground for black ministers," Willis said bluntly.

Whether it could have succeeded so well in another city in the south is hard to say. Oak Ridge, born with the atomic age, is not a typical southern town. Less than 10 per cent black, with higher educational and economic levels than other east Tennessee cities, it has to be different.

"But not that much," said lay leader Paul Wilkinson.



GREETS CONGREGATION — Rev. Walter Willis greets members of the Kern Memorial Church in Oak Ridge, Tenn. When he became pastor of the congregation in July, he became the first black pastor in an all-White Methodist Church in the South.

Union Movement Slowing Down

By LOUIS CASSELS
U.P. INTERNATIONAL

The church union movement, which seemed to be breezing along under full sail a few years ago, has fallen into the doldrums.

If not entirely becalmed, it is at best drifting at slow speed and in uncertain direction.

Look, for example, at the Consultation on Church Union, through which nine Protestant denominations have been endeavoring for nearly a decade to unite. COCU started out with brilliant leadership and great expectations. Its first meetings were an exciting experience in mutual discovery.

Episcopalians, Disciples of Christ, Methodists, Presbyterians and Congregationalists learned that once they got past semantics and slogans, they really were very close together in their understanding of the Bible, the sacraments and the ministry of the Church.

Then the theologians, the creative thinkers and innovators, were shoved aside by church politicians and bureaucrats. COCU meetings in later years bogged down in endless disputes over organizational detail: who's going to have the real power?

At its most recent meeting, in Denver last month, COCU spoke brave words about committing the "coming united church" to such worthy social causes as racial justice. But even its always-hopeful general secretary, Dr. Paul A. Crow Jr., declined to predict, at a reporter's invitation, that the united church will be a reality by 1980.

But it evidently will take some sort of miracle of revitalization for COCU ever to achieve the kind of united Protestant church that was visualized when this ambitious project was launched in the early '60's.

It may be that the ecumenical movement has run into trouble because the people who started it tried to work from the top down, instead of from the bottom up. And the most hopeful aspect of the Denver COCU meeting is that it glimpsed this possibility.

One of its recommendations to member denominations calls for experiments with church union at the local church or community level. For example, a Methodist, an Episcopal and a Presbyterian church serving the same neighborhood might "cluster" together in a unified parish, perhaps retaining separate worship services at first, but sharing other things, including ministers, office work, fund drives, youth programs, etc.

This kind of "trial marriage" at the local level could generate the same enthusiasm for ecumenicity at the grass roots which once animated the high denominational councils represented by COCU.

It is a deeply stimulating experience for Christians of different traditions to find out from actual contact how much they have in common —as well as how much they can learn from each other.

Here is an answer —perhaps the only answer —to the apathy which laymen and parish clergy generally have displayed toward national church union plans such as COCU. Shared activities in an ecumenical "cluster parish" inevitably would lead, in time, to shared worship.

And it is in worshipping together that Christians come to realize most keenly how scandalous their divisions are, not only to the world, but even more important, to the Lord whose last earthly prayer for his followers were that "they may be one."

Ordination Held For New Pastor

Rev. Tom Earl Prevost was ordained into the Baptist ministry last Sunday at services at Trinity Baptist Mission in Fairfax.

The ordination was conducted by Dr. Jerry Ashby, pastor of the First Baptist Church in El Sobrante. The report of the ordination council was given by Earl Nestor of Tiburon.

Rev. Edd Brown, area missionary, charged the candidate and Dr. J. K. Eakins, professor of Old Testament and archaeology at Golden Gate Baptist Theological Seminary, delivered the prayer of ordination.

The new minister is a second year master of divinity student at Golden Gate and has held the mission post since Oct. 1.

The Faiths Of Court Nominees

WASHINGTON, D.C. (LC) — William Hubbs Rehnquist, nominated to the Supreme Court by President Nixon, is a member of the Lutheran Church in America.

Rehnquist, 47, a U.S. assistant attorney general, was named in late October together with Leslie F. Powell, Jr., 64, of Richmond, Va. as a former president of the American Bar Association. He is a Presbyterian.

If confirmed by the Senate, they will fill the seats vacated by the late Justice Hugo L. Black and Justice John M. Harlan.

Statement Sought On Continued Ties

ST. PAUL (LC) — The Church Council of the American Lutheran Church has acted to clarify its relationship with the Lutheran Church-Missouri Synod.

At stake is the continuation of pulpit and altar fellowship between the two bodies, placed in jeopardy by the Missouri Synod's opposition to the ALC's approval of women pastors.

The Church Council voted on Oct. 21 "to ask for a formal statement on the understanding of the basis for fellowship from the Lutheran Church-Missouri Synod in order to ascertain whether or not the Missouri Synod has changed its position since the declaration (approving fellowship with the ALC) in 1969."

Formal fellowship — providing for the interchange of pastors and intercommunion by members of local congregations — was established after more than a decade of negotiations between the two churches, which have a combined membership of more than five million.

The ALC officially declared fellowship with the Missouri Synod at its biennial convention in 1968 and the LCMS reciprocated at its convention in 1969.

In 1970 the ALC approved the ordination of women and now has one woman pastor. Last July the Missouri Synod asked the ALC to reconsider its decision to ordain women and urged its own congregations to cease further implementation of fellowship until the issue has been resolved.

Meeting for the first time since the LCMS convention, the ALC's Church Council, legislative body for the church between general conventions, reiterated its position that ordination of women does not violate the teaching of the Scriptures.

The question, it said, "lies within the freedom of the administration of the churches," and "should not be divisive of fellowship."

The ALC's position continued to be, the Council added, that the basis for fellowship is "adherence to the Holy Scriptures as the Word of God in all matters of faith and life and acceptance of the confessions of the Lutheran Church."

The statement said the ALC understands that agreement in "doctrines and attitudes toward practice expressed in the Lutheran Confessions are both necessary and sufficient for fellowship."

The ALC further understood, in approving fellowship both with the Missouri Synod and with the Lutheran Church in America, the statement said, that "questions with regard to practice and other interpretations of Scripture not specified in the Confessions could remain matters of continuing conversation and interest without being either divisive or determinative of fellowship."

Archdiocese Sets Fund Day

Sunday, Nov. 21, has been declared Human Development Campaign Collection Sunday in the Archdiocese of San Francisco of which Marin County is a member.

Funds collected will be used for the Roman Catholic Bishops Fund for self-help projects among the nation's poor.

The day has also been designated for collection of clothing for the needy, an annual event which is marked during Thanksgiving week.

ATTEND THE CHURCH OF YOUR CHOICE

Is Your Church in Need of Reformation?
Test it with these five theses:
T F The Bible is without error in everything it says.
T F God declared mankind not guilty because of Christ.
T F Jesus Christ is true God and true man.
T F Faith in Christ alone without works saves.
T F Religious fellowship requires full agreement in doctrine.
According to the Word of God, these statements are true. See John 10:35, Romans 5:18, Colossians 2:9, Ephesians 2:8, and Romans 16:17.
If any of the teachings of the Bible are not accepted as God's truth in your church and your protests prove useless, He advises you to find a church which holds Him and His Word pre-eminent.
We have such a church and invite you to share its blessings. Sunday service at present is at 7:30 p.m.

College Of Marin: Center Of New Growth

The College of Marin (center) stands at the hub of new growth in the lower Ross Valley. This photo, taken about seven months ago, omits many new projects which were started during the summer construction season. The concrete Corte Madera Creek channel (center left), part of a controversial flood control project, continued upstream this year to a point near the Ross Post Office. On the college campus, a new library was started as enrollment increased from 4,800 day students last year to 5,200 in 1971. Shown under construction in the photo is the recently completed science building (the large white building adjacent to the creek channel.) Following the creek downstream past the Tamalpais Retirement Center (center top), the photo shows undeveloped creeksides, but which are now covered with new apartment buildings. Other dominant features are San Quentin Prison (top left), the Tiburon Peninsula (top right), Larkspur's Magnolia Avenue (center right), Sir Francis Drake Boulevard (center left) and the hills of Kentfield (bottom left and right.)

'Twelfth Night' Plays At College

By JAMES E. WILLIAMS

Shakespearean gimmickry has almost become a byword in the Bay Area theatrical scene. It's surely been a syndrome at the College of Marin for the past six months.

Last night, James Dunn's Kentfield campus troupe opened its 1971-72 season with the Bard's "Twelfth Night."

Thinking that Shakespeare's prose wouldn't hold a candle, Dunn placed the setting of the romantic little comedy in the days of early California when the Spanish dons ruled the sprawling territory. If anything, the production was one of the most campy intrepertations of a Shakespeare comedy I've seen.

Possibly Dunn's tack was a carryover from his outstanding success with Shakepeare's "Taming of the Shrew" which made minor theatrical history at the Edinburgh Festival in Scotland last August.

"TWELFTH NIGHT" — A comedy by William Shakespeare. Presented by the College of Marin Drama Department. Directed by James Dunn; settings and costumes by Alonso D. Gonzalvez; lighting and construction by E. K. Schoon, and original music by Thomas W. Buckner. Principal cast members: Ann Long, Viola; Joel Blum, Sebastian; Reynold Acevedo, Antonio; Howard McMaster, Orsino; Pamela Contos, Olivia; Barry Bauman, Curio; Bette Besuner, Maria; J. W. Harper, Sir Toby Belch; Alan Kernan, Sir Andrew Aguecheek; Shelly Lipkin, Feste; William Childs, Father Fabian; William Childs, a sea captain; John Chapot, Valentine; Elwood Markham, first musician, and Mark DeGroft, second musician.

Whatever it was, the gimmickry fell rather short of what should come out of the talented Dunn. It seemed as if he was striving for an overpowering punch from scenery, lighting and costumes to offset a general lack of acting talent — so abundant in past years.

All was not lost, however, thanks to a marvelous protrayal by Robin Williams as Malvolio. His antics made the rather longish evening worthwhile. Had his characterization not worked, the production may well have fallen on its Shakespearean face.

Backing up Williams in the large roster in reasonable fashion were Joel Blum as Sebastian, one of the few actors on stage who didn't race through his lines so fast they were hard to catch; Alan Kernan as Sir Andrew Aguecheek; Bette Besuner as Maria, who made a saucy maid, and Barry Bauman as Curio.

While the part of Viola is rather tiresome in any version of this play, Ann Long didn't seem to grasp the boyishness of the twin role, nor did Palemia Contos as Oliva, J. W. Harper as Sir Toby Belch and Howard McMaster as Orsino measure up to expectations.

From a visual aspect, the production was stunning. The set was a masterpiece. Professional companies should take note from E. K. Schoon, who constructed the set on a design executed by Alonso D. Gonzalez, who also was responsible for the lavish costumes.

"Twelfth Night" will be repeated again today, tomorrow, Wednesday through next Sunday and from Nov. 17 to 20 at 8 p.m.

Mill Valley Man Pleads Innocence

John Campbell Collins, 23, of 146 Morningsun Avenue, Mill Valley, has pleaded innocent in Marin Municipal court to charges of possessing marijuana and possessing it for sale.

Preliminary hearing was set for Nov. 23.

Collins was arrested Oct. 26 at his residence where Marin County drug abuse agents said they found marijuana and hashish.

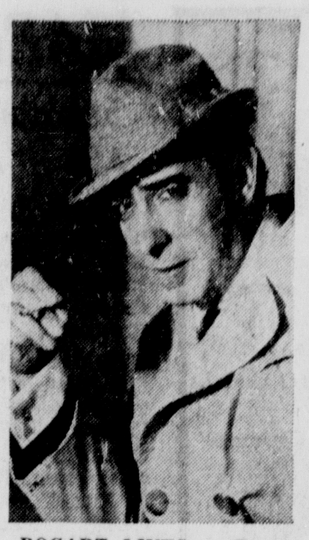
Thomas A. Paepke, 21, of Madison, Wis., who arrived at Collins' residence with $12,000 in cash while the agents were there, has pleaded innocent to possessing pot. A preliminary hearing has been set for Nov. 16 for Paepke.

Helpful Motorist Struck, Killed

GRAYSON, Ky. (UPI)—A motorist who stopped to help when he saw a pony killed by a truck was himself struck and killed by a car at the accident scene.

Police said the victim, Harold F. Bennett, 53, Huntington, W. Va., got out of his car on U. S. route 60, near this eastern Kentucky City, to help direct traffic around the accident.

Bennett was hit by a car driven by a 19-year-old youth.



BOGART LIVES — Tom Barker will play Humphrey Bogart in the comedy "Play It Again Sam," to be presented by the Actors Playhouse of Marin Dec. 10, 11 and 12 at the Marin Veterans Memorial Building. Curtain time is 8 p.m. the first two days and 7:30 p.m. on Dec. 12.

Solo Flight Around The World

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI)— Elgen Long, 44, headed toward the North Pole today on a solo flight over the four "crossroads of the geography of the world."

Long, a commercial pilot with 12,000 hours in the air, took off from San Francisco International Airport Friday in a twin-engine Piper Navajo for Fairbanks, Alaska.

His 20,000-mile, month-long schedule will carry him over the North and South poles as well as the prime and 180th meridians at the equator—the equivalents of an "East Pole" and "West Pole."

Long, who named his plane "Crossroads," said his craft would fly over the four "crossroads of the geography of the world."

"I always had this urge to go places," said Long, who lives in the San Francisco suburb of Woodside. "I always wanted to do it. Now, having the resources and abilities to do it, I feel it is almost mandatory."

An Unusual Show By Gestalt Fool

By KAY KSANDA

Last night a San Francisco-based theatrical company known as The Gestalt Fool performed a most unusual original show entitled "One Mind" at Sonoma State College, creating more of a "happening" than any kind of structured play.

With no stage set, little story pattern, and one impromptu nude scene, the audience could have felt it was either a great show or confusion theater.

Although the acting technique was ignored in spots, nobody could complain about the music and the voices. They were great, and here was (and is) their strength. Don Currie, as songwriter, actor, dancer, and singer, is all theater, with the other nine members of the acting commune right on the cusp of "professional."

The show, which will play again tonight in Ives Hall at 8 o'clock, has no director, producer or writer. To be "gestalt" they have to be themselves, and not separated from their audience. Therefore, they start the show sitting with the audience, announcing, in song, that they hope to do a good show.

The overture is not a chorus of dancing singers, but a real live bingo game with the audience, conducted by Neil King in a 19th century priest's cassock. The prize is a large bottle of wine which is meant to be shared. The jug is uncorked, and the potpourri of comic opera, comic tragedy, and outrageous parody begins.

"ONE MIND" — Presented by the theater group The Gestalt Fool. Written, directed, produced, and staged by the entire company. Members and cast: Don Currie, Pilar du Rem, Bret Davenport, Lorna McMurry, Shana Schwartz, Ron Bianco, Gail Anderson, Jerry Shreve, Neil Keane.

After each member of the cast introduces himself, the group starts off with a strange sketch of a woman riding a man's back. She chortles with fiendish glee as she kicks and lashes him. When she finally leaves him, he collapses. He dies, a victim of heroin.

The audience catches on. They are involved with pain. The cast switches to an institution for the insane. It's hilarious, but it's also real, and almost unkind to laugh.

Next, there's a duet about the Attica prison riot. Don Currie, in drag, plays a wild Jeanette McDonald singing lyrics composed from an aftermath article written by Vice President Agnew. This is in contrast to Neil Keane's lyrics from the intense prison account.

From this political wound, they swing into the audience's favorite improvisation "The Pirates of Amurrica," a Gilbert and Sullivan-type operetta about President Nixon and the economy, written and compiled by the entire group.

Don Currie, as Nixon, sings another very funny song. He starts off with something like:

"When the economy is weak, I generally start to freak. . ."

The situation is joined with the excellent voice of Pilar du Rem, who assumes the posture of a dramatic soprano to sing the ridiculous aria, "Oh, second car. . ."

Eventually the audience joins the show in a wild song and dance, prancing and wheeling:

"Life is a game that's played out of boredom, be what you choose, be what you see, set yourself free."

It was like dancing on a grave, but it was funny.

Mrs. Gandhi And Mrs. King Meet

WASHINGTON (UPI)—The widow of civil rights leader the Rev. Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. renewed her acquaintenance Friday with Indian Prime Minister Indira Gandhi and voiced her opposition to shipment of U.S. arms to Pakistan.

Mrs. Coretta Scott King, along with Rep. John Conyers Jr., D-mich., and congressional delegate Walter E. Fauntroy, D-D.C., met with Mrs. Gandhi at Blair House. The two women first met in 1959 before King's assassination in 1968.

"We had a very fruitful meeting," Mrs. King later told a news conference. "We expressed deep concern for the problems her country faces — the threat of war (with West Pakistan), the problem of human suffering."

Medic Alert Could Save Many More

One person in every five has some special medical problem not readily seen or recognizeable.

A person with a heart condition often does not show it. If he or she is involved in an accident or has a "fainting" spell, it is necessary that those who try to help be aware of the heart condition. If the patient is unconscious, how is anyone to know?

Dr. M. C. Collins of Turlock ran into this situation a couple of decades ago when a young girl suffered a minor cut on the finger. Under the circumstances, it was advisable to administer a tetanus shot to protect against that dreaded infection.

The doctor had no way of knowing that the girl was extremely allergic to tetanus antitoxin. The girl almost died.

Doctor Collins determined to find a way to protect against such tragedies.

HE FOUNDED MEDIC ALERT, the organization which keeps records of special medical problems and provides a Medic Alert bracelet which indicates the nature of the condition (i.e., epilepsy, diabetes, etc.) of the wearer.

The bracelet contains the toll-free number — reachable from anywhere on earth, where the wearer's medical record is instantaneously available.

Today, nearly a half million people wear Medic Alert identification tags. Medic Alert Foundation receives a couple of dozen letters per week from bracelet wearers who say they would not be writing had it not been for the identification bracelets they wear. Medic Alert makes it possible to give the patient with special needs the right treatment instantly, and — equally important — to avoid the wrong and perhaps fatal treatment.

The law of averages indicates that more than 40,000 Marin residents have special medical problems which must be known instantly in emergencies. Only a fraction of these special problem people are registered with Medic Alert.

Earlier this week, the Marin Association of Life Underwriters, headed by its president Jack G. Nixon, kicked off a campaign to encourage Medic Alert sign-ups.

Theirs is a worthy effort. It deserves support.

SMOG AND TRAFFIC congestion have led to general disenchantment with the automobile which previously had been regarded as one of civilization's most welcome advances.

When we become disenchanted, we usually grow angry and need to find an object on which to vent our anger by blaming it for our miseries.

Lo, the highway engineer! What better fellow to hold responsible for our traffic ills?

Unfortunately, in times past there were highway engineers who regarded highway expansion as their divinely appointed mission in life. They resented any and all criticism. They actively opposed anyone who offered any criticism (constructive or otherwise) of highway design and construction.

More recently, along came the Alan Hart kind of state highway engineer. He perceived himself not as an advocate of bigger and better highways but more as an instrument of executing public will.

If you (the public) want bigger and better highways, we will be glad to try to build them. If you don't want us to expand further, we will be glad to build somewhere else, where a road is wanted. That was more nearly the attitude of Alan Hart whose imminent retirement was announced this week.

ALL TOO OFTEN public hearings are held for the purpose of gathering testimony principally for or against a proposition.

Alan Hart approached a highway plan hearing with an open-minded view. He never seemed to be pushing one plan against another or pushing construction against no further construction. Rather, he regarded a hearing as a time and place to find out whether the rank and file of the public wanted a particular stretch of highway or not and, if they did, what kind of highway would the public most want.

As a result, he was very receptive to suggestions for more esthetically pleasing design and to proposals for more and better landscaping.

We face his retirement with some misgivings. We hope he is not replaced by an old style highway engineer who is going to tell us what we need and attempt to thrust it upon us whether we like it or not.

We hope that Alan Hart turns out to have been the first of a new breed whose first wish is to do what the rank and file of people want done.

Bouquets And Brickbats

BOUQUETS to all the winners in Tuesday's elections — and to the losers, too, for without losing candidates, voters would have no choice.

BOUQUETS to all who voted in those elections, and BRICKBATS to those eligible to vote who didn't bother — over 50 per cent in most parts of Marin.

BOUQUET to the Mill Valley City Council for finally getting going on removal of the earthslide that has blocked part of Miller Avenue for nearly three years.

BRICKBAT to the Marin County Youth Commission for its extremely poor judgement in allowing the first issue of Free Youth, which might have become a valuable printed expression for Marin teen-agers, to instead appear as just another journal of the foul-mouthed, smart-aleck minority.

Transit Developments Please Ex-Director

It has been a year since my family and I moved from Marin. We are a long way from the county but find it a difficult place to forget.

I have been following transportation developments in the county with great interest. I am particularly gratified with news of the impending introduction of commuter bus service by the Golden Gate Bridge, Highway and Transportation District. It is not often that an individual can identify with a specific project in the public sector that he can claim as his own or in which he has made a major contribution. Assembling the components of the transit system had its painful moments, but witnessing its implementation offers its own special reward.

The success of this new transportation venture is reasonably well assured by the competent staff assembled by the bridge district. With the operation of the new commuter bus system and the ferry, the district will have taken a long step toward fulfilling its promise to the citizens of Marin. It can now turn its full and undivided attention to the task of planning for the next stage of a long range transportation program for the Golden Gate Corridor. This, coupled with the opening of the BART system in 1972, will be watched carefully by transportation experts and administrators throughout the nation. It is an exciting time for Marin and the entire Bay Area.

Onassis Marriage Contract Little Different From Buchwald's

WASHINGTON — The chief steward of the Christina, Aristotle Onassis' yacht, has just written a book in which he says that Mr. Onassis and his wife, the former Jacqueline Kennedy, signed a marriage contract with 170 clauses in it.

According to the steward, Christian Kafarakis, the contract stipulates separate bedrooms for the couple, lays down the rules as to how much time the couple must spend together, and spells out financial arrangements. These include a $600,000 yearly allowance for Mrs. Onassis in addition to any gifts Mr. Onassis might give her, as well as a provision that if Mr. Onassis ever leaves his wife, Mrs. Onassis will receive the sum of $9.6 million for every year of their marriage.

If Mrs. Onassis were to leave Mr. Onassis, she would receive a lump sum of $18 million under the terms of the alleged contract. Mr. Onassis also is said to have provided $100 million in his will — for Mrs. Onassis.

A SPOKESWOMAN for Mrs. Onassis categorically and unequivocally denied that such a marriage contract exists and called the story nonsense.

I have no knowledge of whether such a contract does exist and shall leave Mr. Onassis and his ex-steward to fight that one out.

But I do know that marriage contracts, particularly in Europe, are not uncommon, and as a matter of fact since both my wife and I were living in Paris, when we wanted to get married, we signed one.

Our marriage contract, which has 169 clauses in it, was thrashed out over a period of months before the wedding was agreed to.

IT PROVIDES for the following, among other things:

— I have to spend half the year with my wife (she tried to hold out for seven months). This time can be broken up any way I want it. I am permitted to go on lectures, attend openings of Hilton Hotels, go to pro football games, and attend homecoming week ends. For every day less than six months that I don't spend with her, I have to give her $2.50 or its equivalent in trading stamps.

— I am committed under the terms of the contract to give my wife $600 a year for her pleasure, safety, clothes, hairdresser, cosmetics, and the care of the house. The $600 does not include gasoline for the car, providing she uses it on family business.

— IF I WANT to leave my wife, I must give her the sum of $50 for every year we have been married.

— If she wants to leave me, she will receive a flat settlement of $185.50.

— As long as we are living together, I must provide my wife with detergents, mops, plastic garbage bags and a lawnmower.

— I also am obligated to pay for the veterinarian in case we have a dog.

— While we are married, my wife has custody of the children all day and most evenings. For this she is given the extra sum of $10 a week.

— If we have a fight, I must be the one to sleep on the couch in the living room.

— I must also give her the sum of $5 if I pay too much attention to another girl at a party.

These are more or less the financial details of our marriage contract, and the only reason I'm revealing them at this time is that our cleaning woman just quit, and I understand she's going to sell the terms to the National Enquirer. It would embarrass my wife something terrible if the marriage agreements ever became public.

Senators Having Second Thoughts About 'Arizona Axis' On Court

WASHINGTON — The Arizona Axis is taking on new political power. The center is Sen. Barry Goldwater, the Republican candidate for President in 1964 who was defeated by a record plurality by Lyndon B. Johnson.

The deputy attorney general, Richard Kleindienst, formerly a Phoenix lawyer, was director of field operations for the Goldwater campaign and again for Richard Nixon in 1968. Kleindienst is widely regarded as the successor to John N. Mitchell when the attorney general changes hats and takes over direction of the Nixon drive for re-election. This is expected to occur toward the end of the year.

Now comes William H. Rehnquist, Kleindienst's good friend in Phoenix, nominated by President Nixon to one of the two vacancies on the Supreme Court of the United States. Kleindienst was responsible at the start of the Nixon administration for the selection of Rehnquist to be an assistant attorney general. Compared with the dubious choices that had previously been floated, Rehnquist and the other nominee, Lewis F. Powell Jr., looked like heirs of the great John Marshall. Their confirmation by the Senate was considered probable, if not certain.

BUT SECOND THOUGHTS, together with evidence of the strong bias of one of the nominees, insure a contest over Pehnquist. With civil rights aetivists preparing the case, the question is whether a man's strongly held views of six or seven years ago should disqualify him.

On his own initiative Rehnquist appeared before a Phoenix City Council meeting on June 15, 1964, to oppose a proposed ordinance prohibiting discrimination in hotels, restaurants, shops and other public places. After a tape recording of the statement that Rehnquist, then 40 years old, made before the council was unearthed by the St. Louis Post-Dispatch, the Justice Department gave it out.

"I venture to say," he told the council, "there has never been this sort of an assault on the institution (private property) where you are told not what you can build on your property but who can come on your property."

Rehnquist was one of only three opponents, while 30 testified in favor of the ordinance, which was unanimously approved by the council.

In 1967 Rehnquist wrote a letter to the Arizona Republican opposing reorganization of the Phoenix school system to achieve racial integration. "I think," he wrote "that we are no more dedicated to an 'integrated' society than we are to a 'segregated' society. We are instead dedicated to a free society in which each man is equal before the law."

IN 1951-52 REHNQUIST was law clerk to the late Justice Robert H. Jackson. He was later to charge that "unconscious slanting" by the law clerks influenced many cases the court was called on to decide. He described the group with which he served as "'left' of either the nation or the court." The "left wing" of the court, according to Rehnquist, was made up of Chief Justice Earl Warren, Justice William O. Douglas, and the late Justice Hugo L. Black.

At least four of the Democrats on the Senate Judiciary Committee want to hear Rehnquist on his earlier views. Sen. Sam J. Ervin Jr. may also take part in the interrogation, since Rehnquist has been an active defender of the stringent District of Columbia anti-crime law with its no-knock and bugging provisions. Ervin, a staunch libertarian, opposed some aspects of that law.

A question that transcends the issue of political and ideological bias is whether it is possible to find judges who put interpretation of the law above prejudice. One of the vacancies to be filled by the two nominations came with the resignation of Justice John Marshall Harlan. Harlan was rated, in the broad sense, a conservative. But his opinions showed a mastery of the law above and beyond whatever convictions he may have brought to the court.

It should surely not be too difficult to find distinguished men of the law of Harlan's caliber. That is the need if confidence in the judiciary is to be restored.

U.S. Still Biggest Spender On Helping Other Nations

By PHIL NEWSOM
UPI Foreign News Analyst

It has been truly said that the best way to lose a friend is to lend him money. On that basis the United States has been losing friends since 1947 when, under the "Truman Doctrine," it began distributing foreign aid which today totals $143 billion.

Human nature being what it is, the United States would be naive indeed to expect any overflowing demonstrations of gratitude from the recipients of its generosity.

But by the same token, nations receiving U.S. aid should not be surprised by some U.S. irritation when they reward generosity with an obvious show of anti-Americanism.

A CASE IN POINT is Tanzania whose delegateperformed a jig of joy on the floor of the United Nations General Assembly after the defeat of the U.S. attempt to save a U.N. seat for Nationalist China.

Tanzania has been declared by the United Nations to be one of 25 countries with an especially low level of per capita income, a high rate of illiteracy, a lack of natural resources, and a bad climate, all of which are supposed to make it a special candidate for aid.

As such it has received a $30 million loan from the U.S.-supported World Bank for an electric power project and additional funds from the International Development Association, the bank's easy-loan affiliate.

It also is the recipient of Red China's largest foreign aid project, a $401 million interest-free loan to Tanzania and Zambia for a railroad between the two countries.

ALL OF THIS ties in closely with efforts of the Nixon administration to repair the shambles left by the U.S. Senate vote killing the American foreign aid program. The Senate action killed the administration's $3.3 billion foreign aid authorization bill, which in actual fact represented less than half of all U.S. aid channeled through various economic and military programs.

The overall actual total annually has been closer to $10 billion than to $3 billion.

Over the years the U.S. aid program probably comes to more than 10 times the amount spent similarly by the Soviet Union. Communist Chinese aid scarcely can be compared. Both the Soviet Union and Communist China have tended to be more selective.

THE CURRENT RECIPIENT of the largest single piece of Soviet aid is North Vietnam which is said to et about $1 billion annually.

Cuba gets around $1 million per day, or about $300 million per year.

Since 1937, the Russians have rebuilt the United Arab Republic's entire army at a cost of about $2.5 billion.

The Soviets scoff at the possibilith the U.S. aid program is coming to an end. They accuse the United States of seeking to build "captive, colonial markets" for U.S. manufactured goods and say the aid program will continue under other guises.

The Communist Chinese have attempted to probe weak spots left by both the Soviet Union and the United States. Most Chinese aid has gone to Africa and most of that to five countries—Algeria, the former French Congo, Guinea, Mauritania and Tanzania. Since the 1950s it has totaled about $250 million.

Other Chinese aid has gone to radical governments and groups in the Persian Gulf area to stir up revolutions there.

Consumer Price Index Taking On Added Importance

By DONALD FINLEY

WASHINGTON (UPI) —President Nixon will be keeping closer than usual watch in coming months on something known as the CPI. So will millions of Americans trying to decide how his new wage-price policies are affecting inflation.

CPI stands for the Consumer Price Index, compiled monthly by the Labor Department's Bureau of Labor Statistics (BLS). Despite admitted shortcomings and charges the White House is trying to manipulate the statistics for political purposes, it remains the best available gauge of the cost of living.

Officials readily concede the index does not measure the actual living costs but rather prices for a selected "market basket" of goods and services purchased by a mythical average urban family. They also concede price changes can take three months to a year to show up in the index.

UNDERSCORING THIS, the September cost of living index rose 0.2 per cent over August at a time when most prices were supposed to be frozen under Phase I of the President's new economic program.

Since President Nixon took office, the cost of living has risen 6.1 per cent in 1969 and 5.5 per cent in 1970. It was going up at an annual rate of about 4 per cent when Nixon froze wages and prices August 15 in an effort to stem the inflationary spiral.

The index went up 0.4 per cent in August then registered another 0.2 per cent gain in September. Officials said that did not mean living costs actually rose 0.2 per cent in September however, or that there necessarily were widespread violations of the price freeze.

They said many CPI items are priced only at three-month, six-month or yearly intervals and that the September index in some cases reflected price increases put into effect before Aug. 15 freeze.

COLLEGE TUITION, for example, showed a 9 per cent increase in September. But since tuition is priced checked by the BLS only once a year, the increase that showed up in September included all such hikes made over the past 12 months.

White House officials said most of the price increases reported in September appeared to be in conformity with the price freeze, but that the government would investigate hikes in prices for women's and girls' clothing, frozen orange juice, margarine, salad oils and some cuts of beef.

These officials also noted that some items were exempted from the price freeze, including raw agricultural products and taxes. Sellers also are allowed to pass along Nixon's 10 per cent import surcharge and prices can be raised legally in some cases if they were at seasonal lows in August.

BLS officials said the October index will be a much better guide to how the freeze has affected prices, but they didn't promise it wouldn't show another rise.

THE CONSUMER Price Index, begun a half century ago, reflects the cost to consumers of about 400 items in the mythical market basket of goods and services normally purchased by average urban wage earners and clerical workers.

The market basket has five basic sections —food, housing, clothing, transportation, and health and recreation. It includes such items as hamburger, beer, refrigerators, electricity, nylons hose, hospital care, airplane fares, movie tickets, property taxes, haircuts, babysitting and funerals.

It currently is based on the buying habits, surveyed by the Census Bureau in 1964, of an average urban family of 3.7 persons with an income of $6,250 a year after taxes. A new survey to update the buying habits is planned for 1972-73.

Most of the monthly price data is collected by some 200 specially trained BLS agents who visit about 18,000 retail stores and service establishments in 56 cities. Other prices are obtained through mail questionnaires, from other government agencies or, in the case of used cars, from trade associations.

PRICES OF food and a few other essentials are checked each month in all 56 cities. Prices for almost all other items in the CPI also are collected monthly in each of the five largest cities — New York, Chicago, Philadelphia, Detroit and Los Angeles. But in the other cities, most other prices are collected only every three months. Some more stable items such as rent and taxes are checked every six months or once a year.

All this data is fed into computers at BLS headquarters here to show monthly changes and longer range trends in prices on individual items and for the over-all cost of living. Each item in the market basket is weighted to show its relative share of monthly expenditures by the mythical typical urban family.

The CPI is keyed to a base period, currently 1967, and the figure 100 is assigned to the price level for that period. When the CPI climbed to 122.4 in September, it meant prices had risen 22.4 per cent since 1967 and that goods and services which cost $100 in 1967 cost $122.40 in August.

THE MAN in charge of consumer and wholesale price statistics for the government, Assistant BLS Commissioner Joe Popkin, said constant efforts are made to improve the CPI and its reliability. But he conceded the index has shortcomings.

For instance, he agreed that the CPI is not really a measure of the true cost of living, "although it's the closest we can come." Actually, he said it is an index of the changes in prices of goods and services which the 1964 survey indicated were purchased by the average urban wage earner and clerical worker.

To illustrate, Popkin said the 1964 imaginary market basket may have contained 10 pounds of steak a month. But if the price of steak goes up too much, the average family may switch to hamburger.

"What I'm saying," Popkin added, "is that the CPI does not take into account changing buying patterns of this average family or what it actually costs that family to live."

ALSO IT DOES not necessarily coincide with the buying habits of any one particular real family or reflect prices in rural or small town areas.

The BLS official said he has proposed that buying habit surveys be conducted by the Census Bureau more frequently than every decade. But he said the estimated $30 million cost has discouraged adoption of his proposal.

Another problem is statistical error inherent in any data based on samples instead of a comprehensive survey. Inadvertent errors also occur in reporting basic data. BLS officials said such errors usually are spotted, however, and tend to be too small to have any significant affect anyway.

A more serious and politically sensitive problem has arisen this year —the way BLS statistics are presented and interpreted. BLS has prided itself on the credibility of its reports and on remaining aloof from politics and policy makers.

THEN, LAST March, Harold Goldstein, an expert on the government's monthly job data, called an unemployment report "mixed" news while Labor Secretary James D. Hodgson said it was "heartening."

The White House later ordered an end to such briefings, saying it wanted policymakers such as Hodgson to interpret the price and job reports, not technicians such as Popkin and Goldstein.

Popkin has retained his post in a White House ordered shakeup at the BLS, but Goldstein was assigned to handle less volatile long-range statistics.

Union leaders and some Democrats have accused the administration of trying to manipulate BLS statistics for political gain, and of trying to present rosy pictures of the economy despite what they consider adverse statistics.

Popkin was reluctant to discuss the charges, but said he knew of no cases where BLS statistical numbers had been deliberately falsified. He added that the changes in the BLS ordered by the White House "will not affect the validity" of the Bureau's statistics.

THE BLS data is important to many groups that base major decisions on the government statistics.

Many labor union contracts provide wage increases based on rises in the CPI. Popkin said a 1 per cent error in the CPI could mean a difference of $250 million annually in wage and benefit payments to 5.5 million workers covered by these escalators clauses.

If proposals for tying Social Security increases to rises in the CPI should be adopted, a 1 per cent error would make a difference of about $330 million annually in payments to 27 million persons receiving Social Security benefits, he said.

The government itself is probably the greatest user of BLS statistics. The president used the CPI and unemployment figures in deciding to freeze wages and prices. Special federal economic aid is allocated to areas the BLS defines as poverty areas or areas of high unemployment.

A SHADOW REMAINS

New Liberian Leader's First 100 Office Days

MONROVIA, Liberia (UPI) —Just after he became president three months ago, William R. Tolbert told his fellow Liberians he had "mountains to climb and giants to meet."

After 19 years in the shadow of late Liberian President William V.S. Tubman, the new president —who had been Tubman's vice president —was hardly known to his countrymen. In three months he has surprised and reassured them.

Tubman, however, still casts a long shadow in Liberia and it poses a dilemma for his successor. Tolbert has said he would forgive no one who slighted the late president, officially proclaimed "Father of Modern Liberia."

Tolbert recognizes the need for economic and administrative reforms in a country with virtually no civil service and an average annual per capita income of $140.

BUT HOW can he make changes without tarnishing Tubman's image and questioning his policies and methods?

When Tubman suffered a hemorrhage after a prostate operation and died in a London clinic July 23, at age 75, he was a national hero and few even in Monrovia predicted the display of affection he was accorded during the funeral by the 200,000 Liberians who crowded into the capital.

Few Liberians yet know that Tubman, after an uninterrupted 27 years in power, left Liberia deeply in the red but bequeathed his widow, Mrs. Antoinette Tubman, a fortune abroad, estimated by officials at about $220 million, making her one of the world's richest individuals. She could keep the Liberian administration in funds for nearly four years.

In a private interview Tolbert used a semantic distinction to tell how he plans to modernize Liberia without detracting from Tubman's posthumous image.

"ALL THINGS are relative, you have good, better and best. If my administration proves a good one it doesn't mean President Tubman's was bad. The administration that succeeds mine may be better, more innovative," he said.

In a bold and —according to newspaper comment —popular move, Tolbert dismissed Tubman's two confidants on national security, C. Wellington Campbell, chief of National Intelligence, and James Bestman, chief of the Special Security Service.

"Hallelujah! There is no more getting rich overnight and no more tales to be told about innocent citizens," said the Sunday Mirror. It said Campbell and Bestman had used trumped up charges to jail innocent Liberians.

Another departure was that of Tubman's butler,who has left Liberia for the Canary Islands. The butler also was the keeper of the keys to the safe of the Executive Mansion. And he was a senator.

THE NEW President of Liberia speaks with an American accent, like many Liberians, the descendants of freed American slaves who began settling along the western bulge of Africa 150 years ago. Liberians, too, have their "Founding Fathers," pilgrims who crossed the Atlantic to make their freedom proclamations on "Providence Island," a pear-shapedn five-acre island ir a peaceful lagoon beside Monrovia.

Liberia is a 43,000-square mile country the size of Ohio, with a population of 1.5 million. Its capital city of Monrovia was named after American President James Monroe, who encouraged the ex-slave settlement.

The Liberian president works at the executive mansion overlooking the domed Capitol building. The legislature is one of the three branches of government established by the U.S.-styled constitution. Liberian currency is the dollar and Liberians have names such as "Ike" and "Al."

The new president, 58 and portly, the father of seven children and a former president of the 33-million member World Baptist Federation, speaks with the slightly stilted language of the lay preacher that he is.

TOLBERT IS "disposed" to see visitors and he told a recent international rice conference in Monrovia he was a rice grower by saying, "Many may not know it, but I am gratified to indicate that I am a rice producer."

Rice is a serious subject with Tolbert. It is the staple food of Liberians and he moved immediately to fix its price and warned Lebanese traders, well-entrenched up and down the West African coast, their future was in jeopardy if they exploited the people. Rice grows easily in Liberia but in 1970 the country spent $9.7 million on importing rice from the United States.

Liberia's problems include a literacy rate of 10 per cent, and barely 1,000 miles of paved roads. Although the national average income is $140 a year, the 70 per cent of the population engaged in subsistence agriculture earns $50 a year or less.

Tolbert has pledged to even out income distribution.

He also has encouraged freedom of expression and stirred Liberians into public debate. His promised economic reforms include more educational facilities, improved communications networks and increased government participation in agricultural productivity. A day doesn't pass without some action, some new pledge, a major speech.

Behind The News

Coconut Monk Thinks He Can Bring Vietnam Peace

PHOENIX ISLAND, South Vietnam (UPI)—Silent and smiling, the tiny old man who prays and fasts for peace waved to his departing visitors. From the vantage point on his barge, he could could look over their heads and see two American naval patrol boats moving up the Mekong River.

Both sights were familiar to Nam Nguyen Thanh, known as the Coconut monk—a religious leader who has devoted his life to seeking to reunite the warring Vietnams. He claims to hold the secret of peace, but says the leaders of government must seek him out in order for it to work.

So far, his work has earned him the love of several thousand Vietnamese followers, curiosity from those unfamiliar with Indochina, and scorn from the "responsible people" he believes hold the reins of the future.

FOR THESE reasons, the Coconut Monk says, he spends his days in meditation and prayer in his floating combination home and temple built on the huge barge, which he calls "The Dragon Ship Pranja."

The vessel is firmly anchored to a brightly-painted yellow and blue maze of steel supports linking it to Phoenix Island.

The striking points of the island are the wide "prayer circle" where the monk leads the faithful, and a 75-foot tower that he ascends to conduct solemn rituals. From afar, the various pillars and walkways bordered with elaborate designs give the appearance of a stateside amusement park.

The carnival atmosphere taints the monk's cause. He is regarded by many Vietnamese and foreigners alike to be only a peculiar old man who occasionally vaults into the headlines from some unlikely angle.

HIS CURIOUS semi fame includes:

—No bath for 23 years.

—A steady diet of only coconut milk in the morning and vegetable and fruit juice in the afternoon, all weighed in careful proportions on a small6yellow scale at the left side of his throne.

—A 13-year period (1946-1959) that he went without speaking. He still remains silent for months on end, although a black telephone is within reach of his right hand.

—A record of arrests by both the South Vietnamese government and the Viet Cong for political activity.

BUT COMMUNICATING by hand signs and notes scribbled on a green pad, the Coconut Monk conveys through an interpreter that he is serious in the belief that he is the only person who can bring peace. He is leader of a sect of some 3,000 Vietnamese who follow his religion.

WILL BLOUNT RUN?

Sparkman Gearing For Possible Senate Test

BIRMINGHAM, Ala. (UPI) — Not since Tallulah Bankhead's uncle, John H. Bankhead II, unseated J. T. (Cotton Tom) Heflin in the 1930 election has an incumbent U.S. Senator from Alabama been defeated.

John J. Sparkman, silverhaired but vigorous at 71, one of the Senate's most powerful members, has no intention of being the second incumbent senator in Alabama history to be booted from office by the electorate.

The 1952 Democratic vice presidential candidate, who moved from the House to the Senate when Bankhead died in 1946, stumps the state at every opportunity; fitting in his appearances between duties as chairman of the Banking, Housing and Urban Affairs Committee and as ranking member of the Foreign Relations Committee.

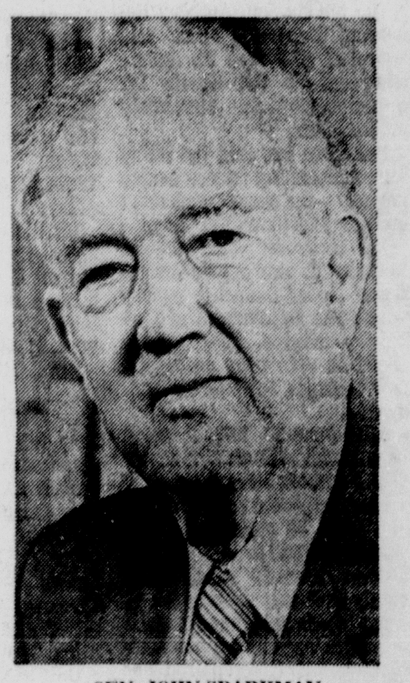
THE STRONG possibility that former Postmaster General Winton M. Blount plans to run for the Senate against Sparkman next fall should make the upcoming campaign a hot race.

Blount, 50, resigned his cabinet post Oct. 29 and told newsmen he would announce his intentions around year's end. But he has made no secret in private conversations that he wanted to lad the opposition against Sparkman in 1972. And the self-made millionaire construction executive said about his future that "when I came to Washington I ended my ties with the private sector. I believe I will be involved in public service in one way or another."

If Blount does decide to enter the race, he first must win the Republican primary and former Rep. James D. Martin, defeated in a try for the governorship in 1966, also plans to seek the GOP Senate nomination.

THERE ALSO in speculation that Sparkman might face a strong Democratic primary fight of his own in May, pitted against a candidate backed by Gov. George M. Wallace.

Although Sparkman has not formally announced his candidacy, on Oct. 28, only a day before Blount's resignation, he remarked that "I have said all along that I am running. It is my plan at the proper time to announce my candidacy," probably about Jan. 20 when Alabama Democrats meet to plan the state's next primary.



SEN. JOHN SPARKMAN
Makes rounds in Alabama

The senator's aides say he already is laying campaign plans.

Sparkman's age —he would be 78 at the end of another term —is expected to be something of a factor along with his health. But aides insist neither age nor health can be a significant issue.

Sparkman does have Alabama political tradition on his side. Alabama senators have, with the exception of Heflin, either died in office or retired since ratification of the 17th Amendment in 1913 allowing voters to elect them directly.

EVEN HEFLIN probably would have been re-elected if he had not broken with political orthodoxy in the 1928 election.

Refusing to support Al Smith —"a wet Catholic"—at the Democratic Convention, Heflin bolted his party to back Herbert Hoover, incurring the wrath of the state's Democratic establishment.

Retaliating, the establishment put its power behind Bankhead, who beat Heflin easily.

Charles Evers was defeated overwhelmingly in his bid to become the first black governor of Mississippi, but declared his candidacy showed that racial progress had been made. "Whites and blacks are going tolook at each other differently now, as citizens," said Evers, the mayor of Fayette. "I've proved that a black man can run for office in Mississippi without getting shot, without getting killed."

White moderate William "Bill" Waller, the man who prosecuted the slayers of Evers' brother, Medgar, and who defeated Charles Evers for the governorship, declared racism "will no longer be a part of our political spectrum."

IN ANOTHER gubernatorial race, Kentucky voters returned the Democrats to power by electing Lt. Gov. Wendell H. Ford to succeed outgoing Gov. Louie Nunn.

Philadelphia and Clevelandelected "law and order" candidates as mayors while Mayor Kevin White of Boston won re-election by forging a coalition of blacks and Italian-Americans, and Mayor Joseph Alioto of San Francisco shrugged off a federal indictment and a civil lawsuit to gain another term.

A federal appeals court refused environmentalists' pleas to block Cannikin—the five-megaton underground nuclear test on Amchitka Island in the Aleutian chain. Despite vigorous protests in Canada and the United States and despite contentions by some that the test could cause a tidal wave or trigger an earthquake. President Nixon gave the go-ahead for the test Saturday, saying it was necessary for national security. The test—250 times more powerful than the bomb dropped on Hiroshima, is to test warheads for the Spartan antiballistic missile system.

IN WASHINGTON, the House Banking and Currency Committee voted to require employers to pay raises called for in labor contracts in effect before the wage-price freeze. President Nixon said the committee move was "damaging," and he would fight it.

Many liberal Democrats joined southerners and Republicans in a House vote to prevent the use of federal funds for busing children for the purpose of integrating schools.

In the Senate, the Foreign Relations Committee took the first step toward approving a foreign aid program which had been unexpectedly rejected by the full Senate last week. The committee approved two foreign aid bills, one for economic assistance and the other for military aid, which totaled $2.3 billion—$1.2 billion less than the Nixon administration had asked for.

THE SENATE Judiciary Committee opened hearings into the fitness of President Nixon's nominees — Lewis F. Powell and William H. Rehnquist — to serve on the Supreme Court.

A bill to stop all pollution of waterways by 1985 was approved 86-0 by the Senate.

A cablegram to U. N. Secretary General Thant from Peking's Foreign Minister Chi Peng-fei announced the names of 10 men who will fill the seats vacated by ousted Nationalist China.

In the Vietnam war, American troop cuts left 196,700 men in the war zone last week, 12,700 more than Nixon's Dec. 1 withdrawal goal. Defense Secretary Melvin Laird talked with South Vietnamese leaders about further reductions to 40,000 men within six to eight months. The U.S. Command announced the death toll for the week before was two Americans killed in action, the lowest since the United States began itscombat role in 1965.

THE DEATH toll climbed this week in the conflict in Nyrthern Ireland with the deaths of two plainclothes policemen, shot with machineguns in a Belfast boutique. Others killed, including guardsmen and snipers, brought to 120 the number slain in this year's violence.

A devastating cyclone struck India's Orissa state last weekend, and as the death count slowly rose to at least 10,000 by Thursday, another possible storm began building up off the Bay of Bengal.

Car Repair Fraud Bill To Senate

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — Legislation to protect car owners against fraud in the $2.5 billion-a-year auto repair industry unanimously passed the Assembly today.

The bill by Sen. Anthony Beilenson, D-Beverly Hills, was approved 57-0 with no debate and sent to the Senate for concurrence in Assembly amendments.

Beilenson has said the bill is aimed at halting "gross incompetency —the shops which don't do their jobs time after time."

His measure would require licensing of auto repair dealers under a self-financing agency within the Department of Consumer Affairs. The agency would be similar to one which now licenses television repair dealers.

After June 30, 1972, it would be unlawful to be an auto repair dealer without being licensed.

Licenses would cost $25 to $50 and could be suspended or revoked for fraud or negligence.

Other grounds which could cause a dealer to lose his license included making false promises to induce a customer to have his car repaired and "any willful departure from or disregard of accepted trade standards for good and workmanlike repair."

The measure also provided for fines up to $1,000 and jail sentences up to six months for violations of its provisions.

When Beilenson's bill passed the Senate, it set up the auto licensing bureau within the Department of Motor Vehicles (DMV) but that provision was changed in an Assembly committee over the objections of automobile dealers.

The dealers contended that would constitute "dual regulation" since the DMV already partially regulates them.

Supporters of the bill argued, however, that the dealers wanted to have enforcement under the DMV because the dealers felt it would be more lenient.

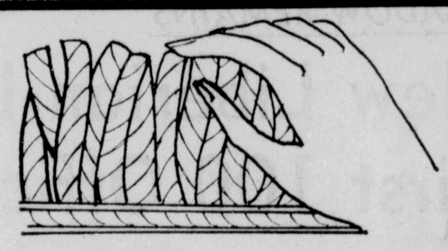
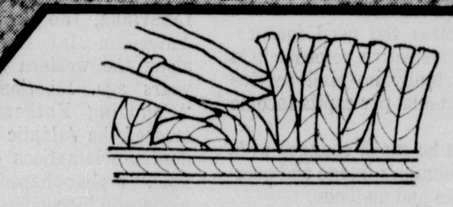
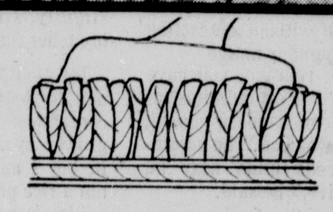
The Emporium E OUR 75th YEAR



Worth more! Programmed wool is a new kind of broadloom wool pile. Richer, thicker, livelier, and it's obvious to the eye and to the feel. Tuft for tuft, there's more of the fiber you want most in carpetings—pure wool!



Worth more! Programmed wool pile is worth more because extra buoyance means extra long wear life. The Programmed Pile process gives wool an even greater ability to bounce back under traffic. Extra crimp is added to the wool yarns for keeps. Crimped wool remains crush-resistant and gives years longer wear.



Worth more! Programmed pile wool carpet takes less effort to clean. Requires minimal care to maintain original beauty. Worth more, too, because colors are brighter from the reflected light of the richer crimped wool with more surface to reflect. Colors are intensified. See them at The Emporium nearest you!

Mailliard — Busy Yet "Alone" At Job

Demands Of Post Cut Spare Time

The life of a congressman is a busy one as all might expect, but for Marin County's Representative William S. Mailliard it also is a rather lonely one, too.

That is not to say he does not meet many, many people or spend considerable time surrounded by colleagues. He does, and that is the problem, for his obligations leave him little time for his family and even less time to be with and cultivate close friends.

Even during hs brief summer vacation back in Marin County where he was born and reared, the demands upon him to appear before organizations and to meet with constituents left him little enough time to relax in the company of his wife, Millicent.

THIS aloneness demands a deep-seated sense of self-reliance and confidence, a quality obviously inherited from his pioneering forbeares, that appears to have come down through four Marin County generations.

His great grandfather Adolph Mailliard travelled "around the horn" from New Jersey to settle what was to be known as the Mailliard Ranch in Marin in the 1850's, bringing with him Jersey cows and thoroughbred stallions.

The Mailliard family has had its roots in Marin County ever since, Bill being born in Belvedere on June 10, 1917. And, old Adolph Mailliard's influence seems to have imbued the entire family with such old-fashioned virtues as graciousness, patience, the obligation of service to the community and a type of dogged determination to see a job through.

Upon encountering the congressman, one can easily envision a household of boys reared — and frequently reprimanded — with the Victorian niceties.

SUCH family traits are quite evident in Mailliard's brothers, as well; James, a businessman and San Fancisco Supervisor, and John Ward Mailliard, III, also a businessman and active civic leader.

There is a shyness about Mailliard that would appear incongruous for a Congressman and often is interpreted by people who don't know him as a reserve or aloofness.

He has little aptitude for small talk. He speaks quietly but precisely, and with a certainty which comes from having thought out in advance what he is going to say. His fastidious dress only adds to the appearance of conservativeness, all of which is misleading.

Within the privacy of his own mind and his own time, his interests are as multiple — and some boyish — as they are varied.

HE HAS an outstanding collection of recordings, ranging from opera which he dearly loves to modern rock, a subject on which he can hold his own with his children and their friends.

When the opportunity permits, he is an avid horseman and loves to hunt and fish. But the old bugaboo of "so little time" does not allow him to pursue these outdoor activities except only sporadically.

His greatest source of relaxation and escape is science fiction of which he is a prolific and voracious reader. He was even inspired to write two science fiction books which he modestly reports, "I hid away for they're pretty bad."

Weekdays in the Capitol begin around 6:30 a.m. for Congressman Mailliard in his Georgetown house, with breakfast with his wife and school-age children: Julia, Josephine and Victoria Leigh. His eldest son, Bill Jr., is married and lives in Greenbrae while his son Ward resides in Cotati. Daughter Antoinette lives in San Francisco and his next oldest daughter Kristina is at UC Santa Cruz.

IT IS at breakfast that Mailliard is able to take up family problems and discuss social engagements with his wife, Milly.

At 8 a.m. he is in his offices in the Rayburn Building where the never-ending responsibilities begin, with a staff of just eight people.

He msut go over the mail and intercede in problems of his many constituents. Matters such as military service-related problems concerning families, questions of immigration, requests for Federal grants to cities in his district and in his state, and petitions for special Congressional bills cross his desk, daily.

THEN, there is the continuous flow of requests from individuals and organizations on legislative matters. Delegations of businessmen and civic leaders "from home" call upon him for Federal aid or assistance to their communities or to seek support of conservation and anti-pollution controls in their areas.

He is frequently on the telephone with cabinet members and under-secretaries lobbying for various programs, or with other congressmen seeking support for, or defeat of pending legislation. He msut apprise himself of the views of his constituents, of the press and of Congressional colleagues on any bill he is introducing. The paper work is tremendous; the research on proposed legislation staggering.

And, of course, as ranking member of the Foreign Affairs Committee, he must continually familiarize himself with international problems and the many requests from all corners for foreign affairs legislation.

ALL OF this must be attended to before 10 a.m. when, in Congress, committee meetings begin, and, there is hardly a morning when the congressman does not have a committee meeting to attend, as he is a member of The House Committee on Merchant Marine and Fisheries and its various subcommittees in addition to the Foreign Affairs Committee.

He also carries the responsibilities of Vice Chairman of the California Delegation, Chairman of the California Republican Delegation, and Congressional Advisor to the United Nations Committee on Peaceful Uses of Seabed and Ocean Floor Beyond the Limits of National Jurisdiction.

There is seldom time for lunch!

The afternoon is taken up with the House of Representatives, which traditionally convenes at noon, with its steady stream of debates, discussions and votes.

IF THE House adjourns at 6 p.m., it is fortunate only in that it gives the Congressman time to return to his office for another hour or two of work and organization of the next day.

If there is homework to do on a new piece of legislation, an upcoming vote or the gathering and analyzing of reports, he will stay at the office until 10 or 11 p.m.

He will not take his work-home.

"I find it difficult to concentrate in the comfort of my home, impossible to secrete myself from my family, and it is totally unfair to my wife," he declares.

However, during the week nights, the Mailliards are much sought-after guests at Washington dinner parties, at which the only things truly social are the amenities, the cuisine and the relaxed atmosphere. But, such dinner parties do afford a time, place and means of communication with members of the Cabinet and Administration, and foreign diplomats.

BOTH the courtesies of reciprocating and for the same reasons to meet and discuss issues with diplomats and Administration officials, the Mailliards also do a great deal of entertaining. On such occasions, Mailliard knows enough to stay away from home until the time of his guests' arrival. "Milly is an extremely efficient and gracious hostess, but she doesn't want me underfoot."

The Washington, D.C. dinner parties are geared to legislative hours, seldom beginning before 8 p.m. and ending around 11, so that the "Capitol Hill folk" are able to get a good night's rest. Mailliard is usually in bed by 1 a.m. (He rarely attends purely social affairs!)

He may lay awake for an hour or so going over problems that will confront him "tomorrow" or formulating questions about issues and requests, but he does not fret over "what happened today."

IN THE nearly 20 years he has been in the United States Congress, Mailliard has disciplined himself not to "chew his insides out" over bills passed which he has fought and felt fundamentally wrong, or over the passage of legislation which he has opposed in committees.

"The only thing you can do is accept the will of the majority and then go about the business of quietly seeking to change or alter bills through the proper channels — which is what the democrtic process is all about," he philosophizes.

An occasional invitation from the White House to attend a breakfast or luncheon with the President can and does throw Mailliard's calendar off, increasing the backlog of work. Who can send "regrets" to the President?

But, comes Friday, and the world of Washington D.C. turns off for the Congressman. The weekends are reserved for the family and friends.

TO INSURE these few precious hours of family privacy, the Mailliards have purchased a country home in Bluemount, Va. where the family whisks off Friday evenings or early Saturday mornings, to remain secluded until Monday.

"The spot is as close as you can come to Marin County 3,000 miles away on the East Coast, but some of the Virginia terrain is quite similar," he mused.

The Virginia house is anything but tranquil wilth the Mailliard children and their friends from school, but the sounds are far different from the Halls of Congress — and refreshing.

AND, WHAT may seem strange to many a husband, the Congressman enjoys mowing his lawns; but he has a "putt-putt" lawn mower which he can drive about. "I suppose it represents some yeep-seated desire to be a sports car driver," he'll explain to friends as he pases by at a torrid half-mile an hour.

Although a golf course is nearby, the congressman is self-conscious about playing. "It's been so long and I have played so infrequently that I'm afraid to make a foll of myself on a course in front of everyone," he grins.

But, like many men, he turns a mean hand on the barbecue and loves to "create" in the kitchen when his wife will let him. She does the cleaning up; a familiar story for many a housewife.

preciative of good food and is a connoisseur of wines and a staunch advocate of California wines, in particular, "and not just because I'm from California."

"I THINK our premium California wines are as good as any in the world and often better than most imported into the United States."

In fact, he is immodestly proud of his efforts in exposing California wines to Washington D.C. and encouraging their use in the White House.

"There is a store in the Capital where most of the Congressmen purchase their wines and liquors and when I first came to Washington, there was not one bottle of California wine sold there. After harassing the store with my requests, there is now a very large selection of California wines and a great volume of sales."

Foreign lands have always held an interest for Mailliard and visits to other countries are now a part of his responsibilities.

"I TRAVEL a lot as a member of the Foreign Affairs Committee, but those quick three to five day trips visiting one or more countries in a day are anything but a pleasure," he explains.

When Congress is not in session, Mailliard returns home and to his district office in San Francisco where the routine is pretty much the same, except the afternoons are filled with appointments.

Has Congress changed in the nearly 20 years he has been in office? Mailliard thinks so.

"Knowing what I know now, I'm not sure if starting out today I would want the responsibility," he mused.

"For one thing the work load and the responsbilities on the individual congressman as well as upon the Congress as a whole have multiplied tremendously as the complexities and problems of government on all levels have increased.

FOR ANOTHER, many of the issues before Congress revolve around highly complex technologies which require a tremendous amount of research and review by everyone before consideration and discussion can even be given in the House. And, of course, there is a much greater urgency for the members of Congress as things must keep pace with the demands of the citizenry."

"I also think the electorate is much more sophisticated, today, particularly the young people, far more so than when I was a youth," the congressman observed.

"There are, of course, a number of people in political office who thrive on theatrics and flamboyance, but I think young people are listening more to what you have to say and not just the noise; and also are more aware of what you do and how you vote on issues."

RECALLING his first years in Congress, Mailliard observed that it is very difficult to be effective until you find the key people to work with and come to know them, and this takes several years. "If a young congressman attempts to go it alone, he can't accomplish anything — which I suppose is true for all of life."

"I gues that's my cue to add that the voters have an investment in me," he chided, "but that's true for all congressmen who have served more than one term."

"It's really not senority on committee, but coming to know the ins and outs and how to get things done for your district."

Mailliard has no plans or thoughts of retirement, yet, "but when I do it will be back in Marin County and we're looking for property now . . . it's hard to shake your roots and when they are in Marin County, who would want to — everybody wants to move there."

"I just hope the prices don't go up."

AS FOR any political ambitions of his children, "I don't think they have any, now, but then I didn't either 24 years ago."

One thing is certian: This is the most time Mailliard has given any interviewer about himself and some night this week he will have to make it up in his office.

Surjit Singh: Teacher And Philosopher

Profile Of A Marinite

Surjit Singh's office, on the campus of San Francisco Theological Seminary (SFTS) in San Anselmo, is a small library.

He is on sabbatical this year and can usually be found behind the stacks of books on his desk.

The comely, unpretentious philosophy professor lends credence to the cliche that a good teacher's door is always open to his student.

He is easy to talk with, a sensitive man whose 27 years of teaching, five books, and ability to lecture from memory without notes, qualify him as an expert in philosophy.

THIS FALL Singh began his twenty-second year on the faculty of the Presbyterian seminary. His career began in 1951 when he was invited to teach at SFTS for one year, then asked to remain and head the Jesse Hays Baird Chair of Christian Philosophy.

The 53-year-old clergyman was born in Punjab, a north Indian state near Kashmir. His parents were members of the Sikh religion, which Singh describes as a break away group from Hindus and Muslims.

He attended a high school staffed by Indian Christians and American missionaries. And at age 17, through "personal search" and the influence of his teachers he converted to Christianity. Personal search to Singh meant "a quest for meaning for life and for a sense of direction."

HE WAS ordained to the ministry by the United Church of North India, of which Presbyterians are a cooperating body.

Singh has earned five degrees, including bachelors in philosophy and divinity; masters of sacred theology and philosophy; and a doctor of philosophy. He was an honor graduate of the University of Punjab and did graduate study at Emmanuel College of the University of Toronto, Pittsburgh Theological Seminary, Union Theological Seminary, Columbia University and the Hartford Seminary Foundation of Hartford, Conn. His theology professors included the late Paul Tillich and the late Reinhold Niebuhr.

He taught for six years at the United Theological College at Saharanput, India, and it was his first sabbatical that brought him to Marin County.

HE HAS been national secretary to the Student Christian Movement in New Zealand and India, Burma and Ceylon, traveling extensively for the group.

Singh's community involvement extends as far back as his college days when he worked in the slums of his city, giving financial counseling to poor people exploited by money lenders.

His summers were spent in Simla, a resort town, where he taught rickshaw coolies reading and writing.

He was active in India's major political party, the Congress Party, whose membership has included Mahatma Ghandi, the late Prime Minister Nehru and his daughter Prime Minister Indira Ghandi.

MARIN County has been the beneficiary of the community awareness. Singh has been president of the Marin County United Nations Organization, chairman of San Anselmo's annual town meeting; president of the Parent-Teacher Association at Sir Francis Drake High School (where his 17-year-old son is a student) and a member of the Rotary Club.

He was chairman of an ad hoc committee which thrashed out administrative and educational problems in the Tamalpais District High School. Many of the suggestions of that committee are the basis for pilot projects in operation at Drake High.

Singh says he did not plan to stay at SFTS when he came. But during his 20 years he has witnessed significant changes in the seminary students, and his teachers have been "as much my teacher as I have been their teacher."

ACCORDING to Singh, the most enjoyable part of teaching is exploring with small groups of students "the frontiers of thought patterns and being a team with them to explore this world of ideas."

Singh's philosophy of life is centered by "the fact of relation. Personally to me, a relation to God is primary. Upon this is the relation of man to man as a person to person and after that, man to woman. In Christ is the meeting place of God and man."

The non-religious person can see in Christ how one being "lived in the situations he did and triumphed," he says. "In some sense there is a commonality to the human predicament."

Perhaps the most invaluable lesson his students have taught him is the importance of human relationship.

"IN THE pursuit of philosophical ideas, where I would be more abstract, they help me be concrete. Students remind me that they are warm bodies and that the real stuff of life comes from cultivating human relationships. Their idealism and youth is a safeguard against the aging process and cynicism."

Singh says the contemporary seminary student tends to attribute his vocational choice to personal experience and the experience of others rather than the traditional "call into the ministry."

"Along with this is a corresponding change," Singh says. "The contemporary student is more aware of himself, his environment and the things which make and break human beings, including politics and social movements. He feels very keenly that the Christian faith has a serious stake in the day to day affairs of life. I think this is a change for the better. What is now more important is the real nitty gritty of life."

SINGH would caution idealistic youth who jump feet first into a movement without giving it sufficient thought. "Their participation will be short and their disappointment great."

Singh considers the church the viable institution for change in society but he believes it must "create flexibility in its structure so that the young people could move within the structure."

America's contention that it is youth oriented is "more a state of mind than an actuality," Singh says.

"We say this is a young nation but most of the affairs are controlled by older people." The channels that would ease young people into positions of responsibility and make the structure more flexible are necessary, he said.

"WHEN it comes to giving the power to youth we (adults) want to think it over. Granting the 18-year-olds the vote will be a real test of the nation's cultural pliability because young people will have a part in changing the structure."

Because he is a member of "an ethnic minority" he can empathize with minorities in this country.

Singh believes that the country's major problem is "how to become a union. This has been the perennial problem and we have been making progress. At this stage the manifestation is the achievement of common understanding between majority and minorities and more specifically between blacks and whites."

"IF SOCIETY can solve this problem it can become the most promising society on the face of the earth. It is my hope that there are both moral and spiritual resources in society. If they can be harnessed with urgency this country can resolve this (racial) problem as it has resolved many other problems."

Singh speaks of America — its beauty and ugliness — as though it were his country, even though he, his wife and their two daughters are still Indian citizens. His son is American by birth.

Early next year he will go home for several months visit. He is now writing a monograph on the development of his thought which will be published in the India Thinker Series now being produced. He has also been invited by the Indian Institute for the Study of Religion and Society to write a monograph on the development of his thought to be published in the India Thinker Series now being produced.

A Broker's Look At Second Deeds

Loan Broker Tells Of Potential

"How To Make Money Safely — Second Deeds of Trust" doesn't sound like the title of a best selling book, but it could be a money maker for the reader.

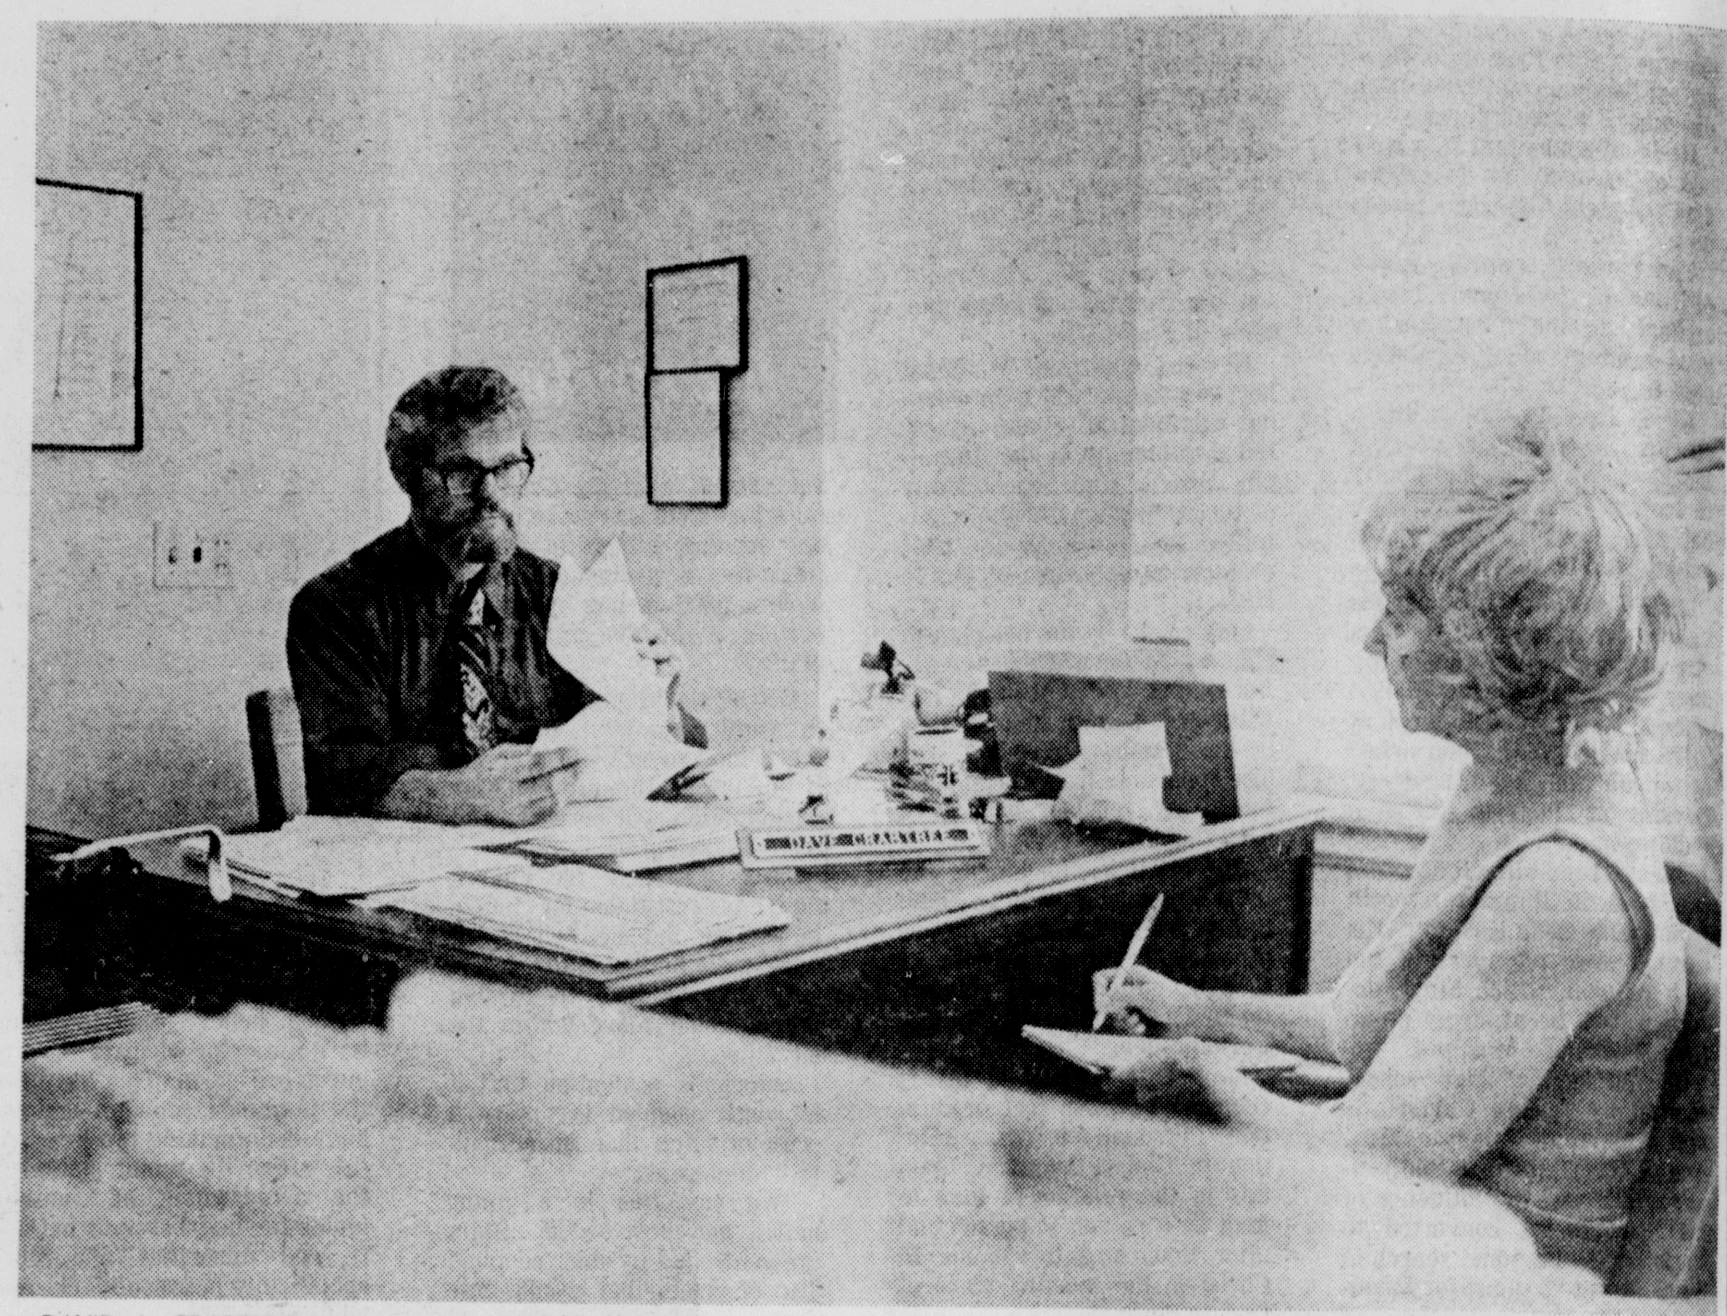
At least, the co-author, David J. Crabtree, a San Rafael loan broker, believes it will make the layman aware of the potential of second deeds of trust for investment.

Seated in his office at S and C Home Loans at the Albert Building, he commented "second loans are nothing new," but have never gained "prominence as an investment source for a private individual."

THE PURPOSE of the book, written by Crabtree and Barney G. Glaser, formerly of Mill Valley, is stated in the preface: "To make private investors aware of the increasing opportunity available to them by investing in second deeds of trust."

Crabtree described investment in second deeds as "a serious type of investment in a safe, sound manner," and advised "it isn't a get rich overnight sort of thing."

Private investments tripled in California between 1953-63, and are needed in the real estate economy, Crabtree said. "We're doing for the private investor, what savings and loans were doing 10 years ago," he said.



DAVID J. CRABTREE, a partner in S and C. Home Loans of San Rafael, and assistant Sue Higbee, tackle the work load at the office in the Albert Building. Crabtree, co-author of a book on second deeds of trust, is a proponent of second deeds as a investment.

Crabtree cautioned however, that he was recommending such investment for those who have "financial strength . . . a certain amount of liquid assets available."

FOR example, he said, a retired woman on a limited income, wouldn't appear to be a potential investor, he said. "When a man is in his productive years and income at its peak . . . that's the time to think about it."

He advised that investors "deal with a professional who knows the business and all aspects of service and what to do when problems arise."

Crabtree advocated putting dormant assets to work such as a home. For instance, he said, a man who has $21,000 invested in a $35,000 home, "will beat his brains out to make more money, will send his wife out to work and she working to pay income tax."

If the man took out a loan against his home, and invested in second deeds of trust, he would be in a stronger financial position, he declared.

THERE IS a reluctance to borrow, which is a hangover from the past, Crabtree said. "People fail to realize the economy is changing, and we living in a credit society with the government saying 'borrow'."

As for returns, he said, "We can only promise what the note calls for, and 10 per cent is the maximum rate allowable."

There are always risks since the "real estate economy is one of the footballs," he commented. "There are some who make bad investments because they get greedy. We can only advise."

Crabtree said there is a tendency for people to be "afraid of the unknown," but hopes that the book will help to introduce people to second deeds of trust for investment.

The book is now being used in junior colleges as a textbook and is in the Marin County Real Board of Realtors library. It is the only book of its kind in that it is the only one devoted entirely to second deeds of trust, he said.

IN THE preface, the authors say: "This book will, we trust, end much confusion on such matters as the difference between mortgages and deeds of trust as security for first and second home loans, and the different degrees or risk and returns involved in each form of investment.

Crabtree, who formerly was a real estate salesman, said he realized he could make more sales by getting clients into homes with smaller down payments.

"I became aware of the need for additionel outside financing sources to supplement the institutional monies," he said.

IN HIS search, he learned "this additional financing source in second deeds of trust in conjunction with the little or no down GI and minimum FHA program provided the vehicle that made those additional sales possible," he reported.

Then private investors became more aware of the opportunity to invest surplus capital in second loans, he said.

"Prices were increasing at a fast pace, demands high, ready buyers with resources were ready to take advantage of the opportunity to buy on the installment plan. Increased demands resuled in added earnings for these investors," he said.

"The Realtor increased his volume and increased his earnings. A buyer was able to make a purchase with a small down payment which he sold later at a substantial profit. All parties benefitted."

After about seven to eight years as a salesman-broker, he began to specialize in real estate financing, he said.

HE AND Glaser came to the conclusion there was a need for information on second deeds of trust to be made available to the layman, Crabtree said.

The theories of the loan broker and the investor were combined to develop a more complete and accurate evaluation of the subject, he explained.

The book, he siad, "informs the investor how to invest safely, the borrower how to borrow intelligently; and the loan broker, Real Estate broker the effective procedures to follow for a successful business."

From the borrower's standpoint, Crabtree asked rhetorically . . . "Why do property owners borrow on second deeds

Private Investments On The Rise

of trust, rather than some other source?"

"MAINLY, it is a question of costs involved for the borrower. He can borrow on this basis, avoid disturbing his present low interest first deed of trust, eliminate pre-payment penalties, new loan fees, title fees, etc., which can result in costs of $1,000 to $2,000, depending on the amount of loan involved.

"Even though he would have to pay a higher interest rate on the second loan and a loan brokerage commission he still saves over the long haul, due to the fact that the higher interest rate is on a smaller amount." For example, to go from a $15,000 at eight per cent, deducting costs, makes the second deed of trust proposition more feasible."

Crabtree, who also gives talks on learning how to plan investments more efficiently, stresses, diversification and "liquidity" of assets.

ON TAX shelters, he said, "Many individuals have reached the income level where they find themselves in an income bracket which takes from 20 to 30 per cent and in some cases more of their earnings."

In such cases, he said, "to add an investment that brings in additional income through interest earnings, will only increase the tax picture."

Instead an investor "could have developed an investment that would allow additional earnings with proper tax shelter."

Crabtree also stresses "growth potential," which can be realized when we can immediately re-invest principal and interest earning — without additions of outside capital and increase an overall investment portfolio.

"THE compounding factor becomes more meaningful and results in increased earnings," he said. "These increased earnings become more important and necessary during the retirement period when you can afford more income earnings as your set monthly income is reduced to a minimum amount and the added earnings won't hurt taxwise."

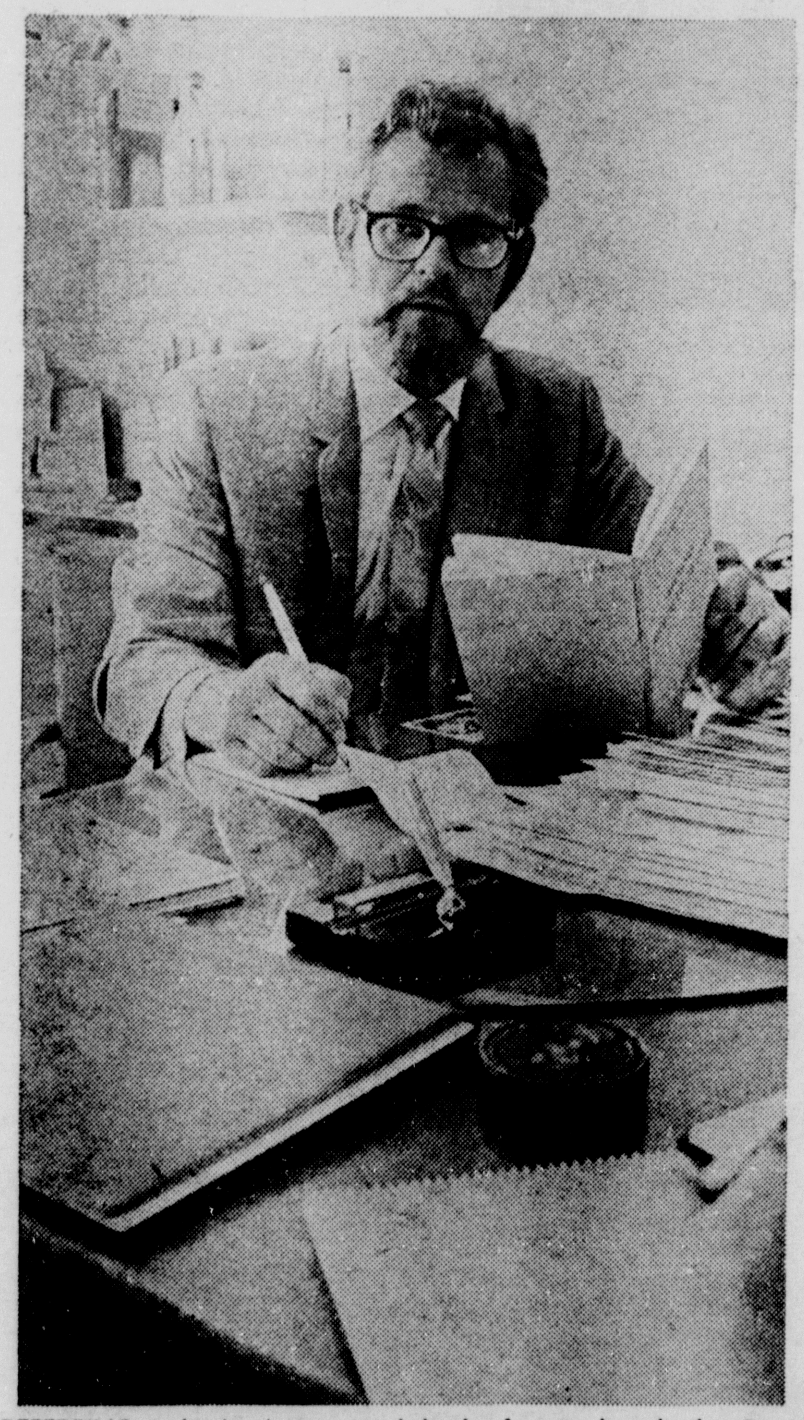
"Too often," Crabtree said, "individuals find themselves with all their eggs in one basket which leaves them indefensible against the adversities which may result from changing economic conditions."

Investors also must learn to make decisions when conditions demand them, Crabtree said. When you analyze the small percentage of individuals who have made a considerable amount of money over the years, you discover . . . "they were able to achieve success because they were able to make decisions."

"IF WE lack self confidence and are afraid to move, and worry and fret, when we do make a decision concerning money matters, then the process become even more painful," he said.

"To vacillate, procrastinate can consume a certain amount of time and energy, but never helped anyone make progress or money."

Crabtree, a partner in S and C Homes Loans, with B. D. Schulz, not only is eager to spread the word about second deeds, but frankly admits, he is also trying to make the firm "the largest" in the field.



REFERRING to his book on second deeds of trusts, loan broker David J. Crabtree makes a few notations at his office in San Rafael.

Corte Madera Proud Of Its Past

Early Day Residents Worked As Community

(Editor's Note: The Independent-Journal Marin Magazine is running a series of "state of our city" reports on Marin's municipalities, prepared by officials of those cities. This week's report on Corte Madera was submitted by Mayor Holmes S. Norville)

by HOLMES S. NORVILLE

Today, the Town of Corte Madera is visible evidence of seventy years of unflagging citizen interest in a community.

Its name is derived from early maps which designated the area in Spanish as "Corte Madera del Presidio". A free translation into English would be that the areas was the source of lumber and firewood for the Presidio of San Francisco.

In 1834, an Irishman named John Reed obtained a land grant from the Mexican governor in Monterey of that part of Corte Madera del Presidio extending one league from Point Tiburon to Arroyo Holon, now known as Baltimore Canyon in Larkspur. After a survey, Reed claimed one square league, about nine square miles, that was closest to Point Tiburon. The unclaimed land, extending roughly from Alto Hill to Baltimore Canyon became known as the Corte Madera Sobrentes; in English the Corte Madera leftovers.

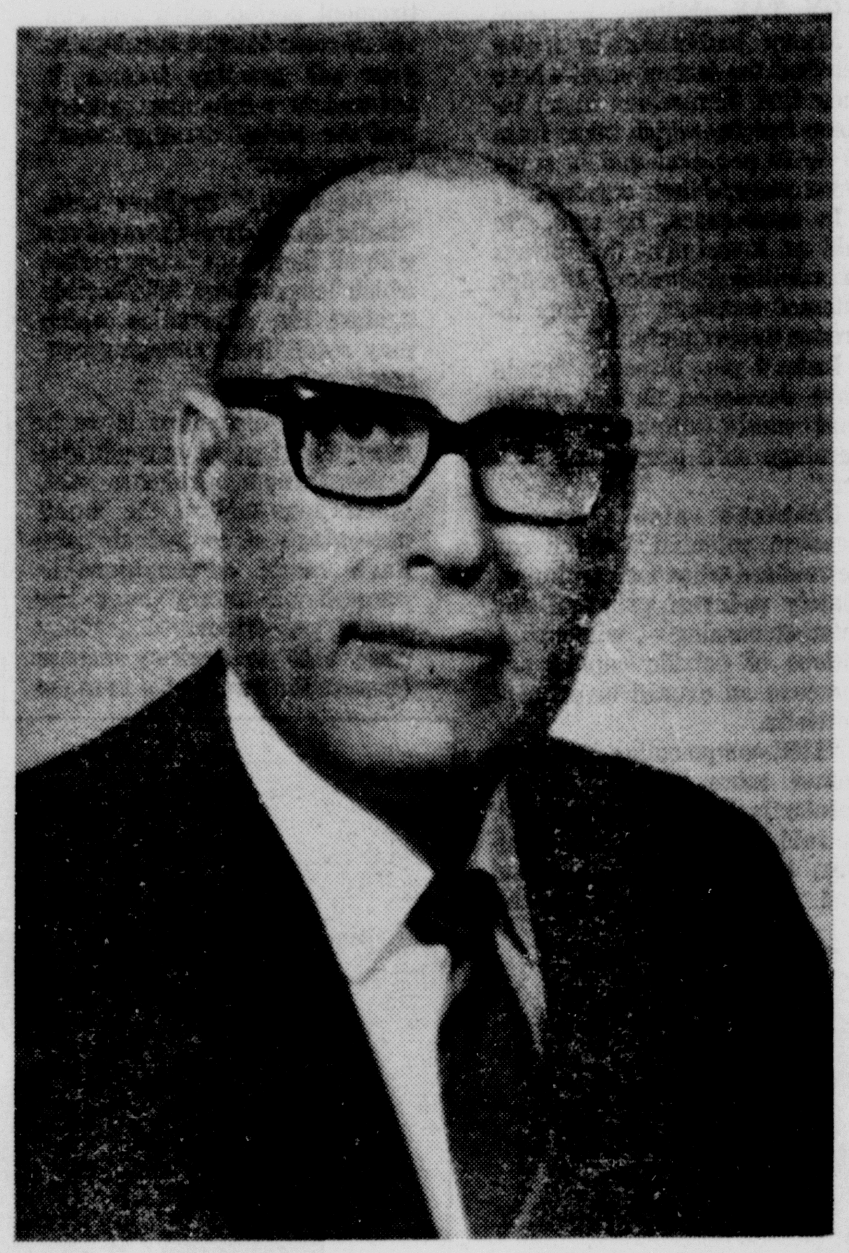
THESE leftovers, now identified by the familiar names of Meadowsweet, Stetson, Chapman and Christmas Tree Hill were included by Marin County in the "Township of Sausalito" until 1890 when they became a part of the "Township of San Rafael".

During the intervening years, a number of 160 acre tracts were homesteaded on the wooded slopes and grassy meadows, which were described in an 1891 real estate advertisement as follows: "in point of soil, climate, water view and vicinage to San Francisco, there is no place in the state more desirable." With improvements, the asking price was $400 per acre.

We have no doubt that eighty years later, the County Assessor considered this description and value in arriving at his 1971 property assessments.

In 1897, the heads of the less than one hundred families living in the area banded together to solve their sanitation and drainage problems. After much study and discussion, these citizens incorporated Marin County Sanitary District No. 2 in 1901, which in 1906 laid its first main sewer line that was to carry household wastes and surface rain water to the bay. This Sanitary District continues to perform this service, now as a department of the Town.

ALSO IN 1906, the Corte Madera Women's Club and the Corte Madera Volunteer Fire Department were organized to provide essential community services as their names imply. Both exist today and continue to work actively in their respective fields.



HOLMES S. NORVILLE
Corte Madera Mayor

By 1916, the community had grown to 500 public-spirited and far-sighted citizens who incorporated the area as the "Town of Corte Madera", a general law entity.

The Town Council, as the governing body, conducted its meetings along the lines of a New England Town Meeting. Every citizen was given the opportunity to speak at any meeting on subjects under discussion, or bring up new ones. That procedure is followed today.

The electorate believed in a pay-as-you-go policy, but relized that the cost of some necessary improvements had to be spread out over the years. It approved bond issues for street improvements, a fire alarm system and a fire truck while defeating proposals to build a town hall and fire station.

During its first 25 years of existence the population doubled to 1,095, but it was still a very small community.

FOLLOWING World War II, many people who had come to the Bay Area to work in war industry decided to remain in California and live in Marin County. Corte Madera got its share of them. The small orchards and pastures were turned into homesites and the influx of homeowners resulted in a great increase in services provided by the police, fire and street departments as well as the sanitary district and other utilities. When the lands above sea level were fully subdivided, developers turned to the tidal swamps for building sites.

In this situation, the importance of master planning and financial responsibility within established guidelines became of paramount importance. The Town Council took timely, positive action to achieve these ends by creating in 1947, a Planning Commission whose duties were to make adequate provision for and guide the future growth, development,

TOWN HALL, at Tamalpais Drive and Willow Avenue, once the old fire house was remodeled several years ago, and it, together with the nearby public safety building, combined to serve as a civic center for the community.

COLORFUL PARADES, such as the one shown above, during the celebration of the town's 50th anniversary in 1966, are a part of Corte Madera's history.

THEN A PASTORA' community, Corte Madera, as pictured in 1989, was later to attract an influx of San Franciscans after the 1906 earthquake.

Policy To Preserve Beauty Of The Area

beautification and efficient planning of the Town of Corte Madera.

By 1958, the volume of proposals submitted to this Commission required the creation of a Board of Design to foster the preservation of the natural beauty of the Townsite, prevent the indiscriminate clearing of property and the destruction of trees and shrubs, prevent excessive and unsightly grading of hillsides and insure that new uses and structures enhance their sites and harmonize with improvements in the surrounding area, and a Board of Adjustments, which was to promote the public health, safety and welfare, to further the objectives of the zoning plan and to do substantial justice.

MEMBERS were to be selected on the basis of education, training and experience in the fields of architecture, art, city planning or landscape architecture or other fields concerned with the design of cities and structures and open spaces therein.

There resided in the town citizens who met these qualifications and were willing to serve as members without compensation.

These public-spirited citizens devoted literally hundreds of hours to the preparation of a master plan, building codes and zoning regulations while reviewing innumerable plans and specifications submitted by land developers and builders. As advisors to the Council, they gave the town its pattern.

Preservation of the natural beauty of the town included in the above directive to the Board of Design was simply a restatement of a policy in effect since incorporation. One of the first official acts of the newly created Council in 1916 was to persuade the Northwestern Pacific Railroad to join in converting the unsightly surroundings of its Corte Madera station to a jointly maintained park. This exists today as Menke Park. Small plots of ground at street intersections were planted with flowering shrubs while the growth of weeds along the streets and in vacant lots was controlled by periodic cleanups.

IN ITS early days, outdoor recreation was readily available to the residents in the nearby waters of San Francisco Bay and the wooded slopes of Mount Tamalpais. But looking to the future, the Council purchased in 1939, specifically for park and recreational purposes, 23 acres of tidal swamp land east of Pixley Avenue and north of what is now Tamalpais Drive.

In 1952, the Council created a Park and Recreation Commission to investigate and report with regard to all park and recreation matters in an advisory capacity. The resulting program centered upon developing the swamp into 23 acres of greensward located in the heart of the Town.

This Town Park is now landscaped and equipped with tennis courts, a baseball diamond, children's playground, a fly-casting pool and picnic areas among other facilities. It is heartwarming to see the park used for family barbecues and the visitors on weekends total several thousand, coming from all over Marin County.

There are also Town-maintained playground facilities in several neighborhoods.

In recent years, the Town has provided a year-round supervised recreation program for all ages from tiny tots to senior citizens, joining with Larkspur for this purpose. For the 1971 Summer quarter, the schedule is quite varied.

FOR PRE-SCHOOL age children, there are play groups and classes in story-telling, tumbling and ballet dancing. For older youths, instruction is

NATURAL BEAUTY, as captured in the cover photo of the Town Park, is a heritage the Town of Corte Madera is working to preserve. In a report on the state of the city, Mayor Holmes S. Norville touches upon ecology as well as economy.

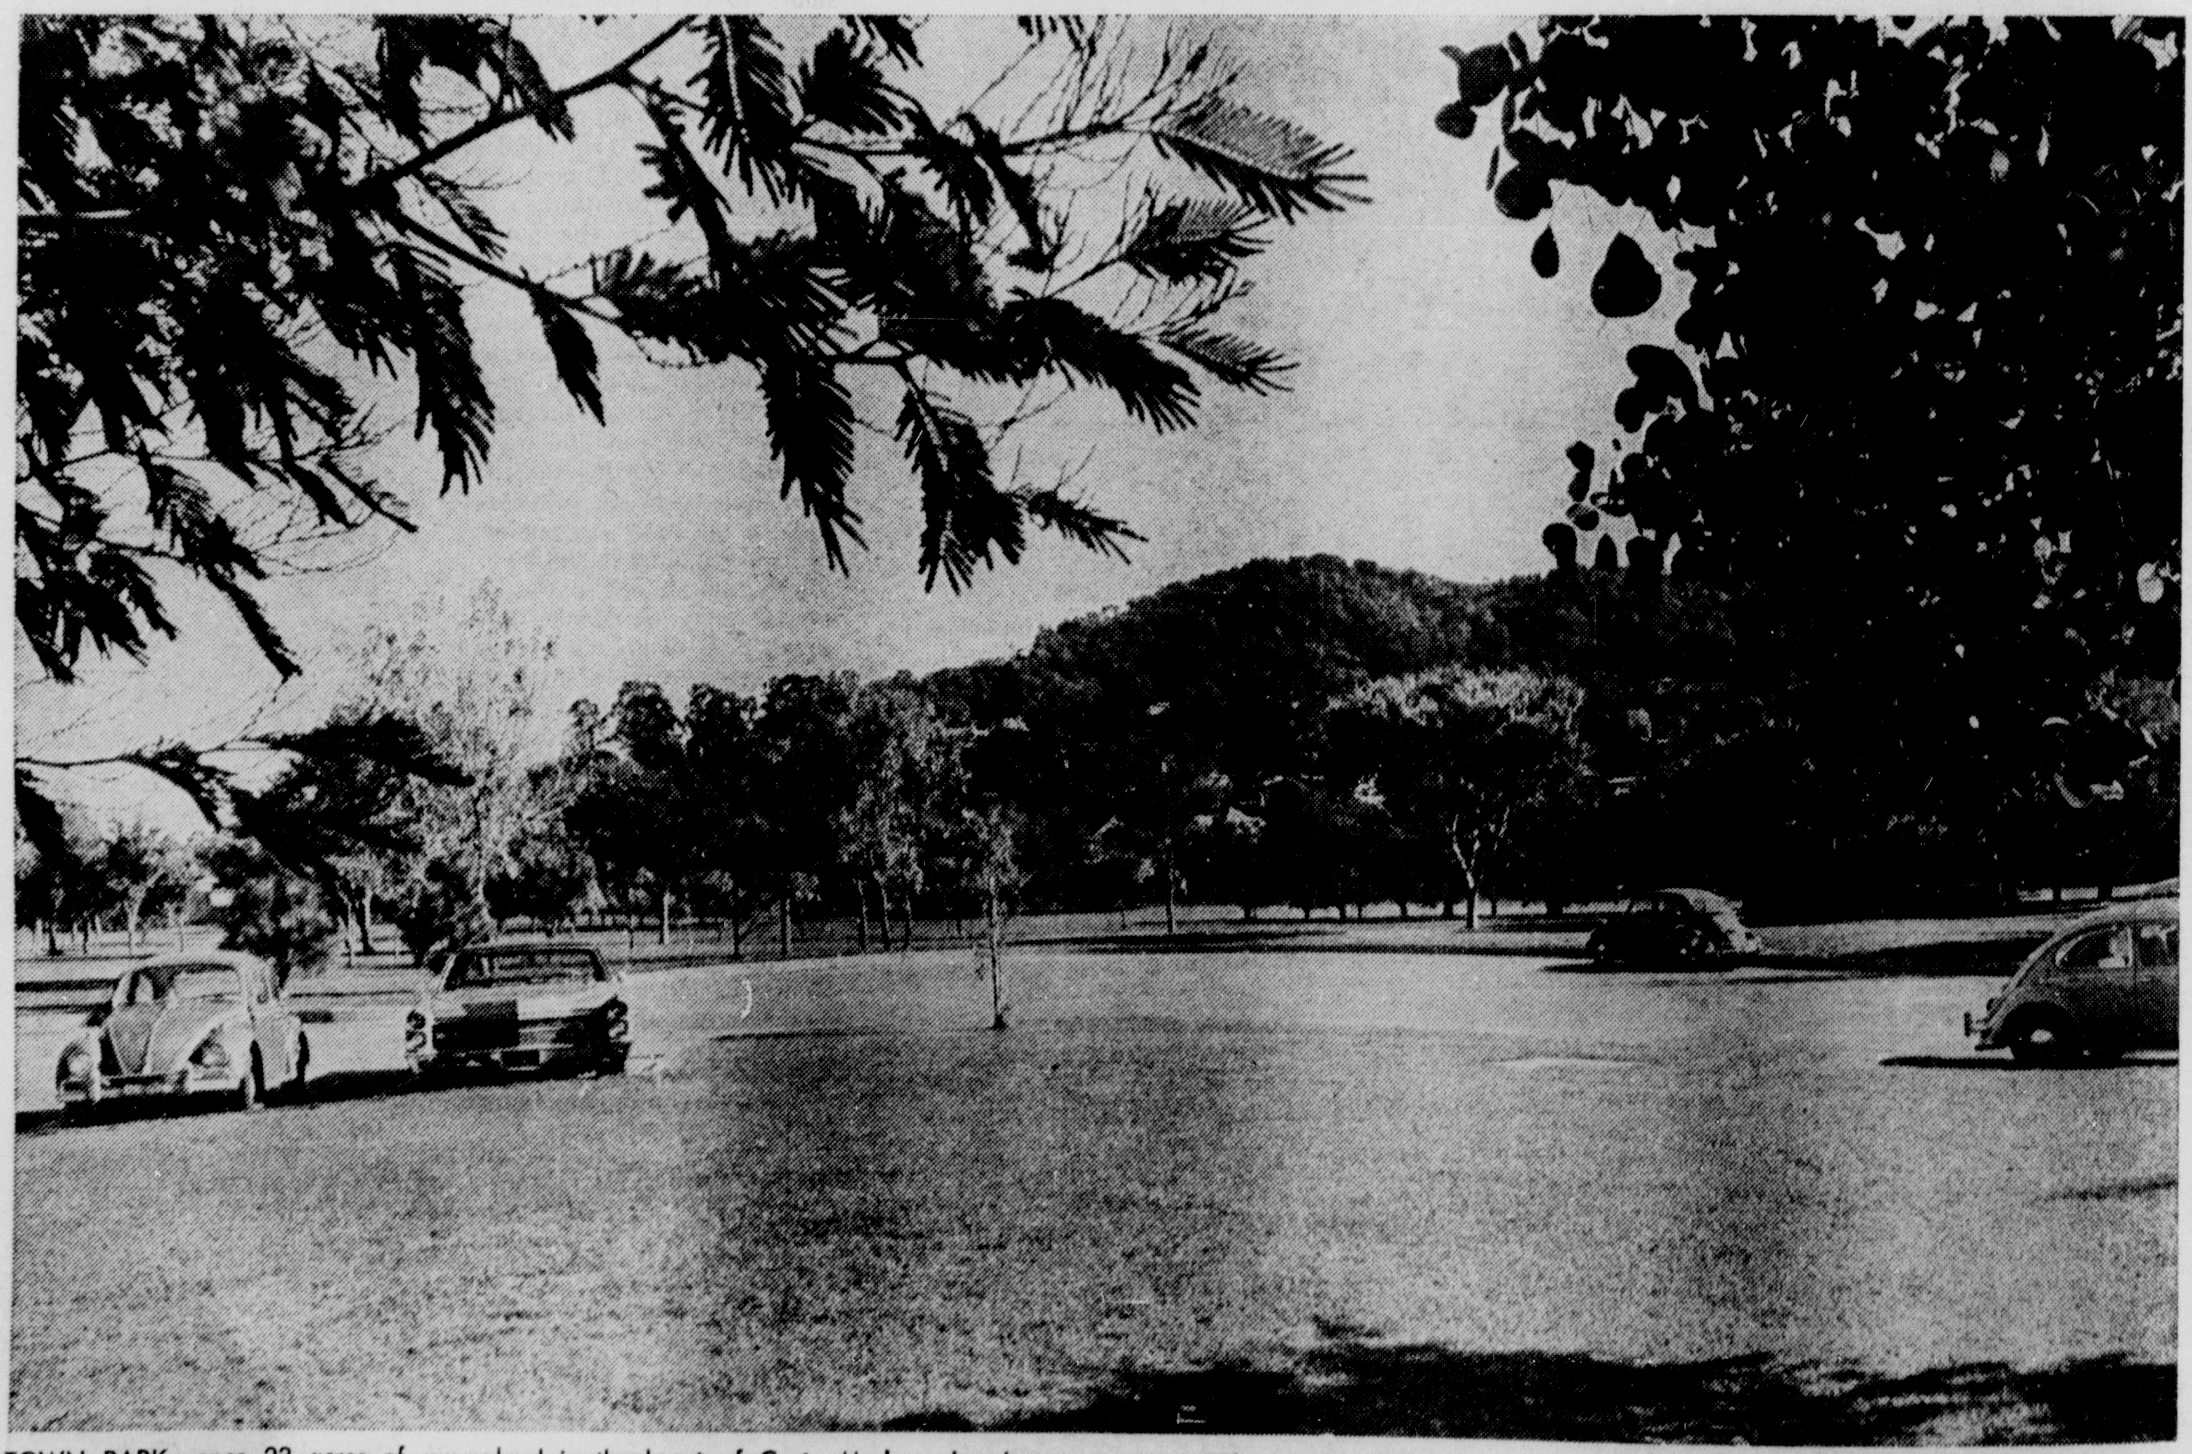
THE PUBLIC SAFETY BUILDING, at Tamalpais Drive and Pixley Avenue, which houses police and fire headquarters, is an attractive, low building that blends into the landscape near the city park. The red brick building stands close to the Town Hall, creating a Civic Center area in the heart of the community, and providing civic identity.



TOWN PARK, once 23 acres of swampland in the heart of Corte Madera, has been transformed into a recreational area that attracts residents and visitors from throughout Marin. There are barbecue pits and picnic areas along with recreational facilities that serve residents of all ages and the park provides a significant open space in the midst of development.

ON THE STEREO SCENE

By JOHN SUNIER

BERLIOZ: The Complete Songs with Orchestra, including "Les Nuits D'Ete" — Armstrong/Veasey/Patterson/Shirley-Quirk/London Symphony/Colin Davis — PHILIPS SAL 3789: Back to Berlioz and a lovely collection of pieces in a form which was an essential part of the composer's musical being. Of the 20 solo songs he wished to preserve, Berlioz wrote a version for solo voice and orchestra of eleven. These eleven are gathered together for the first time on record in this album. They include the six that make up the cycle "Les Nuits d'ete." The subject of the songs is romantic love in various degrees of involvement. Though the composer is known for his grandious orchestrations, in these songs he employs the orchestra with masterly subtlety, using more modest resources instrumentally. All four soloists are superb, and complete translations of the songs are included in the album.

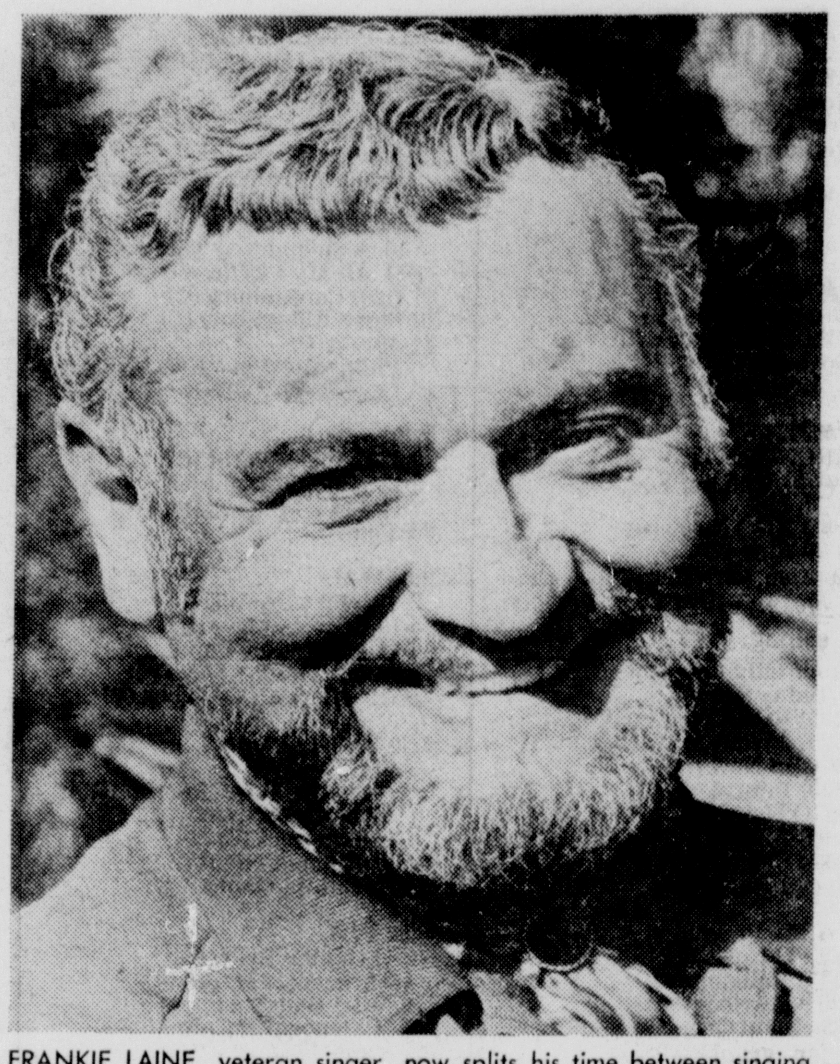
ELGAR: Enigma Variations; Cockaigne - London Symphony/Colin Davis — Philips PHS 900-140: The famous noble and expressive theme of the "Enigma Variations" has probably never had a more beautiful presentation on records than Davis'. And the remainder of the 14 variations uphold the stirring beginning. Davis makes this piece, which I personally long considered rather stodgy and boring, a quite exciting experience. The lengthy overture is a sort of musical portrait of Edwardian London Town. Again, above par stereo sound.

DVORAK: Symphony No. 7 in D Minor; Carnival Overture - London Symphony/Antal Dorati — MERCURY SR 90516: To condense the required Dvorak-symphony-numbering explanation to a sentence: This one used to be called No. 2. It doesn't get played or recorded much, but deserves attention for its many fine melodies and majestic moods. While the most serious work the composer had penned up to this time, the Seventh Symphony also has a warmth that is pure Dvorak.

THE NAKED CARMEN - Detroit Symphony/Paray/David Hess/Melba Moore/William Walker/Mary Bruce and Her Starbuds/Pig Iron/John Atkins/adapted from BIZET's "Carmen" by John Corigliano and David Hess — MERCURY SRM 1-604: This was one of the first "rock operas," having been out for some time now, but it failed to get the attention it deserved and I thought mention now might be worthwhile. The project grew out of discussions on expanding interest in classical music and the wish to produced an album from all worlds of music. Bizet's indestructible "Carmen" was chosen for the guinea pig and comes through virtually unscathed. The story is of course brought up-to-date, electric pianos and Moogs have their day in the new arrangements, and performers include stars from "Hair," the Met Opera, a children's tape dance troupe, a folksinger, and the entire Detroit Symphony fer god sakes.

The album is physically quite a trippy experience. Most of the artwork is collage material with a high sense of humor abounding. The new lyrics are included, and the whole album — with the small addition of some tacks and rubber bands — makes into a musical instrument!

Musically, my favorite tracks were the Marching Song (featuring kazoo solo), the Flower Song (as heard on a very scratchy old wind-up gramophone), and the Carmen Fantasette in which concert pianist John Atkins has a slight slip of memory (you see Escamillio is a longhair pianist rather than a toreador). Lots of fun for music listeners of all persuasions, and all ages.



FRANKIE LAINE, veteran singer, now splits his time between singing and his sports fishing boat since he moved to San Diego three years ago.

Frankie Laine Has Gained His Sea Legs

By VERNON SCOTT

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Italians are noted for singing and fishing, among other accomplishments, and Frankie Laine devotes six months of every year to each.

Laine's real name is Lo Vecchio. His parents were born in Sicily. Thus Frankie comes by his talents with legitimate credentials.

Laine not only sings for money — a great deal of it — he also fishes for money — a pittance.

HIS SINGING career blossomed 20 years ago with such hits as "I Believe," "Jezebel" and "Mule Train." Perhaps his biggest success was "My Desire," which is also the name of his 34-foot sports fishing boat.

When Frankie moved to San Diego three years ago he and his wife, former actress Nan Grey, knew nothing about boating or fishing.

"Every time we went out in the boat I got seasick," Laine said. "Finally I found a pill for pregnant women that worked. Now I never get seasick."

SOMEONE showed Frankie and Nan how to bait hooks and catch albacore, a high class tuna.

Suddenly the Laines became fishing nuts. When Frankie isn't on the road singing in the country's top nightclubs or cutting new recordings in Hollywood, he is on "My Desire" hauling in fish.

"I caught so many that we had them canned by a private company with my own sticker as a label," Frankie said. "Then I sent this great canned tuna to my friends for Christmas, birthdays and special occasions."

Frankie soon ran out of friends whose larders weren't stocked with his bounty from the sea.

WHEN HE began landing 50 20-pound albacore a day — with help from Nan, the boat's skipper and a guest or two — Frankie didn't know it but he was in the commercial fishing business.

"I got a commercial license," the singer said proudly. "One day this year we landed 85 big ones. I sell them to a local cannery now."

Flushed with success and pills for pregnant women, Frankie is having a new, larger boat built — "My Desire II", 45-feet long.

When the albacore aren't biting, Frankie and Nan land sailfish, marlin and an occasional shark. The latter they cut loose.

EVEN with the new boat Frankie doesn't plan to rely on fishing for income. "By the time I pay the skipper, fuel costs, dockage, equipment, bait and maintenance there is no real profit in fishing.

"But it's great sport and good fun."

Nor does Frankie dream of building a fishing fleet. "I'd rather sing than fish," he said defensively. "I think I'm a better singer than a fisherman. And anyhow, it pays better."

Garner Has Groovy Pad

By VERNON SCOTT

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Jim Garner, who began his climb to fame in television's "Maverick" series, is back on the tube as the star of "Nichols."

In "Maverick" he was always one step ahead of the sheriff. In his new NBC show he IS the sheriff, albeit a reluctant one.

The only association Garner has with the law in private life is an occasional traffic ticket. A long time racing buff, Garner once owned and backed a series of grand prix race cars. Now his interest has dwindled due to a heavy work load.

HE IS content to tear around Southern California in a Mini-Cooper — an imported British car — that has been souped up to outspeed most vehicles on the tortuous canyon roads that lead from home to studio.

Home is a showplace. One day when visiting Steve McQueen in Brentwood, a posh area near Beverly Hills, Garner was smitten by a wooded acreage contiguous to McQueen's property.

That was five years ago. Today the property is enhanced by a home which brings to mind the best of Frank Lloyd Wright: openness, glass, wood and rock all blending into the mountains.

THERE IS a swimming pool and a view of the Pacific.

The living room is breathtaking, 36-feet by 18-feet and soaring 20 feet high. All the doors leading into the room are made of glass.

What with large dark brown leather chairs, a heavy glass coffee table and an enormous fire place, one has the feeling of entering a hunting lodge.

A circular driveway takes the visitor to an iron gate through a garden and up eight steps to the entry hall. Another eight steps leads to the living room. The house is built on four levels, with the garage and billiard room occupying the lowest level — the bedrooms the top level.

THERE are separate servants quarters and a full-time gardener. Garner, however, has left most of the acreage in its natural state of towering trees and lush undergrowth.

Garner and his wife, Lois, have been undergoing domestic problems, but they are working out their differences. They are the parents of Gigi, 13, who is the apple of her Daddy's eye. Lois' daughter by a previous marriage is 23, and attends school in Florida.

The Garners entertain sparingly. Usually they'll have from two to six guests for dinner: "You can't talk to people if the party is any larger than that."

Garner is by nature a stay-at-home. He avoids cattle call parties, premieres and the cocktail circuit.

He's up each weekday morning at 6:15 and at the studio by 7:30 ready to work. Although he owns "Nichols," it is shot at Warner Bros. site of the old "Maverick" series.

His working day is usually 13 hours.

A TYPICAL weekend will find Jim slouched in a comfortable chair watching as many football games on television as he can find. Thereafter he reads over his scripts, takes a dip in the pool and not infrequently engages Gigi in a game of poker.

"I always beat her," Garner says, grinning.

The one thing that puzzles Garner is that he sees less of neighbor Steve McQueen than he did before building his home next door to his fellow actor and racing buff.

Guest TV Shots Held Pay The Rent

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — "Guest Star" generally is a euphemistic term for an actor appearing as a supporting player on a regular television series in order to pay the rent that month.

A guest star is paid from $2,500 to $3,500 for a week's work.

Sometimes, if his name is sufficiently large, he may earn more. Often he is paid less.

BUT THE practice does serve to keep the actor's name and face before the public. And the money holds off the sheriff for still another week.

Often guest stars are injected into anemic shows to bolster faltering ratings. Their worth is moot. But the practice flourishes in a town distinguished worldwide as the citadel of paranoia.

A leading exponent of the guest star syndrome is David Gerber, senior vice-president of 20th Century-Fox Television. The studio's two network series, "Nanny and the Professor" and "Cade's County" are larded with featured actors.

Rapid Growth Era At End

provided in sewing, knitting, ice skating, ballet, tap, hula and creative dancing, judo, tennis and acrobatics, guitar and recorder playing.

Teen-agers and adults can participate in yoga, tennis, tap, ballet and belly dancing, sewing, knitting, sailing, guitar and recorder playing and a ceramics workshop. Senior citizens meet weekly for card games and sightseeing trips. More than 600 people are participating in this program, and they come from all over Marin County.

Enlargement of the Fire, Police, Street and Sanitary Departments has kept pace with the town's growth. They provide services that most residents take for granted, performing their varied duties automatically, day after day, for the general comfort and tranquility. They respond quickly when called for individual emergencies.

TO HOUSE its various activities, the town used general revenue to purchase the land occupied by the Civic Center and Corporation Yard, to remodel the old Fire House for use as a Town Hall, and to erect suitable buildings at the Corporation Yard. Only the Public Safety Building and Fire Station No. 2 were financed by a bond issue.

The Lions Club and the town entered into a 25-year agreement on August 4, 1952, providing for leasing a portion of the Town Park for construction of a Recreation Center thereon by the Lions Club, with the club to maintain and operate the building for the duration of the contract and ownership to be retained by the Town. The Santiary District's former office nearby has been converted to a "Drop-In Center" for teenagers.1

From time to time for mutually advantageous reasons, the town has availed itself of services provided by Marin County.

In 1941, the town joined the County communications network which provided two-way radio between the Center and police cars. This has expanded until it now includes the police station and fire trucks, plus teletype service.

In 1946, the town turned over to the county enforcement of all statutes relating to public health; in 1949, the Marin County Humane Society was designated as Animal Control Officer; in 1953, court functions were transferred to the Marin County District Court and in 1958, property tax assessment and collection were transferred to the County. Since 1963, the town has used the County contract for the purchase of bulk gasoline and oil at a saving.

The following independent governmental agencies serve the town which pays for their services by special levies added to the Corte Madera property owners taxes.

1. County Library District
2. Larkspur-Corte Madera and Reed Union School Districts
3. Tamalpais Union High School District
4. Marin Junior College District
5. Mosquito Abatement District
6. Air Pollution Control District
7. Marin General Hospital District
7. Marin General Hospital District
8. School Equalization District
9. Aid to the Mentally Retarded
10. Flood Control Zone 9
11. School for Physically Handicapped
12. Marin Transit District
13. Marin County Government

IN ADDITION, the town paritiepates in most of the semi-official organizations that are concerned with the environmental, conservation, rapid transit and development problems of the San Francisco Bay region.

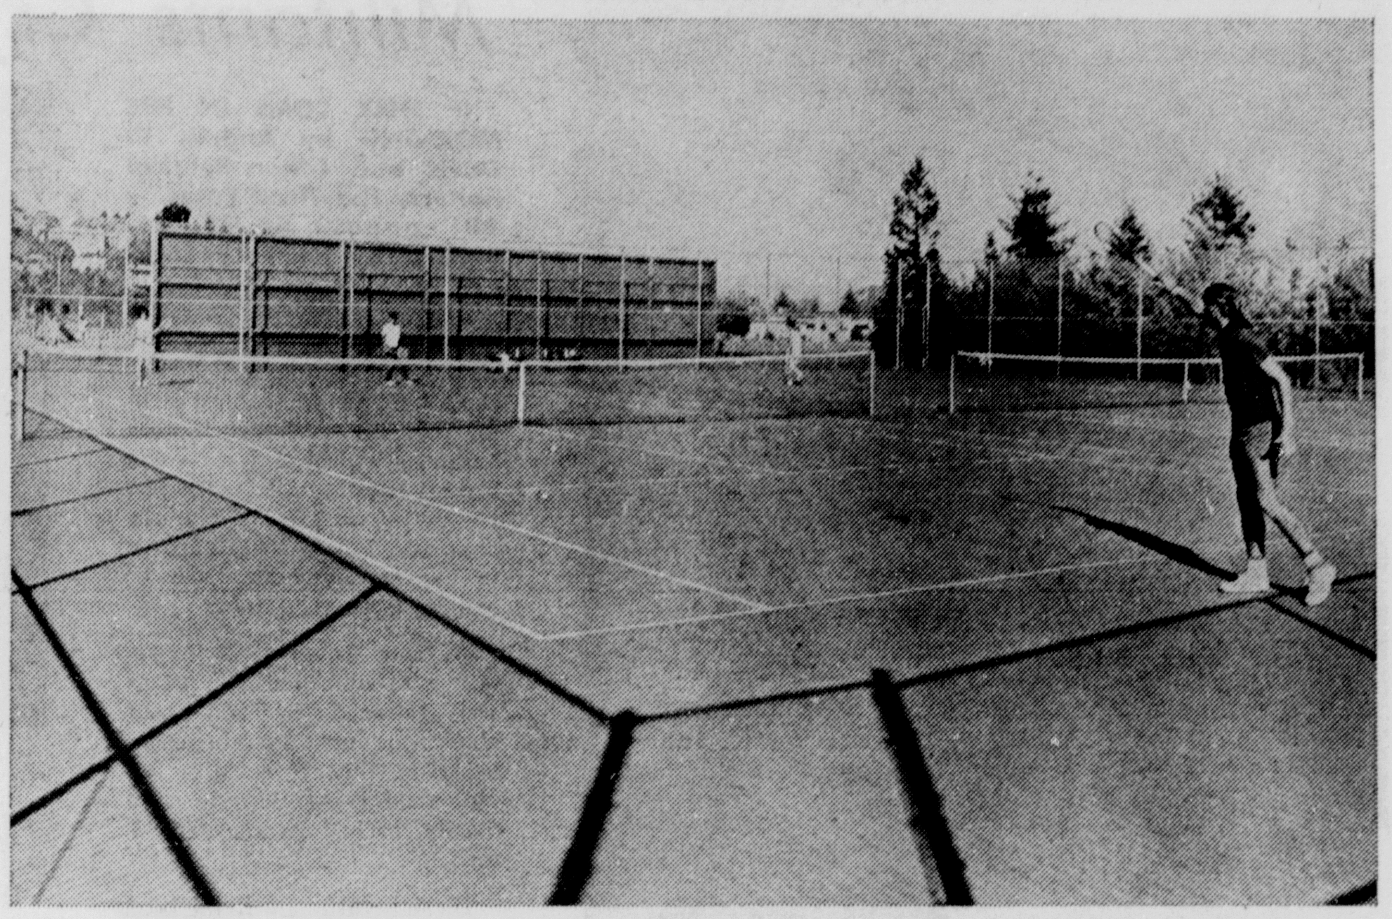
Now, every governmental action costs money which must come from the citizen's pocket in some form of taxes. By hard-headed, farsighted financial planning, the town has succeeded in judiciously anticipating and utilizing revenue from gasoline and sales taxes and various license fees in such a way that property tax rates have been kept at a low level.

For comparison in the fiscal 1916-17 year, the population was 500, the assessed valuation, $480,240 and the property tax rate, $1; in 1963-64, the population was 8,200, the assessed valuation, $13,966,490, and the tax rate, $1; and in 1970-71, the population, 9,000, the assessed valuation $24,824,995 and the tax rate, $1.09.

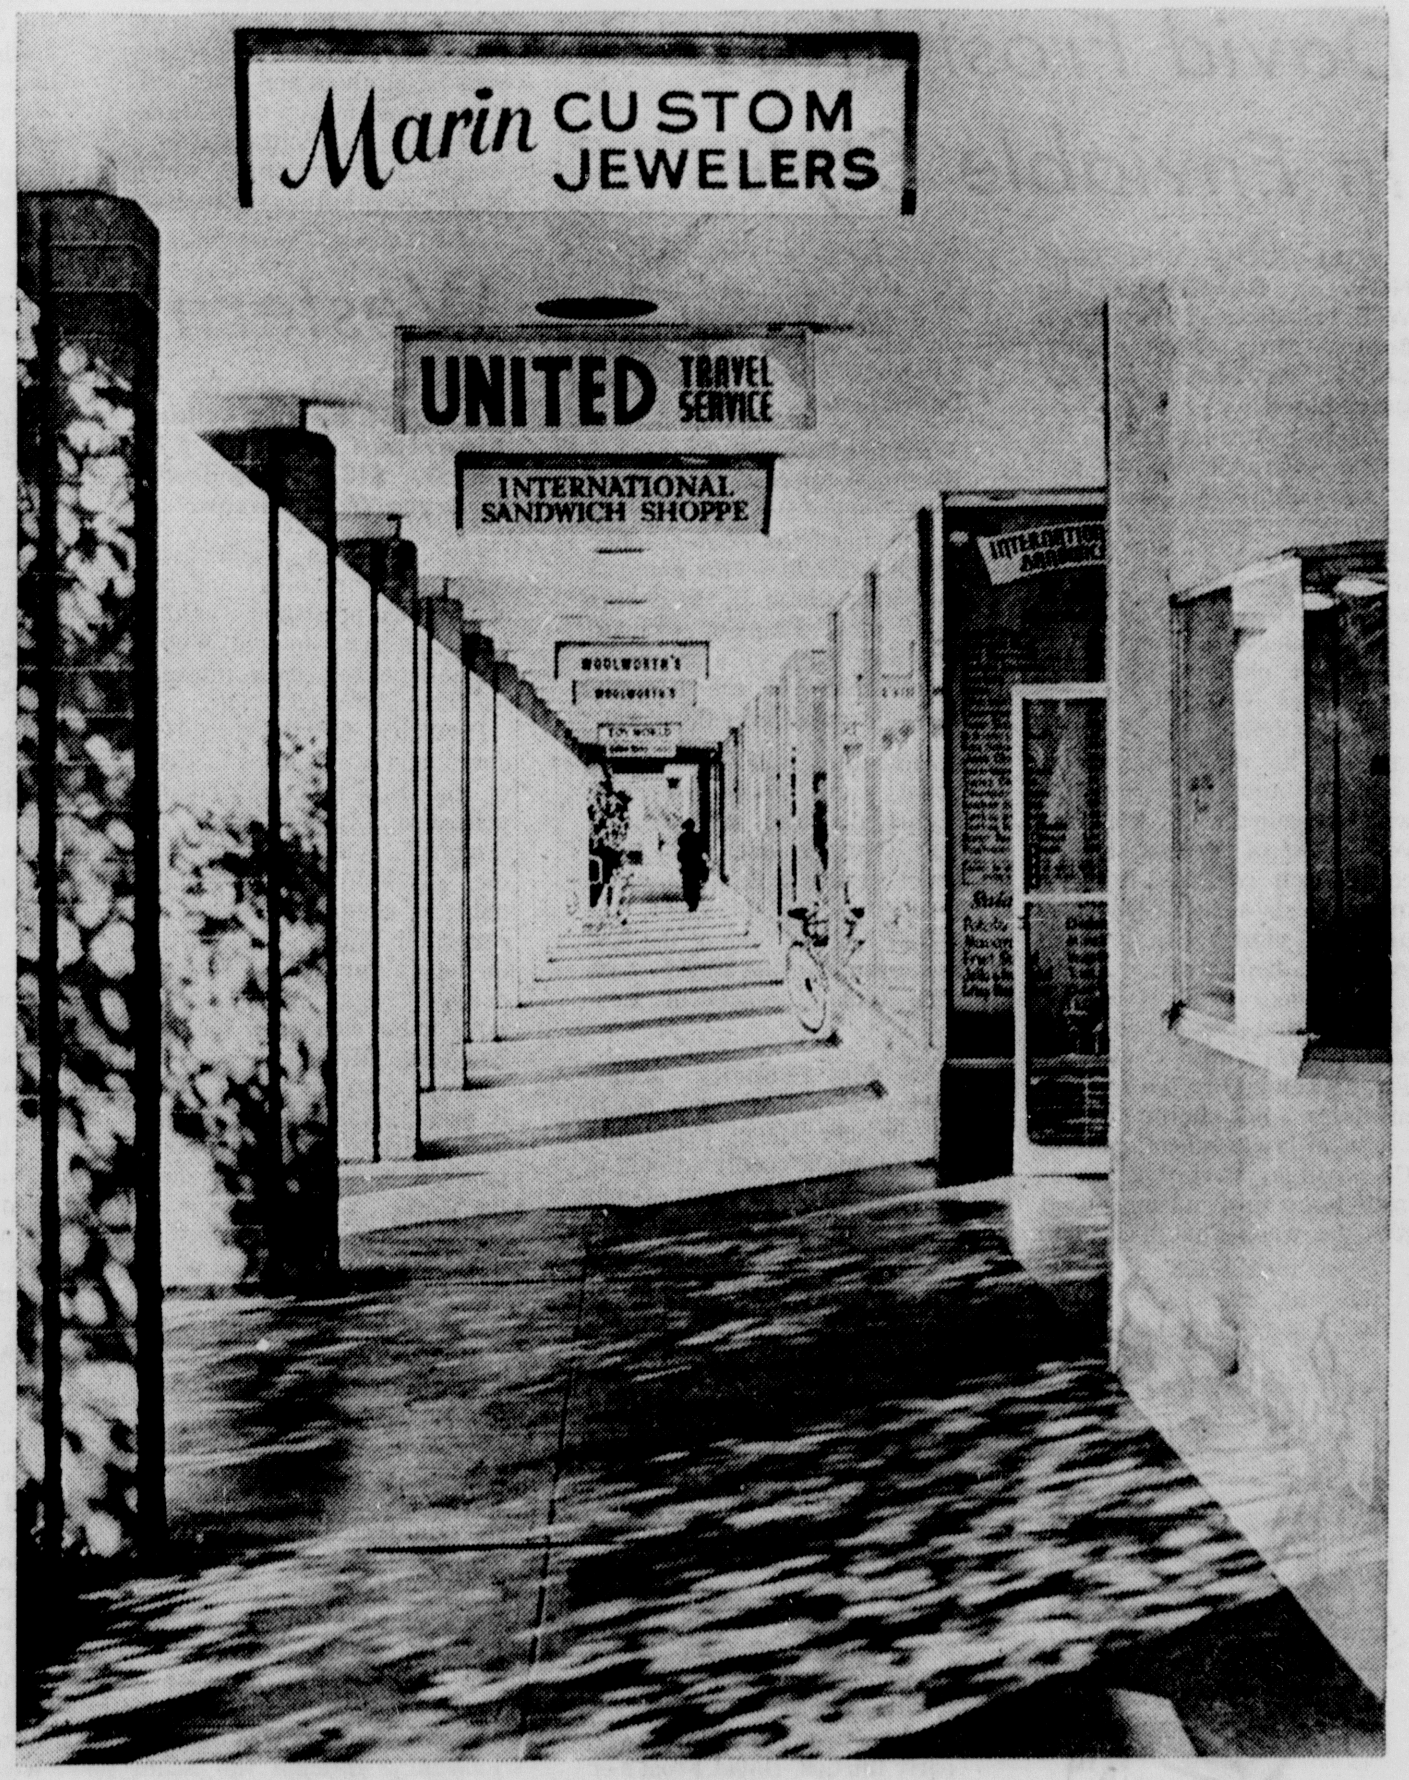
THE RAPID growth phase of Corte Madera has ended. With few exceptions, the only vacant lands are the tidal swamps along San Francisco Bay. Although much study has been given to the problem of how to use this area in a way to give the owners a profit, benefit the Town and at the same time conserve San Francisco Bay, no ideal answer has been found.

There has been progress in solving the transportation problem, but much remains to be done. Finally, there is the possibility of becoming part of a huge metropolitan complex formed by a consolidation of all southern Marin communities.

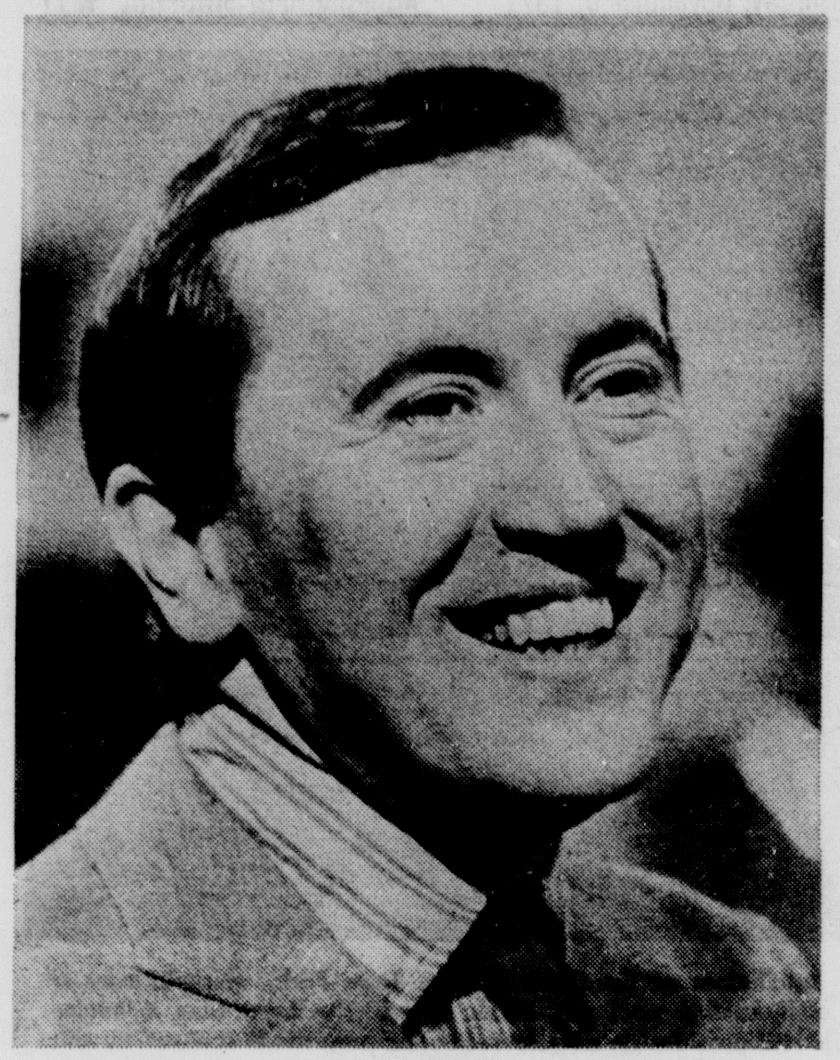
Contributing to the quality of life in Corte Madera and adjacent areas are five grammar schools, two high schools, four private schools, two colleges, seven churches, a public library, 12 homeowners association, five shopping centers, a Chamber of Commerce, Lions, Optimist and Sertoma Clubs, Women's Improvement Club, Twin Cities Little League, three cub packs, three scout troops, two explorer posts, two Brownie troops, four junior girl scout troops, one cadette and one senior troop.



TENNIS COURTS are among the popular installations at the Corte Madera Town Park, which includes a baseball diamond, children's playground, a fly-casting pool and picnic areas. The town also maintains playground facilities in several neighborhoods and provides an all-year recreation program in conjunction with Larkspur.



THE CORTE MADERA Shopping Center, anchored by Montgomery Ward, has served customers from throughout Marin, and plans have been disclosed for another major shopping area, east of Highway 101, which would make Corte Madera a regional shopping area.



DAVID FROST
The Good Life

David Frost Lives In Enviable Style

WILL YOU WELCOME NOW . . . DAVID FROST by Willi Frischauer; Hawthorn Books, Inc.; 248 pages, $6.95. Reviewed by Eugene Block.

If David Frost isn't living the great American dream now, he's coming close enough to make every male who reads about his life in "Will You Welcome Now" . . . jealously want to change roles with him.

Frischauer's story of Frost's work and play is filled with celebrities, beautiful women who did anything to become a guest on his program, internationally famous restaurants which schemed wildly to get the young host of the talk show to eat in their confines, bring as many guests as he wanted, and pick up gladly the tab for everyone, themselves.

The "biography" is 95 percent now and five percent filled with a very quick view of Frost's being born the son of a minister, not being overly bright in grade school, going to Cambridge, having a strong taste for satire, putting "That Was the Week That Was" into many people's living room on two continents, and making "Will you welcome now . . .?" a common household phrase in all parts of Britain and the United States.

The majority of the book is filled with anecdotes on Liz and Dick, Jackie and Ari, Meg and her husband the Photographer, Johnny and Joey: the competitors with whom David is such good pals, Frankie, Frankie, Jr. and Nancy, and many, many more of the beautiful people from all over the world.

Anecdotes are also given about world famous airlines, nightclubs and restaurants. Two separate ones are given about Ernie's in San Francisco. Footnoting one of them, the author calls it "one of the best restaurants in the world — superb cooking, excellent service."

As his publicity people worked at letting every potential listener know, Frischauer also spends a goodly amount of space telling how Frost spends as much time in London as he does in the States. Anecdotes are also related to affirm the fact that BOAC is proud to have Frost as one of their best customers.

With a life equally spent in two countries, innumerable tax deductions to be made in both of them, of beautiful women of two continents conniving for his favors — on and off camera —, leaders of world powers desiring an easy question to be posed to them on his program, an empire emerging of many diverse interests, unbelievable wealth, and still in his very early thirties, David Frost's enviable life is interestingly told by Willi Frischauer.

Militants Cry "Politics"

IF THEY COME IN THE MORNING by Angela Y. Davis and Other Political isoners, The Third Press, 281 pages, $6.95; reviewed by Mary Leydecker.

In an "open letter to my sister, Angela Davis," James Baldwin wrote, "we must fight for your life as though it were our own — which it is — and render impassable with our bodies the corridor to the gas chamber. For, if they take you in the morning, they will be coming for us that night."

"If They Come in the Morning" is a collection of writings and statements by and about black militants apparently published on the eve of Miss Davis's trial in an effort to raise money for her lagging defense fund.

There is little new in the book — Miss Davis's contributions are a statement she made in court earlier this year, a letter she wrote to Erica Huggins and interviews that have mainly been printed elsewhere.

The fact that Miss Davis has chosen to align herself completely with Rucbell Magee, the Soledad brothers and other militants is no longer news. However, for those interested in a compilation of writings which pretty well sum up the position of the black militants today, the book does that.

The faithful, of course, will buy it out of loyalty but others who want to understand the "political prisoner" veiwpoint an certainly find it set forth in the book.

The writing is spotty and the editing is worse, but the message of the revolutionary blacks still comes through.

Miss Davis's own contributions in the book are well done — she is an articulate person as one would expect a college philosophy instructor.

The main problems with the book are first that it appears to have been thrown together very hastily, secondly, the questions of logic about the position Miss Davis has adopted since she was arrested.

Although she has repeatedly termed the Aug. 7 shoot-out a "glorious insurrection," she has also repeatedly proclaimed her innocence.

In an interview included in the book, Miss Davis makes an interesting statement about David Poindexter, the man who was with her when she was arrested in New York.

Although Poindexter was cleared earlier this year of charges of harboring a fugitive, Miss Davis is quoted as saying in an interview that "he put his life on the line in order to assist me to escape my executioners."

This statement, coming after a court cleared Poindexter because the government had put on no evidence to show he knew Miss Davis was wanted by authorities, seems typical of the curious position she has taken.

At any rate, she seems willing to play out the hand of a political figure, remaining in jail for months on end while her attorneys delay the case. The publication of "If They Come in the Morning" is apparently another chapter in a now familiar two-pronged legal and political defense.

Western Dream Of Riches

GOLD AND SILVER IN THE WEST by T. . Wtkins; American West, 277 pages, $13.95. Reviewed by Bryce W. Anderson.

Reviews Of New Reading

The American Dream was really many dreams; and one of the most persistent was that of finding riches in gold on or in the earth of this great, mysterious, unexplored continent.

It started with the conquistadores, and after Cortes in Mexico and Pizarro in Peru found gold and silver "beyond the dreams of avarice," it could not die. Yet it lived only as myth until a chance discovery by carpenter James Marshall led to the California gold rush exactly 400 years after the Spaniards found rich silver mines in Zacatecas, Mexico.

It was a dream almost entirely peculiar to the Far West, and the hundreds of thousands who pursued it did much to shape the West.

Many have written of western gold and silver strikes, of the boom towns that turned ghost towns, of the men who struck it rich and those who didn't. But T. H. Watkins, associate editor of American West magazine, has given the story of western mining a new dimension in "Gold and Silver in the West: the Illustrated History of an American Dream."

Watkins follows the dream from the conquistadores until it died (or perhaps merely was lost in deep sleep) because of the depression of gold and silver prices in the 1930s. He follows it through the Southwest, California, the Rockies, the Great Basin, the Black Hills, even to Alaska and the Yukon.

His account is no mere retelling of oft-told tales. He traces the searches, discoveries, developments and deaths of boom after boom, dream after dream, the almost-unvaried but ever-new transition from bonanza to borrasca.

The story was ever the same: There was not enough gold to go around. (And when it came to silver, there was even less chance, for silver could not be merely picked up or pounded out of the rock; it required complicated extraction processes, so that the discoverer was at the mercy of the financier.)

Little is missing from Watkins' account. But that is only half the book. The second part deals with the geology and technology, the city building, the stock promotions, the litigation-spawning complexities of mining law — all the appurtenances of "El Dorado" that made the West so different from the East, and from the West as depicted in popular fiction and movies.

Throughout, the volume is lavishly illustrated with pictures, old and new, that point up the story even more sharply than the writer's pulsing prose.

There has never been a book about the American West's peculiar dream to match "Gold and Silver in the West."

At that, it calls for a sequel. The saga of the prospector and of the towns to which he gave birth while (for the most part) failing in his quest is amply told in this illustrated history. But there is yet another story: that of those who did strike it rich, who made the millions of which they dreamed. And often it, too, is a tragic tale: Winfield Scott Stratton forlornly drinking himself to death in the house he built with his own hands in Colorado Springs before he made his millions out of Cripple Creek; Ed Schieffelin, Midas-rich from the discovery of Tombstone, found dead beside a cold pot of beans in an Oregon cabin where he had fled to escape it all; Baby Doe Tabor breathing her last in the snowbound shaft house of the Matchless, alone and forgotten. And many others.

For them, the dream came true, but terribly.

The Past Is Recalled In Flood of Nostalgia

By FRANK FARRARA

Nostalgia is popular these days, be it a revival of a broadway musical, old movies or comic books, and it comes in many forms.

Publishers, who have been on the bandwagon with reissues of earlier works, are tapping other signposts of the past, including a street, New York City's 52nd Street, a magazine, the early-day Esquire, and the whole gamut of a year, 1929.

The name 52nd Street doesn't resound with the glamour of say, Basin Street, Bourbon Street or South Rampart Street, in musical annals, but it had it all . . . blues, swing, jazz, bop, progressive, Dixieland.

Shaw recaptures the memorable days from his own recollections, and wisely from the people who made the street; musicians, fans, club owners, comedians and songwriters.

For those who sat in the small, smokey clubs, it provokes a heady reminiscence of the past, and for the younger readers, it is a lively history of a musical era that thrilled past generations as rock concerts thrill them.

The Count Basie Band wailing away . . . the late Billie Holiday singing the blues . . . the late Charlie Parker and Dizzy Gillespie with their unique sound of bop . . . Coleman Hawkins and his unbelievably mellow solos . . . the romping piano of Fats Waller . . . sessions . . . thousands of choruses that drifted off into the air never to be recaptured . . . that's what the street was all about.

There also were the clubs where brash, insult comedy reigned, the 21 Club which attracted the film stars, the debutantes, the literary lights, the politicians and the debutants, and restaurants, but it was the music and the musicians who made the street.

Arnold covers the entire era from the start in the prohibition days until its death in the 1950s when the strip and clip joints predominated, and the clubs were torn down one by one to make way for big buildings.

In this new world of vast problems, it might not seem important to devote a book to the happy days and happy sounds of a long gone era, but it certainly isn't anymore trifling than writing about the antics of the New York Yankees in the 1949 World Series.

While 52nd Street has faded as a music mecca, Esquire magazine which flourished in those days, is still flourishing, and Arnold Gingrich, former editor, recalls the early years in "Nothing But People".

He goes back to the pre-Esquire days, when its predecessor was a trade paper, and covers the Esquire years from 1928-58.

Gingrich was at the helm in the days of Ernest Hemingway, F. Scott Fitzgerald, Theodore Dreiser and John Dos Passos, but his journal isn't focused solely on the literary scene.

It is rather a rounded view of the business, the advertising, the promotion, the front office maneuvers, the errors and the successes and editorial squabbles.

That Esquire remains solvent, while other national magazines are fading from the news stands, is somewhat of an accomplishment, but Gingrich, who has seen it change throughout the years, believes it has survived because it has returned to its original format.

Gingrich's recollections bear out the theory that magazine publishing is a risky business, where talent, daring and hard work can bring success or failure.

One of the least risky operations in the publishing business is putting out the World Almanac each year.

American Heritage Press and Workman Publishing Co. has such faith it is appeal they have published a hard cover facimile of the 1929 almanac, containing the "complete record of 1928," which they describe as "the last of the good years."

It was the year before the depression . . . the year the federal budget had a surplus of $398 million . . . Herbert Hoover defeated Al Smith for the presidency.

The facts and figures are there for the readers to mull over . . . the major events and the oddities . . . the advertisement that told of "Government Jobs . . . at $1,260 to $3,400 a year."

San Rafael is listed as "San Raphael" with a 1920 population of 5,512, and Marin voted for Hoover over Smith by 7,862 to 5,686 in the 1928 election.

It's history in a familiar form and fun for the reader who likes to look it up himself.

THE STREET THAT NEVER SLEPT by Arnold Shaw; Coward, McCann and Geogheghan, 363 pages, $8.95.

NOTHING BUT PEOPLE by Arnold Gingrich; Crown, 315 pages, $6.95.

THE 1929 WORLD ALMANAC AND BOOK OF FACTS, American Heritage Press and Workman Publishing Co., 928 pages, $7,95.

ALFRED EISENSTAEDT, world-famed photographer, has compiled a superb collection of color photos of flora and fauna in "Witness To Nature," (Viking, $16.95) along with his comments on his adventures and discoveries while obtaining his photos of nature, including the above scene of Brahmin cattle and macaques scrounging for food near a decaying Sitcram temple in India.

Sleuths & Suspense

THE LABYRINTH MAKERS by Anthony Price; Doubleday, 192 pages, $4.95. Reviewed by Don Keown.

"The Labyrinth Makers" is a Crime Club espionage novel that starts quite slowly but gains momentum as it progresses and winds up a readable and entertaining yarn.

David Audley is a desk man with British intelligence, but when a British plane that carried World War II flying hero to his death in 1945 is recovered tardily from the lake into which it plunged, he is ordered out "into the cold" to investigate. The inquiry centers around the mysterious cargo the plane was carrying. The Russians are interested, too. And so is the daughter of the pilot who had died in 1945.

At the outset Price appears unable to generate any real excitement with his plot, but he seems to have gained confidence and zest as he wrote. The character of the girl is particularly appealing.

Of course we may have been biased in this author's favor by the notation that this is a first novel by a veteran English book reviewer (for the Oxford Mail).

"CAMPFIRES of the Resistance" has been subtitled "Poetry from the Movement," which describes exactly what it is — but doesn't prepare you for its impact.

Todd Gitlin is the editor, Bobbs-Merrill the publisher, and the book is available in both hardcover, $7.50, and paperback, $3.95.

Most of the names will be unfamiliar to the older generations, although there are some like Gary Snyder and Allen Ginsberg who are holdovers from the Beat era, and others like Casey Hayden, Paul Goodman and Fred Gardner who have won recognition beyond the confines of the movement.

But for the most part the poets are names that are strange to parents and grandparents, and familiar to the young adults and students. Their verse is protest poetry — against war, against bigotry, against the media, against the establishment, against pretense, against government, against poverty, against bureaucracy, against pollution and against waste. The word "revolution" occurs often. And there are tributes — to A.J. Muste, to Che, to Ho, to Fannie Hamer, to Tom Paine, to Roger Allen LaPorte (the youth who died following self-immolation), to Martin Luther King, to one another. There are four-letter words and 12-letter words.

It is all very contemporary, and usually angry. One begins to wonder if anyone ever writes poetry anymore about June and spoon and moon and romantic love. Not these young poets, anyway.

"There is no such thing as America," begins a Terry Cannon contribution. "It is united by brute force only . . ." And he concludes: "We are not Americans until we have created America. Until then we are spies, traitors, looters; suspicious, practical, dangerous young."

AIMED AT BOTH the amateur and the professional, "How to Attract Attention With Your Art — A Guide for Graphic Artists" (Sterling, $4.95) is the work of Ivan Tubau, 33-year-old, Spanish-born American artist with a record of commercial and critical success.

The book covers both technique and creative thinking in all types of advertising, from posters and billboards to newspaper and magazine "ads." Tubau recommends gouache, and sometimes acrylics, over watercolors and oils. And he offers his special hints on how the commercial artist can attain speed and efficiency that are essential if he is to make a living in the profession.

It's a small book, little more than a primer, but seemingly a sound and useful one.

CHARLES E. TUTTLE, the Rutland, Vt., publisher who seems to alternate between things Oriental and Americana is back in the Occident with "Decorated Stoneware Pottery of North America" ($15) by Donald Blake Webster.

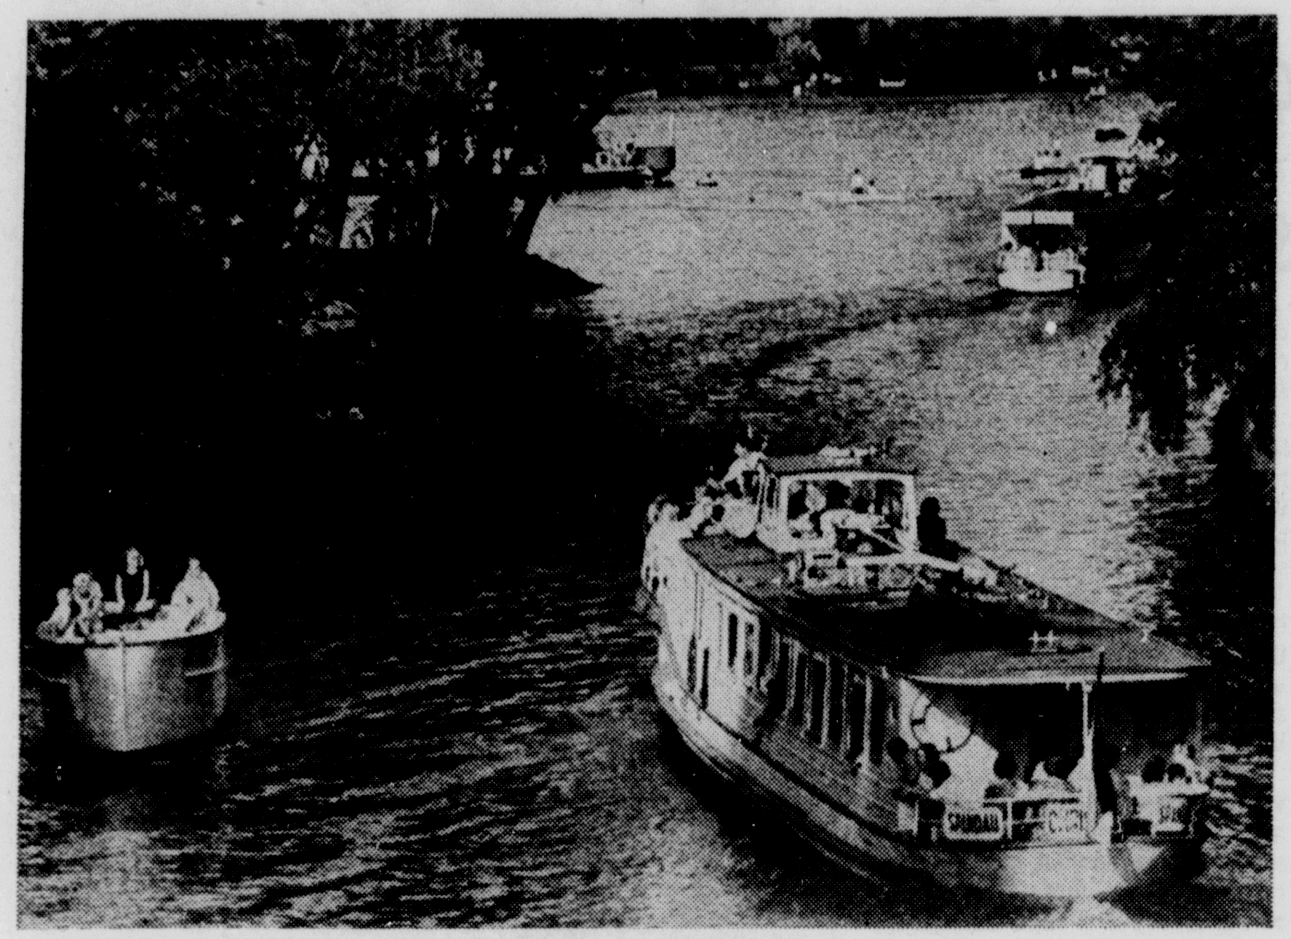
It is a big book in the coffee table category, devoted largely to black and white photographs of excellent quality and informatively captioned. But there is a text in which Webster, curator of the Canadiana Department of the Royal Ontario Museum, discusses learnedly but none too interestingly the growth in pottery production from one-man artisan establishments to huge factories.

In his foreword, Ivor Noel Hume says the Webster book fills a long felt need for a well-researched and profusely illustrated book on the subject.

As such, it will be welcomed by collectors and connoisseurs, who, we are told, are growing rapidly in numbers.

For the rest of us, the pictures are impressive, but hardly worth $15.

Berlin A Surprise To Visitors



HAVELSEE LAKE, where boating is popular, is one of the attractions of West Berlin, one of the greenest cities in Europe, which has many landscape wonders.

"Berlin isn't at all what we've expected," is a frequent comment heard from American tourists on their first visit to this city. Although the average foreign tourist hardly expects a clean and unattractive city, and although the wall is never the sole reason for a trip 110 miles into East German territory, very few tourists anticipate a place of many different aspects.

The first impression gained from the air before landing at Tempelhof Airport is that of a big green city with much water. West Berlin alone covers 185 square miles, an expanse large enough to hold the combined city areas of Washington, D.C., Cincinnati and San Francisco. Parks, forests, fields, rivers and lakes comprise almost half of West Berlin. Even busy downtown districts are dotted with parks of various sizes, and streets and boulevards are generously proportioned and lined with trees.

BERLINER Luft (air) has retained most of its clear, crisp envigorating sparkle, and a Berliner who feels obliged to complain about air pollution does not really know the problem. The magnificent panorama of the city as seen from the 22nd floor restaurant at the Europa Center is clear and free of haze.

The Europa Center, an example of the outstanding modern architecture found in abundance in West Berlin, combines offices, shops, restaurants, galleries, theatres, a roof-top health club, arcades and terraces on various levels, a hotel, apartments, a skating rink and pedestrian bridges and underpasses into a very livable urban center.

An international elite of architects, among them Mies van der Rohe, Gropius, Le Corbusier and many others, contributed to the physical appearance of today's Berlin. Landmark preservation and restoration are spelled with capital letters, and very few traces of war damage are left. As a matter of fact, a group of recent tourists found it hard to believe that Charlottenburg Palace was in ruins at the end of the war.

BERLIN'S museums rank among the finest of the world. Handsome new buildings for the Far Eastern and the Islamic Departments have recently been added to the huge museum complex in Dahlem. The Painting Gallery there takes pride in its Rembrandt collection — which is larger than that of Amsterdam and second only to the Eremitage in Leningrad. Also in Dahlem, and not too far from the big museum complex, a modern villa houses an outstanding collection of works by the artists of the Bruecke group of German expressionists.

Art of the 19th and 20th Century is on display in a magnificent setting in the New National Gallery built by Mies van der Rohe. But even tourists who have sworn not to set foot into one more museum should see the world famous Nefertiti whose awe inspiring beauty has been preserved over 3,300 years. She and a remarkable collection of other Egyptian antiquities are in residence in the Stuehlerbau, across the street from Charlottenburg Palace.

FASHION boutiques and other elegant stores along Kurfuerstendamm with its gourmet restaurants and sidewalk cafes cater to tourists at prices that compare favorably with New York, Rome and Paris. The best hunting grounds for antiques are on Eisenacher Strasse, where an amazing concentration of shops offer something for any purse. A visit to the Berlin State Porcelain Manufactury is recommended for special bargains in seconds which are only sold here.

Berlin's answer to Greenwich Village, to Soho of the Montmartre is Kreuzberg with its curio shops, and some lovely stucco facade 19th century buildings. A typical Kneipe (pub) here should be visited for local color and for a wholesome meal washed down with a good beer — all for not much more than a dollar. Not too many tourists explore the Berlin off the beaten track.

Similar bargain fares in an idyllic rural setting can be found at the village inn in Luebars, all the way to the north of West Berlin. Its 18th Century village church and several other charming buildings have been declared landmarks.

THERE ARE many ways to see Berlin. Buses, of course, are the best possible way to get an overall first impression. Such sightseeing tours are well organized, and English speaking guides explain the city. Unlike Berliners, tourists can cross the wall and visit East Berlin. An English speaking East Berlin guide will climb into the bus at Checkpoint Charlie to take over from there.

A visit to the Pergamom Museum is highly recommended and included in many tours. Stops at the Soviet War Memorial at Treptow seem to be an obligatory feature, as is a final stop at a restaurant. Drop in at the bar and ask whether the bottle of exotic yellowish liqueur with the dead snake inside is still available.

Back in West Berlin, a genuine, antique, horsedrawn mail coach takes small groups on two-hour trips. For a group of four the fare is DM 75. - (about $22). Impressive flotillas of sightseeing boats cruise along West Berlin's 80 miles of navigable waterways. Special moonlight cruises offer dining and dancing.

MANY BERLIN hotels have indoor or outdoor swimming pools. There are beaches on lakes and rivers and all the recreational facilities of a summer resort. Students report that Berlin can be done on $5 a day, especially, if the Berlin Information Center (at Hardenbergstrasse 20, Berlin 12) is contacted in writing for reservations at one of the youth hostels.

Berlin, at night, is one of the really swinging places on the European continent. Thousands of night spots are found in practically all parts of town, and many of them stay open to serve an early breakfast.

Air Force Academy Top Attraction In Colorado

As Colorado's number one tourist attraction — aside from the Rocky Mountain National Park — the United States Air Force Academy 10 miles north of Colorado Springs attracts more than one-and-a-half million visitors-a-year.

Sitting on 18,000 acres of the eastern slope of the Rocky Mountains' Rampart Range, the Academy is open daily to visitors. There is much of interest and beauty to see on the striking ultramodern campus, which was opened in 1958.

"From the Visitors' Center, just inside the south gate, which features displays of Cadet life and a free 25-minute, full-color sound movie depicting all aspects of the Academy, an air-conditioned bus leaves for a narrated tour of the grounds," reports Continental Airlines. "The bus stops at all key vantage points, allowing plenty of time for passengers to take pictures and visit the major buildings."

VISITORS, who can also drive their own car around the school, watch the Cadets assemble and march to their noon meal on week days at 11:30 a.m. to the martial music of the 120-piece Air Force Academy Marching Band.

The parade ground at this newest of the nation's service schools is right next to the modernistic 17-spire chapel, which is actually three churches in one. Protestant, Catholic and Jewish services may all be carried on simultaneously in separate sections. "Usually," reports Continental, "the chapel is the first thing visitors want to see at the Academy."

Other top attractions include:

MITCHELL HALL — Has a dining area big enough to seat 4,417 cadets at a single sitting. Named for Brig. Gen. Billy Mitchell, pioneer of military aviation and famed advocate of air power.

Vandenberg Hall — This cadet dormitory, named in memory of Gen. Hoyt S. Vandenberg, former Air Force Chief of Staff, is a quarter-of-a-mile long.

Fairchild Hall — The 45 science labs, 5 lecture halls, and library located here are where the cadets go to classes. Named for Gen. Muir S. Fairchild, first commander of the Air University.

Arnold Hall — Named for Gen. H. H. Arnold, World War II Air Force leader, this cadet social center has a theatre, recreation rooms, ballroom and snack bars.

PLANETARIUM — Housed in a dome-shaped structure, it is used to teach celestial navigation and astronomy to cadets. There are daily demonstrations for visitors.

Cadet Gymnasium — Built at a cost of $6.3 million it has facilities for everything from indoor football games to shooting ranges. The basketball arena alone seats 6,000 people, and there is a 2,600 seat all-year indoor ice rink.

Falcon Stadium — Built in a natural bowl, this is where the Academy plays its at-home football games.

THE ACADEMIC year at the Air Force Academy is from August through May, but some cadets — including those entering the new first-year class — are there throughout the summer months as well.

At several locations on the Academy tour there are snack bars open to tourists but very few visitors ever eat as much as the 5,500 calories-a-day consumed by the average cadet.

Kootenays — A Wide, Wide, World

By BARRY BROADFOOT

The Kootenay Country of British Columbia is a four-letter word. Also a five letter one. And six letters, too.

Good. Great. Groovy.

Good, because it has everything — mountains beyond anyone's count, scores of small lakes and a few big ones, fishing, hunting, ghost towns crumbling in ruins and her communities with that quiet air of antiquity about them, several bustling towns and small cities, and if you have the attitude of we'll-take-our-time-and-see-what-we-want-to-see, then the Kootenay Country is for you.

GREAT, because in the Kootenay — named after the intelligent, resourceful and fierce Kootenai Indians — people have the same attitude — why hurry? Tomorrow is another day. And they enjoy life, especially the outdoor life.

Groovy? Sure, why not? People who visit the Kootenay for the first time, or those who return again and again, seem to relate to this country easily, and when they do, they're hooked. So it's groovy.

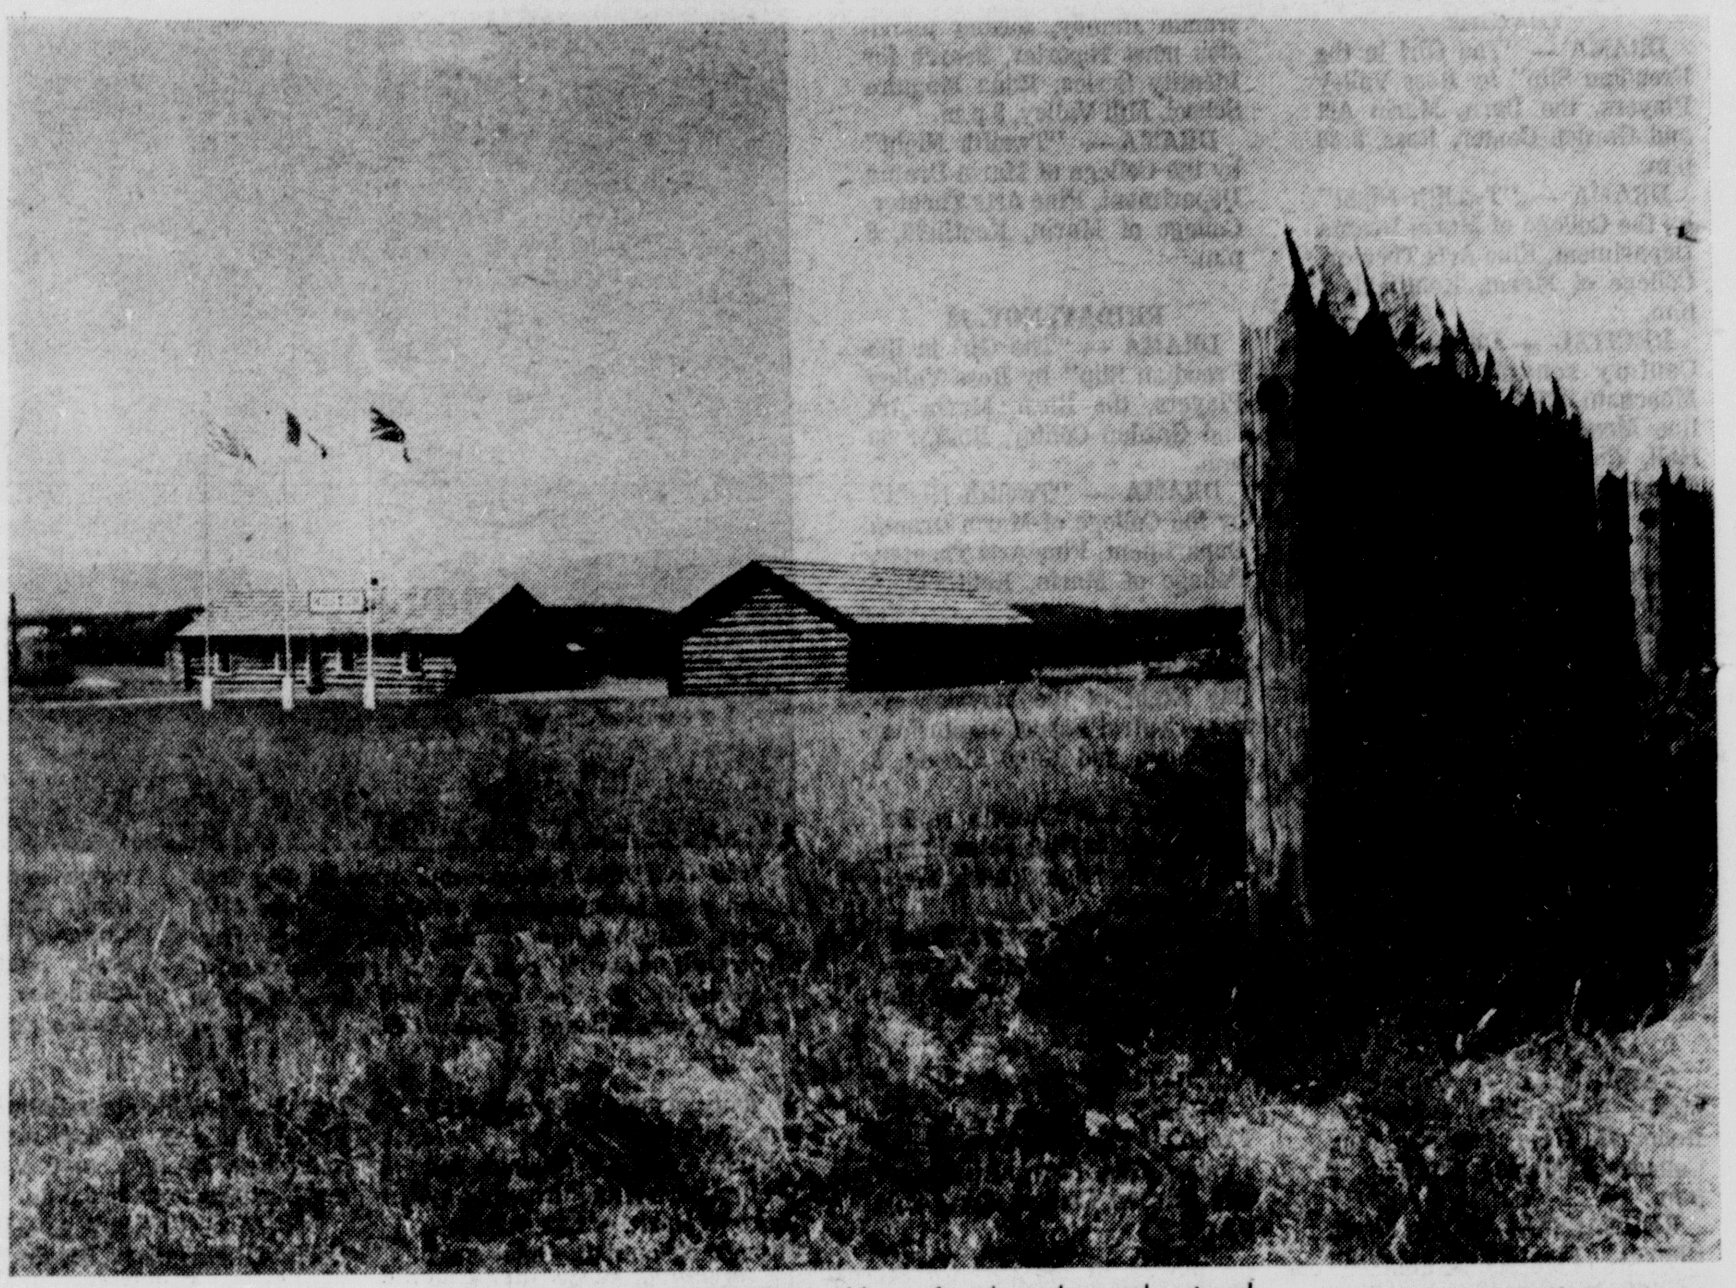
Where is it? Take a map. The International Boundary is the southern boundary. The east side of the Okanagan Valley, where Highway 3 climbs easily but seemingly forever over Anarchist Mountain is the western boundary, although some would disagree. The Alberta Boundary is the eastern line. North? Oh, somewhere south of the Rogers Pass and the Trans-Canada Highway. Say fifty miles, give or take a few.

NELSON could be said to be the geographical center. It's an old town — not old in years but British Columbia old, so there are old timers who still sit in the sun beneath the trees across from the Hume Hotel and talk of the old days. Minerals. Millions of dollars worth came from the mines of Kootenay — $14 million from one, $24 million from another, and $30 million from a third. And so it goes.

But one must never forget the big one of them all, the Rossland Mines, first staked in 1890 in an ancient volcano, and more than $125 million was dug from these mines. And ore, some of the continent's richest, is being taken from other mines to supply the giant smelter at Trail, the largest lead-zinc smelter in the world. Tours twice a day. Go on one.

And then back in the hills, are the holes. On top of a mountain. At the bottom of a cliff. Beside a lake. Anywhere, and everywhere. Hundreds of them, and each holding some man's dreams. And most failed. In fact, all but a few did. But still, today old men, and some young ones, continue to prowl the hills and valleys hoping to hit another big one. The chances are against them, but . . .

IT IS a country of good roads. The main east-west highways, and also a few north and south before they dwindle into gravel. But in between are dozens of small ones — those thin red and black and dotted lines on the map — and they lead into the most interesting parts of the country.



FORT STEELE is the most historic community in the Kootenay area of British Columbia, founded in 1863 when gold was found nearby, and restored by the provincial government. It is a few miles north of Cranbrook.

Into quiet valleys and little lakes, along tumbling, white-water streams, or into the mountains out on to Alpine meadows. Past tumbledown farms and small ranches, symbolizing another type of pioneer's dreams.

It is extraordinary, really, why so few people use Kootenay Lake. Long, about 80 miles long. Narrow. Safe, with few storms to rile it up. Numerous beaches for camping as long as you want, far from the ways of man. Communities along its shore are not all that numerous, but rarely more than an hour's cruising from any spot, and then you're away again with fresh provisions. The trout, lurking deep and taken on a slow troll, are in the 25-pound class.

Nelson, on the west arm of the lake —it has a north, south and west arm — is probably the best place to launch your boat and store your car as it is reached by good highways from the coast, the U.S. and the prairies.

AND TOO many boaters miss the Upper and Lower Arrow Lakes. What a shame! Here is a great lake, long like a wriggly snake, and a place to get away from it all.

Castlegar at the south end of this 100-mile beauty, or Nakusp, east of Vernon, via Highway 6 in the middle, or Arrowhead, south of Revelstoke at the north end, are probably the best launching areas.

An interesting trip is from Nelson north to Kaslo along the west side of Kootenay Lake. A beautiful drive on a sunny morn. Don't forget to stop at Ainsworth and soak a while in the hot springs in a sandy grotto and let the water pour out of the native rock onto your weary bones.

Kaslo, quiet and peaceful now after its rip-roaring days of 70 years ago when the mines were booming, has berthed the stern-wheeler Moyie and uses it for an interesting museum.

THEN CUT west through the mountains to New Denver on a road which climbs for miles on an old mining railway grade, past old workings, miners' shacks and barely discernible remains of old camps.

At Three Forks — a name on the map, but nothing but a sign on the site — turn off to Sandon where 12,000 miners once whooped it up. Today, it is a wreck, ruined by time which was the easiest on it, and a creek which went wild 20 years ago and ripped up the main street, and looters systematically stripped it of relics. One man lives there, name of Peterson. Someday, Sandon might become a restored town like Barkerville. It is interesting to poke around in the ruins, imagining what it was once like. Now apart from the squawking of crows and the indifferent clouds sailing overhead, Sandon, once with 23 hotels, is in another world.

And some random notes, of here and there in the Kootenay Country:

There is no valley more pleasant to the senses than the Windemere — What a lovely name! And what a lovely lake! A 1.4-mile drive north of town, there is a forestry road cut-off and you can drive within a quarter mile of the lookout tower on Mount Swansea, at 5,486 feet high, and a perfectly smashing view for miles. If you have time, do it.

KIMBERLY is the highest city in Canada, altitude 3,600 feet, and twice that in friendliness.

If you're driving from Nakusp, heading westward towards Vernon through the Monashee — another lovely name — Pass, please check your gas. It's 45 miles to the next pump, and traffic isn't all that heavy.

Don't be fooled by some of those tiny lakes you might dismiss as "potholes." Most beside the highway are real, although their inlets and outlets may be only dribbles, but often they have trout up to four and five pounds. A couple of cars with local plates parked besides the lakes is your tip-off.

Are you an Alpinist? One of those chaps who climbs mountains because they are there? Spillimacheen, meaning 'meeting of the waters,' is the jump-off place for the famed Bugaboos and the glaciers where, when conditions are right, you're likely to find climbers from many parts of the world.

THE AREA of Grand Forks has many residents of Russian descent. And the food served in restaurants and hotels is excellent. Especially the galoopsies. A good museum too, as most communities have in the Kootenays.

You'll hear that there is an East Kootenay and a West Kootenay. There is, but it is a dividing line from north and south that no one pays any attention to. But on the Kootenay Skyway the highest paved highway in Canada, 30 miles west of Creston, there is Bridal Lake, so named as the joining line of the two little-used geographical areas.

Fort Steele, a few miles north of Cranbrook, is the most historic community in the Kootenay, all the way back to 1863 when gold was found on nearby Wild Horse Creek. Now, the area has been restored by the provincial government as an historical attraction.

POINT REYES — C. B. GEARHART

Give The Garage Back To The Car

By STEVE ELLINGSON

If you've been parking on the street because your garage is so full of junk that a Honda couldn't find a place to sleep, you need an outdoor storage unit.

First, it keeps your garden supplies and tools where they're readily available and removes all that clutter from the garage.

Second, you'll find it a dandy place for storing camping equipment, toys and things of that kind.

Third, there's a potting counter inside on the left that's a delight for gardening and arranging flowers.

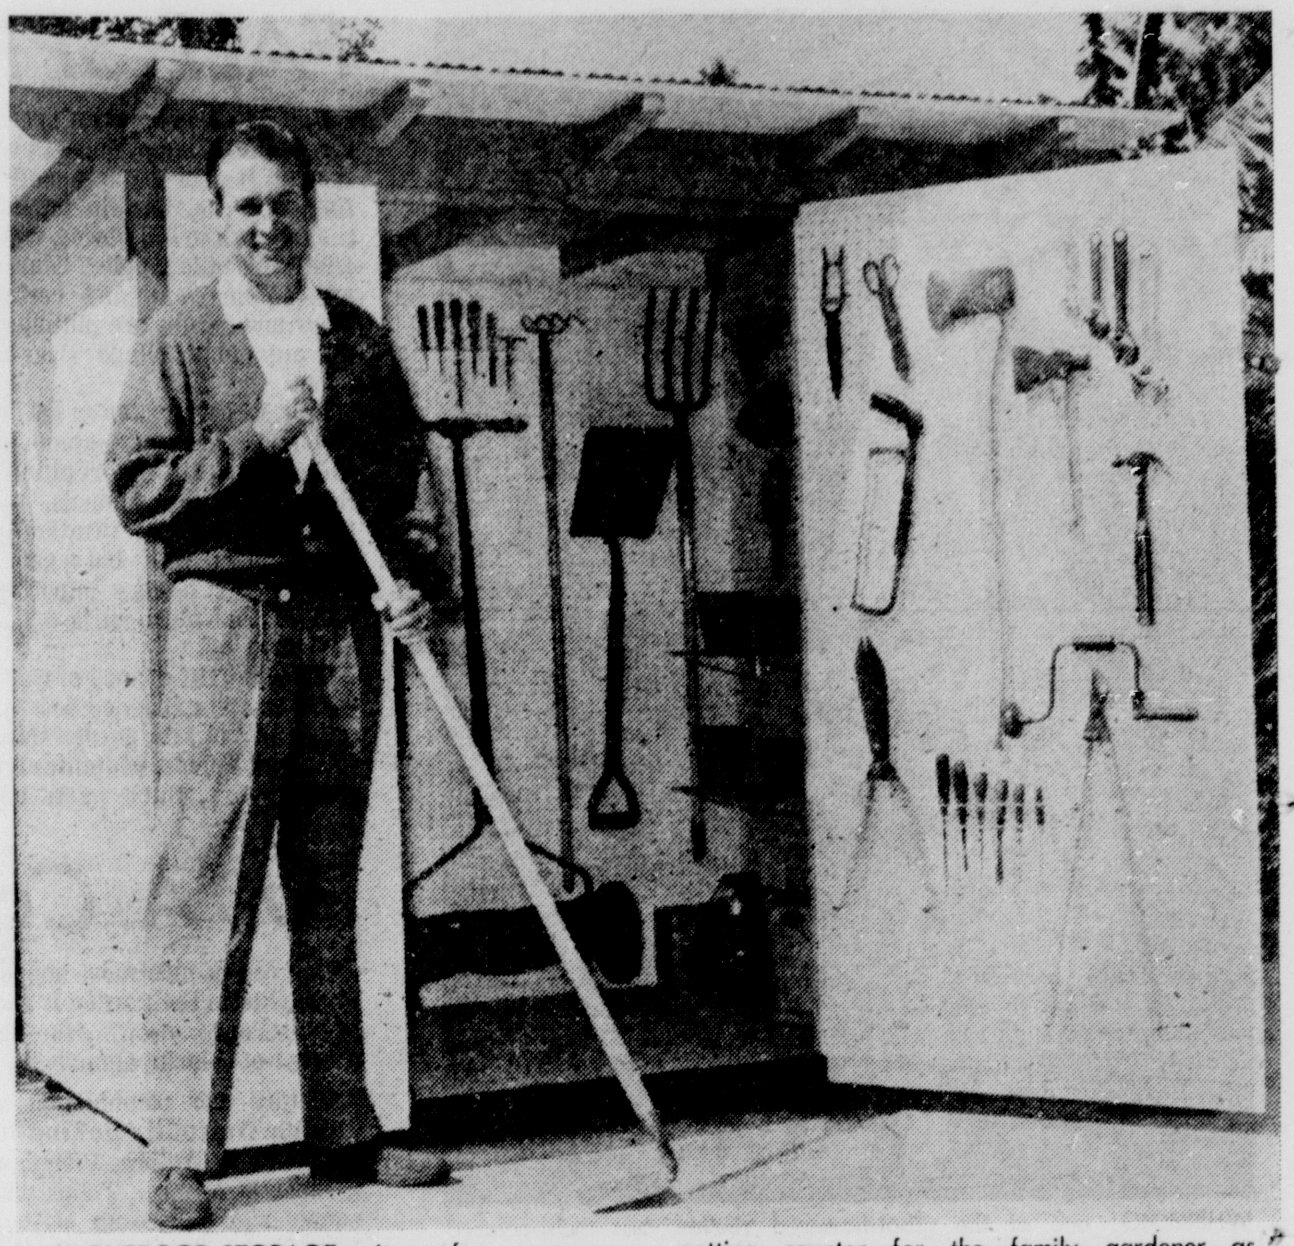
Below the counter are bins for peat moss, mulches and so forth. It was designed for efficiency, appearance and economy.

THE ENTIRE room, even the door, is lined with perforated hardboard. This makes it possible to neatly hang every kind of tool made, including your lawn mower. You will notice that along with garden tools, there is plenty of space for your woodworking equipment also.

And during rainy weather, it makes a good shelter for one or more bicycles. Best of all, when you're away from home, everything is locked safe from thieves.

Many folks use the little house as a cabana beside a swimming pool. It's just the right size for storing pool equipment as well as providing a place to change clothes. It also makes a dandy playhouse for youngsters.

To obtain the storage room plan Number 250, send $1 to: Steve Ellingson, San Rafael Independent-Journal Pattern Dept., P.O. Box 2383, Van Nuys, Calfironia 91409.



AN OUTDOOR STORAGE unit can free a garage of supplies that clutter it up and serve as an area for camping equipment, toys, etc. and contain a potting counter for the family gardener as television personality Bob Barker, hoe in hand, notes.

Making Planters Helps Escape From Daily Woe

Let's assume things aren't going well at home or office, and you are deeply concerned about someone or something.

Keeping the problem on the front burners of your mind can drive you up a tree. Getting away from a problem that only time can help solve, makes a lot of sense, so the smart step to take is to get as far away as possible, not to escape, but to get a new perspective.

The quickest escape requires doing something that necessitates using your head and hands. When your hands do something you are normally unaccustomed to doing, it forces the mind to focus on the job. Making these planters could provide hours of instant escape.

THE MAGIC of this concept actually starts when you receive the full size pattern offered below. Start tracing on wood. Saw along traced outlines. Assemble parts in exact position shown on pattern. Within an evening's time, you discover a new way to "get away from it all".

Doctors recommend woodworking to everyone in need of relaxation. If you invest a few dollars in an electric sabre or jig saw, and drill, buy a few patterns and lumber, you open the door to many stimulating hours of escape whenever you need to from whatever bothers you.

Send $1 in check or money order for Planters Pattern Number 933 to the Independent-Journal, P. O. Box 215, Briarcliff Manor, N.Y. 10510.

WHIRLIGIG, one of the giant-flowered zinnias, has multi-colored blooms, each different.

Zinnias Easy To Grow, Furnish Many Flowers

Zinnias are so easy to grow and furnish the garden or the house with so many flowers, it's surprising that every garden doesn't boast one or more kinds.

The only real "trick" in growing zinnias is to plant the seeds after the soil is thoroughly warm.

Planting before this time does no good. In cool, damp soil the seeds rot and it's just as if you'd never planted them.

UNDISTURBED plants, grown from seeds sown where you want the flowers, will grow and bloom better than when seedlings are transplanted.

To make things easy for yourself, sow the seeds one at a time so you don't have to thin seedlings later. A few won't come up but most will.

If you are sowing giant type zinnias, plants should be grown 12 to 15 inches apart in the row and the rows made 3 feet apart.

SMALLER varieties can be sown in rows only 2 feet apart and plants allowed to grow 8 to 10 inches from one another.

Of course the really tiny zinias, like Thumbelina, fall outside these general recommendations. These midgets are often used as borders or even grown in pots.

Zinnias will thrive in any soil, but you'd be surpirsed to see how much better they produce in fairly rich soil.

They also show marked difference in growth when given plenty of water. A once-a-week soaking in dry weather pays off.

WHAT TYPE of zinnia to plant? There are so many from which to choose that you may have a hard time making up your mind.

There are giant-flowered zinnias, which include Tetra, Giant Cactus-Flowered, Zenith, Whirligig and State Fair, medium-sized flowers found in Cut and Come Again, and, a bit smaller, in the Pompons.

Midget zinnias: Thumbelina, Old Mexico and Persian Carpet.

Indoor Plants Distinct

The distinctive beauty of indoor plants blends nature with home decor, and adds a unique touch to any room — be it the living room, kitchen, family area, bedroom or bath.

Certain of the fancy-leafed plants are especially welcome as winter approaches. These include plants with variegated foliages, whose sunny leaves, sparkling with pattern and color, bring sunshine into any room.

Especially effective is the leafed charmer that can be trained on a support to showcase its refreshing beauty. The soft green leaves are splashed with yellow and the combination compliments most any indoor surroundings.

GOLD Dieffenbachia is a tall, upright-growing plant. It lights up a room with beautiful large leaves, whose color suggests chartreuse, sprinkled with ivory and edged with green. The oval leaves feature a dark

FALL SPRAYING IMPORTANT

Fall is an in-between season for California gardeners, even though it can be a beautiful time of year. Certain annuals may be still in full flower, while winter-blooming color bearers are coming on; and certain trees and shrubs are putting on an autumnal foliage show of color.

Fall is a time for a garden clean-up. Not only removing faded flowers and replacing them with new annuals, and planting bulbs, landscape shrubs and trees — but a general clean-up. A very important part of that clean-up is a garden spraying.

WHILE THE chance of warm weather still exists, so does the possibility of late garden infestations of aphids, whiteflies and leafhoppers. Such pests can cause early defoliation of some plants.

Check Roses frequently to determine any insect damage, and if necessary, spray to keep flowers and foliage presentable into late Fall. Let your nurseryman assist you by identifying the problem and suggesting any control measure to take. There are plant protection chemicals which are effective, and safe, when used according to instructions on the label.

A RECOMMENDED clean-up spray in Fall, using an oil emulsion control with lime-sulphur additives, is aimed at controlling overwintering pests and diseases. Next spring, when Peach trees leaf-out and the foliage is disfigured, this is a sign of Peach Leaf Curl, the bane of the home gardener. A Fall spraying is required now, at the recommended strength.

A second application, a dormant spraying, should be made just as the buds begin to swell, and before leaves appear. If in doubt which oil spray to use, and which proportion, let your nurseryman's advice guide you.

The garden clean-up isn't completed until dead flowers, leaves and branches are raked-up and removed. These are good locations for insect pests and diseases to spend the winter. By dispatching them from your garden to the dump, you've helped assure a lovely spring garden.

Lastly, a mulch of organic material around trees and shrubs, and in garden beds, will control weeds and help improve the soil.

Put A Cover On Your Bulb Bed

One of Spring's most appealing sights in the garden is that of bulb flowers growing through a cover of colorful annuals.

Picture the combination of golden Daffodils poking-up through a bed of blue Violas; or a mass of crimson Tulips with snowy white Alyssum at their feet. These are the things that add the finishing touches to the Spring garden.

You can plant a cover in the garden bed at the same time you plant bulbs, or if pressed for time, you can wait a few weeks or a month. The California Association of Nurserymen recommends the accompanying cover be planted before the bulbs have begun to sprout, however, so top growth won't be injured by digging.

A FLOWER that seems ideally suited to planting over a bulb bed is the Viola, previously mentioned in combination with golden Daffodils. Shopping early for Violas may yield separate colors of Violas.

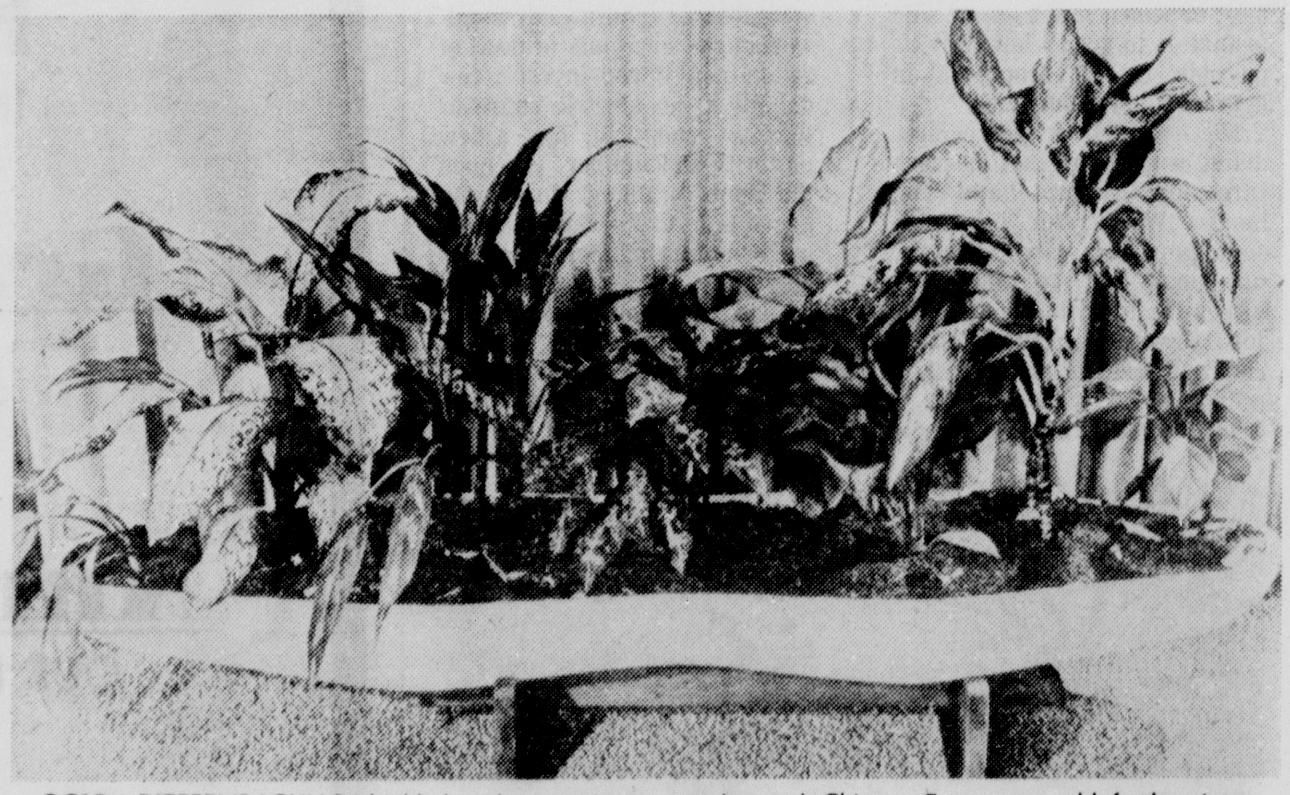
Many nurseries will have them in shades of yellow, apricot, blue, ruby and white — in addition to a mixture of colors. With such a color range, it is possible to achieve flowering accents where colors compliment each other — or fashion interesting focal points with contrasting colors.

Another nursery transplant that goes well over bulbs is the Pansy. In addition to a choice of flowering mixtures of Pansies, you may find separate colors of blue, white and yellow. These cheery annuals are a cool season delight — and will add a unique touch to a bright bulb display.

THE ALYSSUM family has many members which will enhance bulb flowers. The white Carpet of Snow is dazzling in its own right, and can be used effectively with almost any bulb. Violet-purple Royal Carpet and pink Rosie O'Day greatly increase the potential of pleasing combinations in the garden.

Try accenting Hyacinths with pink Alyssum — and the violet performers with Anemones and Ranunculus in bright colors.

Many bulb cover candidates are to be found at your nursery. It's a fun family outing to choose spring-blooming bulbs — and the flowering choices to cover the bed — which will create much beauty in the months ahead.



GOLD DIEFFENBACHIAS highlight the above planting in an attractive container and the variegated Chinese Evergreen add further interest. Indoor foliage plants can blend nature with decor.

the whole plant radiates a handsome effect.

Another variegated indoor plant is the Striped Dracaena, a modest-grower that's ideal for decorating a table or book case — in a lovely container. The semi-arching branches are long and narrow and radiate from the center of the plant. The crisp, green leaves are marked that call further attention to the structure of the plant.

WHERE space is at a minimum, the oval cream and white Peperomia is a good choice and its cousin, Variegated Pepper Face, with attractive four-inch leaves will please you. Variegated Nepthythis has an unusually-shaped leaf to start with — resembling a v-shaped, pointed cultivator tool. The varing dimension.

Nurseries have a wide selection of other brightly-patterned indoor plants to choose from. For an illustrated brochure which contains information on how to grow house plants, write "Plants Create Beauty Indoors," 1005 8th St., Sacramento, Ca. 95814. The California Association of Nurserymen will send you a free copy of the

Holly, Holly, Holly

It is possible to achieve handsome landscape effects with the individual members of the Holly family.

It's not that there are great contrasting differences between the many Holly varieties — it's just that each has a special attribute, that, perhaps, seems natural in a given landscape situation.

What is very distinguishable is that the foliage colors differ — the shape of the leaves vary with individual Hollies and the foliage textures add a desireable dimension to the landscape.

TAKE WILSON Holly as an example. It is an upright grower with large, leathery, dark green leaves, which are spine-toothed. Often found trained as a single trunk tree, or as an espalier, it can be pruned for a hedge effect, too. As a good-size landscape shrub, it excels. This versatile performer is a good Holly for warmer climes, where it takes sun or shade and produces plenty of red berries.

English Holly varieties are marked by variations in leaf shape and color. In selecting varieties it is important to note there are male and female plants — the male serve as pollenizers.

Your nurseryman can guide you in selecting the proper varieties to assure fruiting — so that you can enjoy crops of berries. There are self-fertile varieties such as San Gabriel.

The variety Boulder Creek boasts bold — very shiny — deep green foliage and is heavily branched, representative of English Holly. There are variegated English Hollies, too, and all add interest to the garden with their interesting growth habits.

POPULAR with Californians is Burford Holly. It is a Chinese Holly, and as such, has rectangular leaves that are softer green than others and the growth is more open. It needs a long, warm season to set berries. Inland, avoid planting in full sun, advises the California Association of Nurserymen.

There is a dwarf Burford Holly that is a miniature edition of its larger counterpart that is much more compact in growth. Both command attention without overpowering the landscape.

ANOTHER dwarf that has been widely planted in California is the Dwarf Chinese Holly. It produces no berries, but this slow-growing Holly is dense-branching and attractive throughout the year. It is not uncommon to see a five-year old plant achieve a height of only two feet.

Best yet, it will take more sun than you would expect, and does well in semi-shade, too. Its use in the landscape is limited only by one's imagination — in borders, to define specific garden areas, as modest accent plants, or as low-growing foundation shrubs.

When you consider there are scores of Holly varieties produced in America, it's difficult to mention the distinguishing characteristics of very many in limited space. A wise move is to visit your nearby nursery, where you can view the Holly varieties recommended for local soils and climate.

OLEANDERS are among the very best shrubs for sun-baked gardens, are available in a delicate shade of pink, red, rose, white and even yellow. They also are available pruned up in tree form.

Why Leaves Change Color In The Fall

Vivid colors of autumn leaves provide a seasonal sensation, and add glamour to the landscape before the dormant winter season.

Californians enjoy fall colors from certain trees and shrubs, but the most renowned autumnal foliage displays are to be found in the northeastern states and Blue Ridge Mountains.

In the higher elevations of the West, autumn colors are delightful, but the central and southern states usually don't share in the phenomenal display.

The development of fall color is an inherited trait. Each tree or shurb species displays its particular color. Plus, each individual plant has its own shade of that color, which is influenced by climatic and soil conditions.

JUST BEFORE the leaves drop in autumn, the nutrients they contain start to move back into the stems and roots. The green chlorophyll pigment is no longer produced, and that which is in the leaf is destroyed by light.

Most leaves contain yellow color which is hidden during the summer by the green pigment. When the chlorophyll disappears in fall, the yellow becomes visible and brightens-up the scene. If no yellow pigment is present, the leaves turn brown.

To showcase orange, red and purplish shades the leaves must produce yet another pigment — which isn't simple. The particular shade of orange, red or purple is developed by anthocyanin and is related to the acid or alkaline condition of the sap of the plant. If the sap is acid, the color will be orange or red. With nutral sap the pigment is light purple; when the sap is alkaline, a dark purple or blue color is evident.

THE AMOUNT of anthocyanic pigment produced is dependent upon the accumulation of sugars and tannins. During warm sunny weather, much sugar is manufactured in the leaves. When the autumn nights are cool, with temperatures below 45 degrees, the sugars and tannins do remain in the leaves to be converted into anthocyanins, with the resulting vivid foliage color.

If fall weather is cloudy, sugar production is reduced. When nights remain warm, sugars will move to the branches and foliage color lacks intensity.

A SAFETY TIP for operators of lawn and garden tractors is to be sure to clear all debris from the area to prevent injury to persons or damage to the machine.

Gardening Manual For Homeowner

"Gardening and Home Landscaping: A Complete Illustrated Guide" ($9.95), by Jack Kramer, a practical manual for the homeowner on planning, maintaining and beautifying the home garden and grounds, has been published by Harper & Row.

It combines and relates designing and planning with facts of plant selection, methods of planting and care — from trees and shrubs to perennials, house plants and herbs.

IT INCLUDES the latest information on patio and container gardening, greenhouses, terraces, garden furniture, rock and natural gardens, and city gardening.

A CHECKLIST FOR GARDENERS OF MARIN

Here is the Marin gardener's checklist for the coming week.

✔Cool season annuals should be planted now for a garden-full of color in the winter months: Fairy Primroses, Pansies, Violas, Iceland Poppies, Calendulas, Stocks, and Snapdragons can be set-out now.

✔Spring-flowering bulbs should be onthe top of your planting list this week. Your nursery will have dozens of choices to choose from.

✔The earliest-flowering Camellias are commencing to bloom. By proper selection of varieties, one can enjoy Camellias in bloom through Fall, Winter and Spring.

✔Don't rush on lifting Dahlias. Foliage should be allowed to ripen-off and turn yellow, or the bulbs will be robbed of energy for next year's growth.

Plants Help Decorators

Have you ever noticed how interior decorators feature growing house plants in their store and magazine displays?

The plants aren't for sale. They're just there because they make the tables and chairs and couches look their best.

A glossy, tubbed aralia set beside a chair brings out the wood and fabric tones. Peperomias and wax flowers, philodendrons and ivy, call attention to the beauty of a walnut finish. They make maple furniture sing, compliment mahogany and teak, and point up the charm of natural woods.

GREEN LEAVES trailing from a shelf "finishes" that shelf with taste; and a graceful little palm can add distinction to a room.

The relationship between furniture and plants is a happy one, and more and more homeowners are taking advantage of this fact, taking a tip from professional decorators and using house plants to enrich their own decor.

Here's all you have to do: Choose the plants that appeal to you most, put them in suitable containers in the kind of light they prefer, and keep them healthy with a few minutes care each week.

SUPPOSE for instance, you would like a tall, dramatic plant against one wall, a low, bushy one to set on a table, and a trailing vine to spill downwards from a shelf. There are dozens of plants in eachcategory at your nursery, and from them you might choose a Queensland Umbrella Tree (tall), a peperomia (low and bushy), and a grape ivy to trail down. Your nurseryman will help you choose the right containers, and you can make potting easy by bringing home a bag of specially prepared soil mixture too.

Smart Gardening

The smart gardener plans beforehand how he wants his plot to look, and where he wants his flowers and vegetables planted. Careful planning makes for prettier results, richer crops — and less work.
